PACE CAN'T LAST

LBJ's Good Time With Capitol Hill Coming To Close

WASHINGTON (AP) — The domestic tranquility of President Johnson's relations with the 89th Congress is about to be sundered by arguments over forthcoming legislation.

Under constant prodding from the President, the Senate got off to its speediest start in years. But the House hasn't been in diligent in passing bills and the Senate has about run out of retreads — measures similar to those it passed last year but on which the House didn't act.

Now comes the tough ones, bills which are certain to arouse considerably controversy. The considered judgment of Senate Democratic Leader Mike Mansfield of Montana, as expressed in an interview, is that the pace established in handling four major bills can't last.

NOT SO SPEEDILY

"We are arriving at the period when new matters have to be considered and some of them are going to be very controversial," Mansfield said. "We will work as speedily as we can, but we can't keep up the pace we have set."

The Senate has passed bills to provide aid to the Appalachian area, to combat water pollution, to appropriate funds for farm price support operations, and to implement an international coffee agreement.

Little controversy is expected next week over a House-passed bill to take the gold cover off some federal reserve bank deposits. This move to free additional gold reserves has the support of Republican leaders.

But Sen. Everett M. Dirksen of Illinois, the minority leader, has cooked up some opposition to a Johnson proposal for a constitutional amendment on presidential inability which will come up after disposal of the gold bill.

Dirksen is plugging for a less-detailed amendment than the administration proposed. He says he wants to avoid freezing into the Constitution the method for determining when a president is unable to carry out his duties and for deciding when he has recovered sufficiently to resume office.

Republicans are complaining about the form of the President's proposals for aid to education. Some of them are offering alternatives for his program for health care for the elderly financed by a payroll tax.

Reds Blamed For Rioting In Malaysia

KUALA LUMPUR, Malaysia (AP) — Communists and Indonesia were blamed for a four-hour antigovernment riot Saturday that also saw windows smashed at the U.S. Information Agency library.

Police announced the disorders were under control in this Malaysian capital. Troops and police patrolled streets. More than 100 persons were arrested, and a curfew was imposed.

The rioting began at 10 a.m. at a rally called to demand the overthrow of Prime Minister Abdul Rahman. The crowd called for release of arrested leftist Socialist Front leaders.

'MALAYSIA NO!'

A crowd of 500 marched toward Socialist Front headquarters, shouting "Malaysia no!"

Troops in battle gear and police carrying wicker shields and batons hurled tear gas into the crowds, which scurried down side streets. Other bands of about 250 demonstrators each were broken up in the downtown area.

A mob of 200 broke the plate glass windows of the U.S. library. These were believed to be from the 500 who were blocked in their march on Socialist Front headquarters.

The windows were smashed with poles and rocks. A bicycle was hurled into the building. Despite the damage, a U.S. Embassy spokesman said the library would open Monday as usual.

Witnesses said the demonstrators appeared to be well-organized and were able to reform their lines after being dispersed by tear gas. Troops finally dampened the ardor of the demonstrators.

Information Minister Senu Bin Abdul Rahman told a news conference he had no doubt Communist elements infiltrated and manipulated crowds gathered by the leftist opposition Socialist Front.

Senu said the tactics employed by the demonstrators — such as the marshaling of Socialist Front supporters from out of town and the use of women and some children in the front lines of flag-waving marchers — were "typically Communist."

Senu, crediting "intelligence reports," also linked the agitation with the landing Friday of a small Indonesian guerrilla force on the southwest coast of the Malaysian mainland. He said the landing was apparently timed to try to divert attention from the demonstrations. The landing was crushed.

Cuban Mill Hit By Exile Bombs

MIAMI, Fla. (AP) — A Cuban anti-Castro action group said that it bombed a Pinar del Rio Province sugar mill at dawn Saturday.

The Insurrectional Revolutionary Recovery Movement—MIRR—said the plane that carried out the mission "with positive results" returned to its base "somewhere in the Caribbean."

The announcement said fire bombs and explosives were dumped on the central Bahia Honda by a two-engined plane.

Orlando Bosch, Miami coordinator of the MIRR, said it was the organization's ninth air assault on Communist Cuba. The MIRR also has been active in the past in raids and infiltrations carried out by small boats.

No mention of any attack was carried by the Cuban radio.

Doing Well

Reports from Southern Methodist College at Orangeburg, S.C., are that young Amos Price of Monroe is making the grade, both academically and with his fellow students.

Recently elected student body president, he has made grades good enough to earn him a spot on the Dean's List.

Amos is the son of Mr. and Mrs. A. E. Price, 225 Pargoud Drive, and is studying for the ministry.

Greetings

Miss Janet McKaskle, route three, West Monroe, takes another step further into her teens Monday, when she becomes 15 years old.

The daughter of Mr. and Mrs. C. D. McKaskle, Janet is a freshman at West Monroe High School.

Wish her a happy birthday if you see her.

ZANZIBAR'S OKELLO

Celebration Snubs Leader Of Uprising

NAIROBI, Kenya (AP) — When Zanzibar celebrated the first anniversary of the Sultan's overthrow last month, John Okello spent the day with his child bride and a few cronies in a seedy Nairobi hotel, drinking beer and telling of his glorious past.

Okello got no invitation to attend the official ceremonies. The self-styled field marshal and leader of the revolt in January 1964 is the forgotten man of the Zanzibar revolution. He is 28 now.

"I don't know why I was not invited to the celebrations because even Europeans (whites) who didn't fight were invited," Okello sighed.

For a short while after the revolution last year, Okello was military strongman of the clove island, which has since merged with the neighboring East African nation of Tanganyika to form Tanzania.

Recalling his fleeting days in the limelight, Okello boasted of plotting the revolt and leading the initial attack on the police armory.

He marched at the head of his ragtag army of rebels, donned black battledress and a bus conductor's hat, and strutted like a would-be African Napoleon among cheering Zanzibaris outside his headquarters.

He made wild speeches over the radio threatening a terrible death to counter-revolutionaries and he claimed it was he who appointed President Abeid Karume as the island's new leader. Karume now is first vice president of Tanzania and continues as active leader of Zanzibar.

But Okello did not have the benefits of training in Peking, Moscow or Havana. Soon he was outsmarted by politicians who had been taught the skills of revolution developed elsewhere.

After a visit to nearby Tanganyika, Okello was forbidden to return to the island and went back to a life of obscurity in his native Uganda.

Viet Soldiers Desert Aides, Report Says

Tribesmen Drop Arms; U.S. Men Killed As Result

SAIGON, South Viet Nam (AP) — A company of South Vietnamese home guards deserted four U.S. military advisers and five of their own tribesmen during a midweek Viet Cong offensive, U.S. military informants reported Saturday. Three Americans and the tribesmen were killed and the other American is believed to be a prisoner.

The informants told this story:

The home guards—described as Vietnamese and mountain tribesmen inexperienced in fighting—threw down their weapons and departed from a hill fortification as the Communist guerrillas approached in the dark with loudspeakers, calling:

CONG GIMMICK

"We only want to kill the Americans. All the rest can go free if they leave their weapons."

Next morning the three Americans and the five tribesmen were found dead on the hilltop at Duc Phong, 85 miles northwest of Saigon.

The Viet Cong launched the attack before dawn Wednesday—the same day Communist terrorists blew up a U.S. enlisted men's billet at Qui Nhon and attacked in other areas of South Viet Nam. The terrorist strike at Qui Nhon in which 22 Americans are believed to have perished brought retaliatory air raids by U.S. and Vietnamese planes on North Viet Nam.

The Americans killed in the Duc Phong attack—the first major assault of the war in that area—were identified in Saigon as Capt. Carlton J. Holland of Junction City, Kan.; Sgt. Emmett J. Bryant of Greensburg, La.; and Pfc. John W. Malapelli of Burlington, Ky. The missing American was identified as Spec. 4 James H. McLean of Los Angeles.

The U.S. sources said that after the Vietnamese company—about 130 men—left the scene, the Viet pounded the fortification with recoilless rifles and mortars.

"Those few guys left up there on the top of the hill really put up a wonderful fight," said a U.S. officer who reached the area after the fight. "You could tell that from the number of spent shells lying around the gun emplacements. I guess they ran from one place to the other, firing the guns at the Viet Cong as they came up and over."

Many U.S. advisers in the region expressed shock at the desertions.

"A good unit could have held the Viet Cong off in that place," an adviser said.

But another excused the tribesmen because of their inexperience.

"This was the first big attack of its kind in that area," he said. "You could understand these guys being fearful. If they had the opportunity to get out, in a way I couldn't blame them."

In Saigon, Lt. Gen. Nguyen Khanh, commander of the South Vietnamese armed forces, told a paratroop unit the guerrilla war in the South must end this year.

Students Hit U.S. Mission In Budapest

BUDAPEST, Hungary (AP) — Nearly 1,000 Communist students attempted to storm the U.S. legation Saturday, smashing windows, shouting anti-American slogans and ripping down the U.S. seal above the entrance.

Some of the demonstrators broke into the basement and damaged a snack bar and movie theater. But they did not reach the protected third-floor apartment of Joseph Cardinal Mindszenty, who has been a refugee in the building since the collapse of the Hungarian revolution in 1956.

In Washington, the State Department called the attack "intolerable" and summoned the Hungarian charge d'affaires. A department spokesman disputed the explanation of Hungarian sources that the attack was a spontaneous act by students to protest U.S. raids on North Viet Nam.

STAGED AFFAIR

"It was clear that the demonstrators were well organized and that it was a staged affair," said press officer Marshall Wright.

In Budapest, informants said the demonstration apparently had not been authorized by Hungarian officials. They said the Hungarian Foreign Ministry had telephoned the legation to warn of the students and promised police protection for the building. However, the students arrived before police.

Elim O'Shaughnessy, charge d'affaires, called on the Hungarian foreign ministry to protest the failure of police to halt the 45-minute attack. Compensation for all damages to American property will be claimed, legation sources said.

Students staged a similar assault on the U. S. Embassy in Moscow last Tuesday.

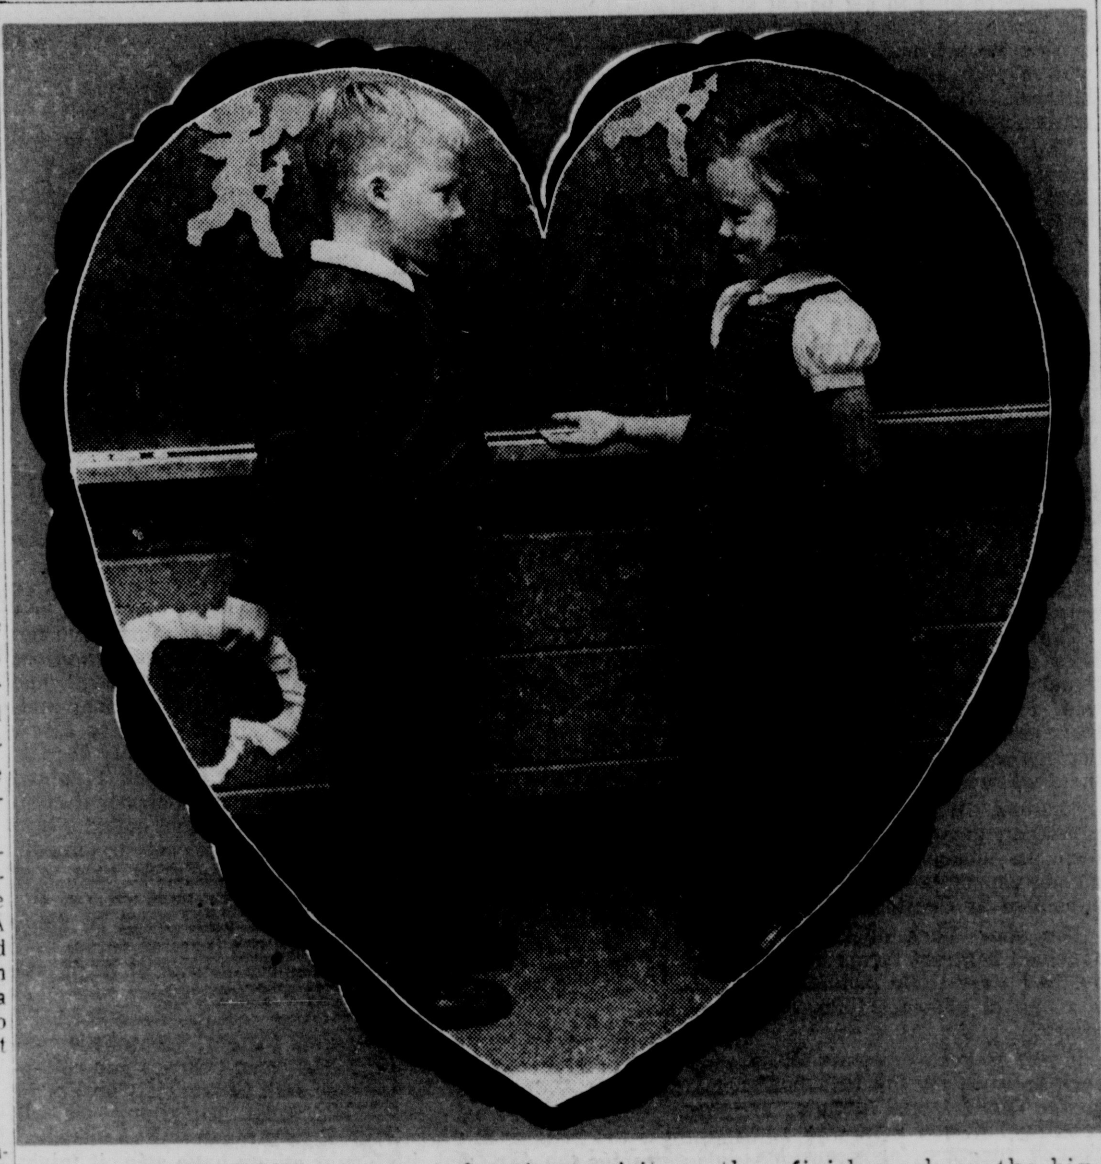
Chinese Amassing Troops At North Viet Nam Border



AS CUPID'S BOW twangs today in the Twin Cities, many youthful valentines, and some not so young, probably will be sharing the sentiments evident above on the faces of Bill Land and Diane Leach. First-graders at Monroe's Lexington School, the pair offer a classic picture of the Valentine's Day spirit, as they finish work on the big, lacy heart Bill's so coy about presenting. Young Bill is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Land Jr., 1510 Spencer, while little Diane is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. R. L. Leach, 500 Frazier. See story page 2A (Staff photo by Richard Greene)

Report Sent By Newsmen For London

LONDON (AP) — The Sunday Times reported that Red Chinese troops had been observed crossing into North Viet Nam and that big concentrations of Chinese forces are massing near the North Viet Nam-China border.

"The specter of another Korea-style struggle with Communist China suddenly appeared over Southeast Asia yesterday as reports began to come in that units of the Chinese People's Liberation Army had begun moving into the satellite state of North Viet Nam," the article said.

TWO BATTALIONS

The story reported only two battalions of troops had been sighted actually moving into North Viet Nam.

But the article said: "Reports (from Hong Kong) of U.S. air reconnaissance over South China pay particular attention to Nanning on the line to Hanoi, capital of North Viet Nam. Military rolling stock including freight trucks and troop carriages are said to be concentrated at Nanning in considerable numbers."

The article said since the Gulf of Tonkin incident six months ago Nanning had become the headquarters for a force of some 200,000 troops.

The two battalions entering North Viet Nam were said to have been seen on the highway running parallel with the Nanning-Hanoi railroad.

"Observers in Saigon, however, believe that forces in far greater strength are likely to be deployed if the Peking regime has decided to take the fatal plunge in Viet Nam," the article said.

The story continued: "These observers concede that the current outlook is strangely reminiscent of the crucial turn of events in the Korean War in October 1950, when Chinese forces crossed the parallel and went into action against the Americans, but they seriously doubt whether China is now prepared to risk a major war involving the Americans.

"The movement of troops might have only a limited objective at present — tightening Peking's control over Ho Chi Minh's domain, and warding off Moscow's efforts to influence Hanoi under cover of fraternal assistance to deal with the crisis."

The Times, in another story, quoted Chinese Communist chief Mao Tze-tung as saying China "has no intention of fighting anybody unless her own territory is attacked."

The statement was contained in an interview between Mao and American author Edgar Snow published in the Times.

Mao said the North Vietnamese "could cope with their situation."

Snow reported seeing Mao 72, in Peking's Great Hall of the People. He said he had been told by doctors that Mao had no organic troubles and suffered only normal fatigue of his age.

Snow wrote: "He asserted that China has no troops outside her own frontiers and has no intention of fighting anybody unless her own territory is attacked. He observed that the more American weapons and troops were brought into Saigon the faster the Southern Vietnamese liberation forces would become armed and educated, to win victory."

BY LOUISIANA JAYCEES

Top Young Men Of State Named

Two attorneys and a minister were named as Louisiana's three Outstanding Young Men of 1964 at the Louisiana Junior Chamber of Commerce annual state board banquet held here Saturday night at the Frances Hotel.

They are the Rev. William E. Clark, pastor of the Springhill Presbyterian Church, and Jules L. Davidson of Alexandria and Tom H. Matheny of Hammond, both attorneys.

Featured speaker at the banquet was Stan Ladley of Bartlesville, Okla., president of the U. S. Junior Chamber of Commerce.

PRAISES SELECTION

Proclaiming that young men can accomplish things, Ladley praised the selection of the outstanding young men for spotlighting of their community service.

Ladley said a worldwide fight for young men's minds is a Jaycee fight, and added "it's a fight I believe is worth making."

He urged the Jaycees to do their part in community leadership for improving local conditions.

Billy Hargiss of Monroe and his wife, Angie, received awards from state president, Bill Folse, for their service to the Louisiana Junior Chamber of Commerce organization.

Hargiss served as past state president and his wife as past state Jaynes president. Hargiss was chairman of the Miss Louisiana Pageant last year in its premier in Monroe.

Another award presented at the banquet Saturday night was the "Spoke of the Quarter" award. Roy Mason, New Orleans East chapter, received the award given quarterly to a first year Jaycee.

Earlier in the day it was announced during a business session that the new state Jaycee headquarters at Oakdale had been completed Thursday. The building was erected by the Oakdale chapter with assistance from the state organization.

The building, constructed at a cost of $45,000, was described as "magnificent" to the gathering early Saturday afternoon of about 200 Jaycees, only a portion of the approximately 600 already registered for the board meeting.

Dedication of the building will be April 4 at 3 p.m.

The state board meeting began at 1:15 p.m. Saturday at the Virginia Hotel, with 115 chapters represented in the business of the day.

The board meeting will be continued today at 8:30 and end when all business matters have been concluded.

At 10 a.m. today they will celebrate their tenth anniversary of founding in the state and will have a program entitled, "Ten Years in Review."

Among achievements of the three Outstanding Young Men cited were the following:

The Rev. Clark has received a citation from the Secretary of Army for his outstanding work and activity in the Army Reserve recruiting program. He serves as moderator for the Red River Presbytery and also is editor of the Red River Presbytery publication. His church has had a fifteen per cent increase in membership for 1964. He is a member of the Rotary Club and institutional representative for a Scout Troop.

Davidson has served on the Board of Directors of the American Red Cross in his parish for the past three years. He is presently State Judge Advocate of the Louisiana Reserve Officers Association. As Second Assistant District Attorney he handled approximately 2700 cases dealing with all areas of law, and in 1964 was elevated to the office of First Assistant District Attorney. He is a member of the Kiwanis Club, member of the executive committee of the Alexandria Bar Association and on the Board of the Catholic Columbian Association.

Matheny has delivered in excess of 40 lay speeches in Methodist Churches in Louisiana, Texas and Mississippi, and is the youngest lay leader in the Methodist Church in the United States. At present, he is serving as a member of the Board of Trustees of Centenary College in Shreveport. He teaches a class in government three times a week at one of the state colleges. He is publicity chairman of the United Givers Fund, program chairman of the Kiwanis Club and chairman of the advancement committee of the Boy Scouts District.

Turk Cabinet Steps Aside; Budget Fails

ANKARA, Turkey (AP) — The 14-month-old government of Premier Ismet Inonu resigned Saturday night over failure to pass its 1965 national budget.

Inonu, 81, who has been in power since the Turkish army yielded to civilian rule 17 months after the 1960 revolution, handed in his resignation to President Cemal Gursel shortly after the National Assembly defeated a record $1.6-billion budget by a 225-195 vote.

During an impassioned plea for his budget, Inonu said he would resign if 226 assemblymen voted against it. The vote fell one short of his figure, but the old warrior chose to resign anyway. He said he considered the rejection a nonconfidence vote.

A onetime associate of Kemal Ataturk, founder of modern Turkey, Inonu has headed three cabinets since his Republican People's party won a plurality — but not a majority — in the 1961 general election.

The Republicans have been operating as a minority government since December 1963, backed by some independent assemblymen.

Inonu came close to falling during the Cyprus crisis, when opposition assemblymen accused him of weakness in his efforts to aid the island's Turkish Cypriot population in the dispute with the Greek Cypriots.

India Clashes Begin Abating

NEW DELHI, India (AP) — Police fired on mobs in Arni, Madras state, Saturday and tense situations were reported elsewhere, but the violence that has taken nearly 60 lives in the past few days seemed to be abating.

Police and army officials claimed the situation in Madras was under control. In the city of Madras, where language riots turned into an inferno of burning and looting, the situation was reported normal.

Heavily armed police and army patrols marched through the city, however. Several clashes were reported in outlying districts, but police put down the disorders with tear gas and no additional deaths were reported.

Longshoremen Swarm To Work

NEW YORK (AP) — Thousands of longshoremen swarmed back to the piers in major ports Saturday, ending the major share of a $2 billion, 33-day strike along the Atlantic and Gulf coasts.

Other longshoremen, holding out on contract terms, still were idle in South Atlantic and West Gulf cities.

Winches hummed in the task of loading or unloading hundreds of ships to get them moving again in New York, Philadelphia, Baltimore, Boston, New Orleans and a number of other ports.

Back-to-work cities also included Portland, Maine; Providence, R.I.; and Baton Rouge, La.

The men who returned expressed pleasure at being on the job again — particularly at starting out at time and a half pay for weekend work.

Their wives were happy, too, and not only at the prospect of having paychecks come to the households again.

"They're glad to get us out of the house and from underfoot," a New York longshoreman said with a grin after his month of idleness. His fellow workers smiled and nodded.

The basic pay rate in New York under the new contract is $3.36 an hour. At time and a half, the men get $5.04 an hour, or $40.32 for an eight-hour day. Some were working more than eight hours. Wage scales in other ports are similar.

Ship owners, who had been pressing through the courts and the National Labor Relations Board, to get the ships moving were happy, also.

Alexander P. Chopin, chairman of the New York Shipping Association, representing 145 steamship and stevedoring firms, said the strike was a $2-billion blow to the nation's economy in lost business and wages.

The returning workers, members of the AFL-CIO International Longshoremens Association, broke with a tradition of their union in going back to the docks before contract agreement was reached in all ports.

Thomas W. Gleason, ILA president, gave the order to return in accepting a recommendation of a special panel appointed by President Johnson.

The New York dockers had accepted contract terms Jan. 21 but had stayed idle pending the outcome of contract talks elsewhere.

It was reunion day as well as back to work for the longshoremen. There were shouts of greeting between men who had worked together for years but hadn't seen each other for a month.

A member of Brooklyn Local 1814, the ILA's largest with 8,500 longshoremen, commented: "The men are sure darned happy to be back."

A Baltimore longshoreman said virtually the same thing: "It's really wonderful to be back to work."

In Baton Rouge, where the men were returning, a union official said: "We just want our boys to get back to work and start making some money."

12-Parish Civil Defense Test Is Scheduled Here

A twelve parish civil defense exercise will be held Tuesday, February 16, from 1 to 4:30 p.m. at the Area 4 Civil Defense Agency, 400 Stone Avenue, in Monroe.

Marshall T. Cappel, state civil defense director, who will attend the exercise as an observer, said, "The purpose of Exercise 'Foxtrot II' is to test the capability of an area of the state to function independently in the event a disaster renders major centers of the state inoperable."

He said that this will be the first area exercise in the state and will serve as a model for other area exercises in the future.

The problems facing the twelve north Louisiana parishes included in Civil Defense Area 4 will be problems attendant to an influx of refugees from target and fallout zones in other parts of the state.

Representatives of sixteen state agencies and Civil Defense personnel who are stationed in Area 4 will find themselves determining solutions to such problems as mass feeding and shelter, injuries from minor to critical, conservation of natural and manufactured resources against future need, prevention of looting and rioting, and retention of morale among both the residents of the twelve parishes and the incoming refugees.

Parishes included in Exercise "Foxtrot II" are Caldwell, East Carroll, Franklin Jackson, Lincoln, Madison, Morehouse, Ouachita, Richland, Tensas, Union, and West Carroll.

The exercise will be moderated by James B. Scruggs, Jr., Area 4 Civil Defense Representative of Monroe. He will be assisted by William H. Garton, Chief of Operations, New Orleans, and A. C. Smith, RADEF Officer, New Orleans.

Registration for the event, in which the general public will not participate, will be at 1 p.m. at the Civil Defense office in Monroe at 400 Stone Avenue. The exercise will start at 1:30 p.m. and be concluded at 4:30 p.m.

Glowing Messages Of Love Still Flow

By RICHARD TYLER
World Staff Writer

This is it — Valentine's Day—the probable high point of the year for lovers, candy manufacturers and bird-watchers.

Bird-watchers are mentioned, of course, because of an ancient belief that today's the day our feathered friends start the spring mating season.

Be that as it may, the history and histronics of the day, as applied to human-types, is something of a curiosity itself, mixing fact, semi-fact, folklore and fiction into the gay, sometimes bittersweet package we've come to know.

Along this line, one of the earliest practices was dropping the names of retiring damsels into containers on Valentine's Eve. Gentlemen, the following morning, drew the handles of their valentines for the day, and, it's said, the slips bearing the names were history's first valentine cards.

A charming story, but, needless to say, times have changed. For one thing, it's getting tougher to find retiring damsels. As often as not, it's Milady who sends the card. And what cards!

Glowing expressions of true love everlasting, what with the industrial revolution, woman's suffrage and all, mostly have given way to more current reflections. Today's card will contain snapshots or drawings of anything from Dr. Frankenstein's synthetic son to a grade school discotheque, illustrating verses about as esthetic as the chorus from "Twist and Shout."

While the wee ones are exchanging piquant little pleas to "Be My You-Know-What," more advanced swingers are notifying one another with tart tactlessness that, "You're not much in a crowd, but when we're along — You're a complete flop." Meanwhile, the connoisseur's card may whisper scandalously, "Keep this valentine strictly confidential — If my wife finds out about it, she'll kill me."

Or one of Dr. Freud's textbook cases may advise his anticipating amour she's getting, "The most fantastic, fabulous and exciting valentine you've ever received — Me." In the paradoxical jargon of today's romaticist, a trite but touching supplication like "Fly to me," becomes, "No matter how far away you may be on Valentine's Day — it isn't far enough." That is if the card doesn't give you instead a living color blow-up of Vincent Price, the "Fly" in a movie of the same name about a monster who didn't dig insecticides.

Even with that, moderns are lucky. Very early civilizations, before Valentine's Day originated, considered the stomach, as the body's digestive center, the seat of life and the emotions. Imagine receiving a stomach-shaped valentine. Many of today's valentines, far from being inspired by the stomach, may react unpleasantly on that organ.

Later on, livers became the viscera in vogue, and think how foolish minstrels must have felt belting out medieval renditions of "Liver of My Liver," and "Liveraches." Or, for that matter, "Be Still, My Foolish Liver.

Of course, the comely card is still around, if you look. Sigmund Romberg, a semi-classical composer of distinction, called a love song a caress set to music. Choice valentines, in turn, can be love songs reduced or, depending on your point of view, raised to the level of verse.

Love, the source of it all, remains a moot subject.

Mixing metaphors coined by several writers, it can be a conflict between reflexes and reflections, and, particularly on Valentine's Day, something we all must go through — like measles. Or as others have said, it might be the delusion that one woman differs from another, the triumph of imagination over intelligence, or simply woman's eternal spring and man's eternal fall.

In fact, old Plato, a sober-sided Greek who called a spade a spade before there was such a thing as a spade may have been the one to hit the analogy on the head. Though he never saw a comic valentine, that master of philosophic insight referred to love as a grave mental disease.

Judging from some of the darts being thrust home today, who's to say? Not planning to go into any detail on the type of card we personally selected, our only comment will be — "Ouch!"

In any case, hubbies, daddies and steadies who forgot that box of candy today, probably have discovered already that the fair sex sometimes isn't.

For the record, Valentine's Day takes its name from an early Christian martyr, executed on this day in the year 270 by the Roman emperor Claudius II, and later canonized. Observances commemorating the death of St. Valentine, when they began some while later, we know were of a pronounced religious flavor. The day, in its familiar form, has evolved in stages of transition so gradual that history is loathe to categorize, as best we can tell.

So, perservering readers, if even history's confused on the point, don't blame us for any exaggreations in these lines. Happy Valentine's.

ARMY'S POPULAR COURSE

CHICAGO (AP) — The U. S. Army says the most popular course of study it offers is the Officer Candidate Course for Army Reserve enlisted men.

Almost five times as many men as could be accommodated applied for the March 12 to May 28 sessions at Fort Sill, Okla. There are 105 spaces available; 567 young men applied.

2 Persons Hurt In Car Accident

Two persons were injured about 11 p.m. in West Monroe last night when their foreign auto went out of control, left the road and rolled over about six miles out on Arkansas Road.

DeLois Stewart, 18, and Ronnie Stewart, 19, both of Rt. 4, Box 462-A in West Monroe, were rushed to Glenwood Hospital by Kilpatrick ambulance, where they were awaiting doctor's examination last night. Both sustained bruises and abrasions but apparently escaped serious injury.

According to the driver, Ronnie Stewart, he lost control of the car as it veered from the road; and when he tried to fight it back with the steering wheel, it rolled and hit the ditch.

Damage to the auto, a foreign convertible, was undetermined, but witnesses said damage was considerable.

Damages Minor In Swartz Fire

Sparks from a stove started a house fire near Swartz Saturday afternoon, but firemen on the parish truck reached the scene in time to prevent all but minor damages.

Firemen said the residence of Kathryn Buchanan, off McGowan Road near Swartz, was locked when they arrived and had to be entered by force. No one was home at the time, but a youngster passing by saw smoke curling from the house and ran to get help.

Fred McMullen, who directed the fire crew, said the fire apparently started from sparks from the wood stove in the front room of the house.

West Monroyan Heads Louisiana Alumni Council

Roland Carter of West Monroe has been elected president of the Louisiana Alumni Council, an organization which represents about 100,000 graduates and former students of state colleges in Louisiana.

Carter, a 1954 graduate of Northeast Louisiana State College here, is a past delegate to the LAC.

He has long been active in alumni work at NLSC, and was president of the Northeast Louisiana State College Alumni Association during 1959-60 and 1960-61.

Since 1961, he has been a member of the alumni board of directors at Northeast.

Carter is also post commander of the American Legion in West Monroe; a member of the board of directors of the West Monroe Boys Club; a former board member of the Northeast Louisiana Shrine Club, a member of the West Monroe Optimist Club; a member of Memorial Presbyterian Church in West Monroe, and is a Mason and a Shriner. He is married and has two sons.

Miss Lynn Garrett, editor of alumni publications at Northeast State College, was elected secretary of the LAC. Last year, she was publicity director for the group. A graduate of Louisiana State University, she is a member of Theta Sigma Phi, national honorary fraternity for women in journalism, and is a Methodist.

The LAC was organized in 1962, to promote higher education throughout the State. Alumni officials from seven institutions compose the Council.

These seven are Louisiana Tech, McNeese State College, Nicholls State College, Northeast Louisiana State College, Northwestern State College, Southeastern Louisiana College and the University of Southwestern Louisiana.

Fox McKeithen Runs Stop Signs In Baton Rouge

BATON ROUGE (AP) — Police said Saturday Walter Fox McKeithen, 18-year-old son of Louisiana's governor, was issued two traffic tickets for running a red light and a stop sign.

Officers said they spotted young McKeithen about 8 a.m. as he ran through a light at East Polk and Texas streets and followed his vehicle nine blocks.

They said they stopped the vehicle after McKeithen ran a stop sign at East Washington St. and the expressway.

The governor's 21-year-old nephew, James McKeithen, was in a hospital being treated for injuries received in a brawl at a liquor store, police reported.

His injuries were reported not serious.

There were no arrests in the incident. Officers said James McKeithen and several companions became involved in a fight with a group of youths who had been attending a bachelor party.

Poverty Funds For Claiborne Parish Reported

HOMER (Special) — Claiborne parish has been allocated $35,339.40 for use in the community action phase of the anti-poverty program this fiscal year. The program at the parish level organized under the community action section could include job training, vocational rehabilitation, and other special education programs to meet community needs.

Camp Baker, state O.E.O. director, said, "In some instances the allocation for each parish might be increased 50 per cent if justified." Funds will be available to a coordinated community action program authorized under Title 11 of the economic opportunity act of 1964.

Baker said, "Cities and parishes from every section of the state have expressed an interest in the program. Responsible leaders in these areas have come forth to work giving hope to the poor and encouragement to the businessmen."

A department of the federal government has rated each parish in incidence of poverty, Claiborne was rated at 0.82 per cent. Other north Louisiana parishes were rated and amounts slated. In comparison to Claiborne, Webster has been allocated $55,687, with rating at 1.29 per cent.

AIR CONDITION THE MESSAGE

TAMPA, Fla. (AP) — Farm Editor Lyle Van Bussum of the Tampa Tribune says he recently received a note from a farmer friend telling him about a problem faced by the board of church deacons of which he is a member.

"Members are split," says Van Bussum, "over whether to air condition the church or hire a new pastor who preaches less fire and brimstone."

German Officials Check Egyptian Escape Account

KARLSRUHE, Germany (AP) — The federal prosecutor's office says it is looking into the story of a man claiming to be an Egyptian agent who contends he narrowly escaped death at the hands of two Israelis he was commissioned to assassinate.

Detectives are helping investigate, a spokesman for the federal prosecutor said Saturday.

Reliable police informants gave this account of what is supposed to have happened early Thursday on a remote country road near the border between East and West Germany in the vicinity of Hof.

A North African claiming to be an Egyptian agent, asked police for help, declaring he narrowly missed being knifed by two Israelis he described as members of the Israeli mission in Bern, Switzerland.

His burned car, bearing Swiss license plates, was discovered later by investigators but no trace has been turned up of the two men.

Tech Senior Will Deliver Paper Monday

RUSTON (Special) — James R. Herrington of Shreveport, a senior at Louisiana Tech, Monday will present a paper in New Orleans authored by him and by W. F. Brickell and Dr. John B. Sardisco, chemists at the United Gas Research Laboratory in Shreveport.

The paper, resulting from research performed by the trio last summer, will be given at a meeting of the Louisiana Society for Electron Microscopy at the Royal Orleans Hotel. The title of the study is "Preferred Orientation of Kansite (Fe9S8) on Single Iron Crystal Faces."

Herrington is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Felix R. Herrington of 2910 Milton St., Shreveport. As a sophomore majoring in mathematics and temporarily employed by the Tech computing center, he became interested in X-ray crystallography research being conducted by Dr. W. H. Bernard, assistant professor of physics at the college here.

In his junior year, Herrington was awarded an undergraduate research grant by the Louisiana Heart Assn. to program Tech's IBM 1620 digital computer to perform certain complicated crystallographic calculations. Through that interest he was employed by the United Gas Research Laboratory in Shreveport to instruct some of the company's personnel and to assist in research projects. During his junior year also he was co-author with S. S. Kilgore, associate professor of zoology at Tech, of a paper titled "A Method of Assigning Relative Age to Gene Pools at the Subspecies Level."

Presently, as a senior, Herrington is working on a X-ray investigation of the molecular structure of azoxybenzene and helping to train other undergraduate students in crystallography. In addition, he is doing work in statistics with Dr. Selma H. Patton, associate professor of chemistry at Tech, in the area of mental retardation in children.

ACTORS WERE HIDING

LUSAKA, Zambia (Ap)—Few of the Africans at Zonwe Village saw a Zambia government information film when a cinema van visited the Fort Jameson area.

The reason? The villagers, to whom cinema still has a touch of witchcraft, spent most of the filmtime behind the screen — trying to meet the people they saw on it.

Even explanations from the projector operator failed to remove their doubts that his "friends" were being standoffish.

Ark-La-Miss Briefs

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Defense Department Saturday transferred a Louisiana man's name to the category of missing in the dynamiting of the U.S. military billets at Qui Nhon.

The Pentagon added to the current list of missing the name of Spec. 4 Robert L. Simon, whose wife is Mrs. Lillian S. Simon of Hineston, La.

2 Die In Crash

LAFAYETTE, La. (AP) — A two-car, head-on collision near here Saturday killed two Navy men and critically injured two other persons.

Killed were Seaman Elwin B. Lejeune Jr., 18, of St. Bernard, La., stationed at the Corpus Christi, Tex., Navy base; and Miguel A. Romero, about 21, of Brooklyn, N.Y. also stationed at Corpus Christi and believed a seaman.

Lejeune and Romero were in a car driven by Seaman Charles Willman, 18, of St. Louis, Mo., stationed at Corpus Christi. He was critically injured.

The driver of the other car, James D. Bookout, 33, of near Lafayette, was critically hurt. He was alone, and pinned in the vehicle about half an hour.

Snow Reported

BATON ROUGE (AP) — The Weather Bureau said Saturday some parts of Baton Rouge reported light sleet and snow despite 43-degree temperatures.

A Weather Bureau spokesman said unusual atmospheric conditions allowed precipitation in cold air several hundred feet high to freeze what normally would have been rain.

The sleet and snow melted as it hit the ground.

Bases Get Funds

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Sen. Russell B. Long, D-La., said today military construction requests for three Louisiana bases "serve to point up the permanent status of these installations."

Long referred to Barksdale and England Air Force Bases and Fort Polk.

The budget breakdown filed with Congress earlier this week for military construction listed a total of $6,009,000 for the three bases, Long said.

Letter Carrying Popular Subject For This Couple

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — A popular mealtime subject at the Clark Fletcher home is mail carriers and their problems.

Fletcher is a carrier and so is his 24-year-old wife, Janice.

"I have a lot more in common with my husband than many wives," the red-haired mother of two children remarks. "We can compare notes and talk about the business."

A former bank teller and office worker, Janice decided on a government job for security. In October 1963 she began toting around a mail bag weighing 30 to 35 pounds.

One of the annoyances to a woman carrier, she said, is wolf whistles.

"I don't mind the whistles," she said. "I usually consider the source and just go on about my business."

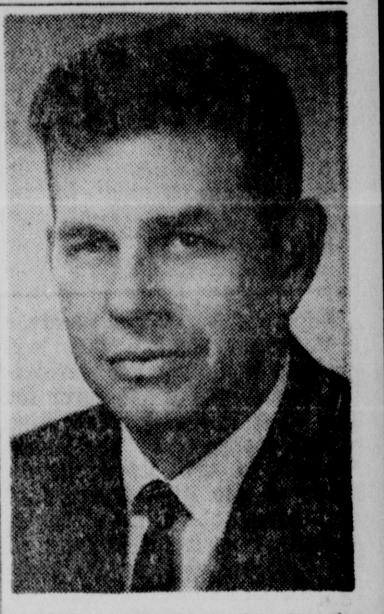
The wisecracks are getting fewer, but some people still refer to her as Aunt Sam.

She likes being outdoors and considers walking good exercise.

"I don't have a weight problem," she said. "Although, just like my husband, I eat more now, I walk it off. Right now I have on three pairs of slacks to keep me warm. I guess that makes me look a little bigger."

She has a locker at the Westport station and has been accepted as a full-fledged postal carrier.

There has been one change, though. The postmen say the story-telling sessions seem to be limited to Janice's day off.



HARRY ADDISON, who for the past several years has been identified with the savings and loan business, is now associated with People's Homestead and Savings Association. Prior to entering this field, he had wide experience in real estate sales and appraisals. He has just completed a course in real estate appraisal at Northeast Louisiana State College under the auspices of the Society of Real Estate Appraisal, an organization for which he currently serves as President in this area. Addison was born in Mansfield but his family moved shortly thereafter to Swartz where he received his elementary education. He graduated from Ouachita Parish High School and attended Northeast Louisiana State College. He resides at 2024 Valencia in Monroe with his wife, the former Lillian Coates of Swartz and their two daughters, 18 and 15 and one son, age 5. Gugmund Vigtel has received a Valentine package that will be both gratifying and perplexing. Mr. Vigtel is the juror for The First Regional competitive exhibit sponsored by The Masur Museum of Art. Presently director of the High Museum of Art, Atlanta, Ga. Mr. Vigtel served as assistant director of the Corcoran Gallery Washington, D. C. for seven years. A native of Norway, Mr. Vigtel is one of the outstanding jurors of competitive art shows in the nation. The package now in his hands contains slides entered by artists from Ark., La. and Miss. The response to the competition was beyond expectation. Publicity for the show brought attention to our Museum and city throughout the region. From paintings well over the hundred mark only 50 will be selected to be hung in the museum and from those Mr. Vigtel will have the monumental job of choosing the winners. From what I've heard, there are some marvelous works entered by some of the regions most accomplished artists. There is a representation of all styles of painting and all the artists have an equal chance at being winners.

For those who are further interested in what determines a winner in a competitive show, there are some excellent books at the museum which reproduce the prize winning paintings and statements concerning the choice.

AUXILIARY MEMOS

Hostesses this week at the Masur Museum of Art, 1400 S. Grand between the viewing hours of 2 to 5 daily except Monday will be Sunday, Feb. 14, Mrs. W. B. Inabnet and Mrs. Aaron Parker, Monday Feb. 15 closed; Tuesday, Feb. 16, Mrs. David Masur and Mrs. Frank Bonner; Wednesday, Feb. 17, Mrs. Morris Blumenthal and Mrs. Phil Lawrence, Thursday, Feb. 18, Mrs. Fred Mitchell, Mrs. T. Arthur Grant and Mrs. Jack Masur; Friday, Feb. 19, Mrs. Robert Schwartz, Mrs. James Geisler, and Mrs. Earl Grasser. Saturday, Feb. 20, Mrs. Saye Graham.

ART NEWS HERE AND THERE

HERE: And now the children! Without a doubt the current exhibit at The Masur Museum is by any standard, colorful, inspirational and delightful. All the work has been done by the children of area grammar and Jr. High schools. Some are the works of individual students and others are ambitious projects that are the result of an entire class effort. One gallery displays work from various parts of the world and the U.S. in a unique effort to pictorially describe the familiar things seen by the young artist in their area.

Some exhibits we view may leave us paralyzed with awe, but this show is so exciting you won't be able to wait to get home to see what your child can do. As you tour the various galleries you will find not only fine paintings and drawings but bits and pieces of yarn, construction paper, pebbles and ribbons and cloth and tree bark and coal and felt and glass and tile and even a white nylon stocking and a hanger transformed into a tangible something the children believed or or felt or dreamed. Very young children always convey such a sense of happiness in the expression they draw on a figures face, a reaction to the joyous world they live in, I suppose. Burlap is the background for several works. One, a scene of a landscape typical of Holland, has used felt for the scenery and the little dutch boys and girls, this is the product of the 6th grade at Minnie Ruffin school. Another large very fine work is "The Twelve Days of Christmas" from the Sherrouse school. A huge piece of green felt has been used to tell the story complete with partridge, pear tree, geese, golden rings and the various other components of the song, cut from colorful felt and lavishly decorated. Still life scenes done on canvas by some of the children at Lexington school greet you as you enter the museum. Work from Lee Jr. High features two nice portraits as well as a geometric design done with varied color string. Lakeshore has contributed some clever pictures, one from the imagainative mind of a third grader, depicts the Ouachita Band as undoubtly the happiest group of junior musicians you've ever seen. Sherrouse school has some attractive ceramics on display. Most of the paintings did not give the childs name so in fairness to all the talented creative young people, I will forgo mentioning any names in connection with the show. Your child will recognize his own work I'm sure.

The patter of little sneaker clad footsteps have been heard echoing through The Masur Museum of Art this week as children from our area schools have made field trips to see the Youth Art Exhibit. Having four small children of my own, I'm sufficiently equipped with aspriins, tranquilizers, ear plugs and a loud voice, so I volunteered to greet two fourth grade classes one day and four third grades the next, (about 150 children in all). With mixed emotions I report that they were all so orderly I needed none of my clever equipment (and I'd worked so hard on perfecting a king - size pogo stick that could vault me to the archeological exhibit on the balcony in one valiant leap, in case of necessity) I will admit I did have some rather anxious moments when I heard wafting through the air vague murmerings from one of the galleries concerning a trap door. Like "Alfie found it." "Lets put Alfie in the trap door". Within seconds I found myself before the great mysterious "discovery," a small door concealed as part of the wall that opened into a very ordinary storage closet. But you must remember the museum has a storybook castle like appearance, the skies were very dark and in the distance you could hear the rumble of thunder, and putting. Alfie in the closet was rather tempting since he seemed more interested in buzzers, light switches and trap doors than art.

As the children filed out of the museum they were touchingly sincere in saying how much they enjoyed the visit. One little girl brought tears to my eyes as she looked up at me and said "Thank you so much, Mrs. Bank, for showing me all your lovely paintings" I made a swift recovery as I saw Alfie approaching with something on his mind, "I'm going to be an artist when I grow up, Mrs. Bank" "Architecture, Alfie", I said, "try architecture!"

For the teachers and the parents who bring the children and the hostesses who greet them I'd like to pass along one of my mothers favorite quotations as a sort of a Valentine from me: "He who gives a child a treat, makes joybells ring on heavens street." (Author unknown).

Churchill Grave Shows Flowers From Far Lands

BLADON, England (AP) — A carpet of fresh flowers, their mingled scents piercing the cold winter air, covers Sir Winston Churchill's grave — just as they have every day since he was buried in St. Martin's churchyard two weeks ago.

One bunch came from a former Dutch resistance fighter and his wife.

The card gave no names. It simply said: "A small token of our tremendous admiration and sorrow at your departure. From a couple whom your voice inspired."

A bouquet of delicate light blue flowers was flown from a garden in Greece; a freshly plucked bunch of red poppies came from a field in France; and a score of wreaths came from men and women all over Britain who have filed past the grave.

It was an ordinary sort of Saturday in Bladon — population 413. Two men and three women were standing by the grave, looking at the flowers. Beside them stood a helmeted traffic policeman.

"It's like this all the week long," he said. "It's a steady trickle. Always there is someone standing here. But weekends it's a crowd. Last Sunday people waited three hours to get in. I reckon about 250,000 have already visited the churchyard."

Will the crowds change this sleepy village?

Slight changes already are visible — the traffic cop, for instance. And bulldozers are moving in on a large meadow at one end of the village to turn it into a parking lot.

"During the weekend traffic builds up and at midday there are a thousand cars an hour on the road from Oxford to Bladon," the policeman said.

In Oxford, seven miles away, tourist bureaus used to organize bus tours to Blenheim Palace, the huge home of the Duke of Marlborough, Churchill's birthplace. Now they also include nearby Bladon.

On Bladon's main street stands a pub called the Lamb. It is hundreds of years old — the rings on its whitewashed stone walls prove that customers used to tie up their horses outside. Now tourist buses from all over England park in the back yard.

The pub has been in Louise Baldwin's family for 83 years.

"Father and Granddad and his Dad before him have pulled pints here." she said, Pulling a pint is filling a glass from a beer tap.

"But we have never brewed a cup of tea. Now we also make tea for tourists who come by bus and don't want anything else. We can't turn them down. There is nowhere else to go and it's good for trade."

That it is. And a second gasoline station is being built and the grocer sells picture postcards of St. Martin's church, and Churchill.

Building Permits Light For Week; Total $135,629

Unusually wet weather caused a decline in building permit activity in Monroe for the week ending Feb. 12, according to Dale B. Martha, coordinator for the Building Inspector's Office.

Martha reported that the largest permit last week was issued to the Ouachita Parish School Board for conversion of a gymnasium into a school board office at 100 Bry. This alteration of a two-story brick building will involve some $116,979.

In all, five permits were issued amounting to a total of $135,629.

The permits were obtained by E. S. Bolton, enclosure of one-story frame building at 311 Cedar, $100; C. B. Whittington, addition of one - story frame building for residence at 3104 Lee Ave., $300; Alvin W. Leach, addition of one-story frame building at residence at 1302 S. Ninth, $250; and Jack Millette, erection of one-story brick veneer building at 3704 Gouville Drive, $18,000.

COINS AND COLLECTORS

Ancient Coins Status Symbol

By JOHN BLUCK

Ancient coins have been collected for centuries, but they are comparatively unknown to the modern generation of collectors.

During the Renaissance it was fashionable to collect ancient art objects, particularly classical Greek artifacts, and no man of wealth could lay claim to being truly cultured and abreast of the times if he did not own a cabinet of ancient coins or medals. Fortunately for the modern collector, many of these collections numbered thousands of coins and they have been preserved.

Through the centuries ancients lost their appeal for all but a few devoted collectors, and more contemporary coins came into prominence. Today it is unusual to find an American collector who owns one coin which could be considered ancient. The great majority of today's collectors have never seen an ancient coin and few who have can honestly say they are interested in such coins or have any desire to collect them.

This is unfortunate, and partly due to the small number of dealers who know ancients, promote them and advertise them aggressively. Ancient coins have a fascination which can not be claimed for any other type of numismatic material. Many of the coins, particularly the Greek, are works of art equal to anything to be found in the great museums. Seldom has Greek coin design and workmanship been equaled by artists in any medium, including the masterworks of painters. Few of us can afford to collect Greek sculpture but for a modest outlay of cash for ancients we can own a few choice pieces of Greek art.

Ancient coins are tremendously effective teaching aids in history, geography and economics courses. A few high school and college instructors use coins effectively in their lectures, but with the decline in emphasis on ancient history, Latin and Greek at the high school and college levels there are few educators today who appreciate the importance of ancient coins as tools of instruction and research.

Coins of the Roman Republic and the Empire are of particular value in illustrating the history of ancient Rome. It is possible to assemble a complete collection of portraits of all the Roman emperors from the time of Augustus in the first century B. C. to the fall of the empire under Romulus in the fifth century A. D. Ancient Roman coins are relatively easy to obtain with portraits of such historical figures as Marc Antony, Cleopatra VII (the girl friend of Caesar, Augustus and Antony) and the wives, mothers, fathers, brothers, sisters, uncles and other relatives of many emperors.

History comes alive on Roman coins. Some were struck to commemorate victories of the legions in battles which changed the course of history. Others commemorate the relief of famines, erection of temples and monuments, public buildings and even the Colosseum. Others memorialize the deification of a departed emperor by the Senate and Roman people. Still others, because they reproduce long since destroyed monuments, buildings, statues or works of art, make it possible for archaeologists and historians to identify or locate ruins left in the wake of invading Huns, Vandals or Goths.

Collectors who beam with pride when they show their "rare" United States coins which may have cost a sizable sum can collect for a fraction of the cost ancient coins which put them to shame for rarity. A rare decadrachm of Syracuse (often called the most beautiful coin ever struck and one of the world's great works of art) can be obtained for less than the cost of many 20th century American coins.

While modern collectors strive to assemble a series of identical coins, the ancient collector is positive he can never obtain two identical specimens of the same coin at any price. Each ancient is different because of the way it was made. And ancients were struck in such tremendous numbers over a period of more than 1000 years in hundreds of mints that it is impossible for a collector to obtain representative specimens of all of them. That is one reason ancients are still modestly priced even though they are becoming more popular with collectors and prices are rising steadily.

A good indication of the popularity of ancients among collectors is the membership in some of the specialized coin organizations and societies. The American Numismatic Assn. caters to a cross section of collectors. Memberships now being issued are numbered in the 54,000 range, with the rolls containing the names of about 28,000 actual members. The American Numismatic Society which confines its membership to persons interested mainly in ancient and medieval coins has about 1400 members. The Ancient Coin Club of America which attracts only collectors of ancient coins has a membership of less than 600.

No matter what the collector's interest may be, he is missing an enjoyable experience if he does not have a few ancients. There are many reasons other than the ones mentioned here why each collector's cabinet should contain a few ancients. Lack of knowledge about them has barred many collectors from this interesting field. For that reason, this discussion will be continued next week, touching on some of the basic information any beginner in ancients will need.

Young Churchill's Comments On Africa

FIRST JOURNEY. By Winston S. Churchill. Random. $4.95.

Churchill is a journalist, like his famous grandfather Sir Winston in his early days. He is quite young — 22 when this journey was made — and he does not claim to make any authoritative pronouncements on political matters.

But he does offer some quite opinionated observations and impressions, in the form of capsule commentaries on what he saw and heard.

It is a story of a trip of 20,000 miles in a single-engine plane through two score nations on the African continent, in the company of a college friend, a member of Germany's von Krupp family.

American readers will have a feeling that Churchil's viewpoint has a distinctly British coloration. He bridles at the United Nations effort in the Congo, which he considers a result of a mistaken American policy.

There are passages which give a very personal interpretation of such things as the South African racial dilemma and the primitive nature of Dr. Albert Schweitzer's hospital at Lambarene.

There also are some illuminating notes on the differences in the very atmosphere of African nations which have been colonies of English, French, Belgians and Portuguese.

Of course there were times during this journey when the author's celebrated name opened doors that would have been closed to obscure traveilers.

Churchill's account is no pretentious study, but it is an interesting story of a young man's adventure.

Novel On Crusades Excellent

It is a story about the First Crusade, at the end of the 11th Century.

There have been many dry, footnoted studies in this field. Duggan's fiction is not dry, because as a novelist he is interested in people — mortally vulnerable, bleeding, aspiring and perspiring people in this flesh.

He has centered his story around a minor Frankish-Italian count who joined the Crusade not from firm religious conviction, but in a desire for power. This man was a giant, a fighter of unfailing courage in hand-to-hand combat, a wily strategist and technician.

Bohemond is a figure who just has to rise to the top in a leaderless army of confused pilgrims; a canny besieger of Antioch (which he wanted for his own), a perceptive manager who understood Greek teachery as well as the ludicrous failings of the pilgrimage's bickering nobility.

It is a story of swords, horses, stormed ramparts and plunder, of bribes and treachery, brutality and famine, hairbreadth victories in battle.

Some readers of neurotic modern fiction may find the going too involved for their entertainment. But this book is more than entertainment. It is a crisply told revelation of the days when men were warriors, hope - seekers, crude realists and stubborn individualists. Duggan goes beyond the poetic level of the Homeric saga into bravery and personal integthe realm of an ancestral rity.

GUIDE TO GOOD READING

New Books Are Arriving Daily

By FRANCES FLANDERS,
Ouachita Parish Librarian

New books are arriving at the Library every day and are being cataloged and processed so that they can reach the public as soon as possible. Many of our books are ordered before publication date and we have them ready for you by the time that they are released by the publishers. The advantage of this was brought home to us last Monday, when a very popular program director on T.V. reviewed Bill Sands "My Shadow ran Fast." We had the book in, it had been cataloged and was at that moment being processed. People called all afternoon about it, not only did they call the Main Library, but each of the branches. Their names were placed on the list and each one of them will receive the book eventually.

There are a number of new books available this week. Readers who enjoy the novels of Marquand or Auchincloss should read "The Gloucester Branch" by John Leggett. It is concerned with the mores and manners of the business world of Boston and of the upper middle class Samuel Fayles. It is a polished piece of work and is certain to be popular. "Love Lies Bleeding" by Peter Viertel is one of the best stories about bullfighting to appear in years. It is a bright, sad book and gives an excellent picture of the daily life of a Bullfighter. "High Citadel" by Desmond Bagley is a story of high adventure in the Andes Mountains and will be eagerly read by men. An interesting narrative of the Gold Rush to California is "Gold In California" by Todhunter Ballard. It is the account of the adventures of a group of people from the same town in Ohio, who banded together to make the trip and who lived in the same community after they arrived. The author gives many details of the mining operation and paints a very good picture of the period.

There is a new mystery "The Girl Nobody Knows" by Mark McShane and a new Western story, "The Bleeding Land" by Giles A. Lutz.

A very useful new book in the religious section is "Hymns Today And Tomorrow" written by Erik Routley. There are a number of new books in the Social Science category. "The New Improved American" by Bernard Ashbell is a book which takes a hard look at the four industries most affected by automotation. They are coal-mining, railroads, factories and agriculture. Quite the reverse from what is commonly supposed, automation has expanded the job potential in the first three industries, but there are so many people whose job skills and education have not prepared them to hold these jobs. This is a most significant book and one which explain the situation very well. "Mississippi: The Closed Society" by James Wesley Silver is a book which may make you mad, but it is well to know what people in other parts of the country think about the South. "The Story of The Peace Corps" by George Sullivan is a very complete summary of the work that the Peace Corps is doing in all parts of the World. "The World. "The Relevance of Edmund Burke" is a collection of the writings and speeches of the great Englishman, Edmund Burke, edited by Peter J. Stanlis. "What Every Woman Doesn't Know" is a very good book on personal finances written by Gustave Simons. "Children for Adoption" by Pearl Buck is a critical work dealing with the adoption situation in this country.

"The World of Dogs" by Josephine Z. Rine is a very fine book dealing with dogs of all breeds. It is beautifully illustrated and should interest many readers. New cookbooks are always in demand and the latest one is "The White House Cookbook" by Janet Halliday Ervin. This book contains much information about entertaining on a grand scale as well as recipees. Bonnie Prudden is considered an authority in the field of physical fitness. Her latest book is "How to keep your child Fit From Birth to Six." It should be read by all young mothers. Another book of interest to homemakers is "Introduction to Home Furnishings" by Dorothy Stepat De Van. It contains excellent ideas for home decorating and should be most valuable.

There are a number of interesting biographies available this week Richard O'Conner has done a fine biography of "Jack London" which will be valuable for students. "Queen of The Plaza" by Noel Bertram Gerson is a biography of the colorful figure, was well - known in New York and New Orleans. "A Adah Isaacs Menken, who Gentleman of Broadway" by Edwin P. Hoyt is a colorful account of the life of Damon Runyan. "Wise Men Fish Here" by William G. Rogers is the story of Frances Steloff and the Gotham Book Mart in New York, which she founded and operates. Miss Steloff and her bookstore have had an important affect on the literary life of our century. Elizabeth Longford is the author of a new Biography of Queen Victoria", which many readers will want to read. "Grace to A Witty Sinner" by Edward Le Comte is a very fine biography of John Donne, the English Clergyman and poet. Warren W. Hassler is the author of "Commanders of The Army Of the Patomac", a welcome addition to the American history section. There is always interest in new additions to the Genealogy Collection.

Reporting In Old Chicago Was Said Wild

THE MADHOUSE ON MADISON STREET. By George Murray. Follett. $5.95.

Students of the American scene long have recognized that in the earlier years of this century one of journalism's most feverish and flamboyant sectors was in Chicago.

Murray's book is a detailed, anecdotal history of one of the most exciting factors of that quixotic era. Basically it is the story of the Chicago American, founded by the late William Randolph Hearst in 1900. It also includes the American's morning counterpart, which operated under various names and through mergers finally was rejoined with the American. (The Hearst organization bowed out of Chicago in 1956 by selling the American to the Tribune.)

In the calmer perspective of 1965 we would use the word "sensationalism" to describe those early days in Chicago. The city was noted for its politics, crime, civic corruption, gangsterism. Most of its newspapers — including Hearst's — were out to grab readers with shock tactics. Reporters and editors used every resource including trickery, to outwit each other for scoops.

Diary Before Dying

THE KEY TO MY PRISON. By Harris Downey. Delacorte. $3.95.

In subject, treatment and style, Downey's novel is a psychologically macabre and lyrically eerie story.

It is presented as the journal of a young woman, Delia Wright, whose mind wavers between sanity and insanity. She has decided to take her own life, but delays the act for months while she records her thoughts.

Delia had grown up in a small town, her adolescent years disturbed by the long illness and death of her pitiful mother. This is the third time Delia has intended suicide.

The first occasion was when the object of her schoolgirl love dismissed her with the remark, "You just don't appeal to me, Delia." The second was when an older woman, who had taken her in as a companion and prodigy, broke up their relationship.

The crisis came in Delia's sordid affair with a wardering laborer, Hoagie, a purely physical attraction, which she could not halt. Then Hoagie had deserted her for a local waitress, and the pair had left town together.

The journal is written in a remarkable style, full of poetic cadences and imagery, as Delia alternately spins out her fears and delusions in her "dungeon of creep-toads and despair," or rambles off into aphorisms and word-smoke. In her more rational moments, Delia knows that her journal is a self-justification — "Maybe it is only myself I attempt to explain to."

Would Delia have possessed the articulate intellect to create such a subtle, lyrically composed journal? Probably not. But if the reader accepts this device of literary style, the effect is striking. Few novels have such a haunting, insinuating, literary virtuosity.

DEER USUALLY DON'T WANDER

OWEGO, N.Y. (AP) — The spikehorn deer Bob J. Velie shot near Owego had been tagged as a fawn nine months earlier 58 miles away, which convervationists say is more than twice as far as deer normally travel in a year.

Hunters are willing to bet that a comely doe lured the young buck from its Catskill home.

Game experts say most deer in this area travel only a few miles — Except when leaving mountain summer browsing grounds for sheltered winter refuges.

Arrest Clears Up Auto Theft, Burglary Here

Monroe police said that the arrest Saturday of a 15-year old juvenile cleared an auto theft and house burglary here reported on Feb. 9.

The 1960 model sedan was reported stolen from the driveway of the owner, Julie Pitts, of 104 Sycamore in Monroe, last Tuesday. The residence at the same address was entered at the same time, and about $26 was reported taken from a purse on the dining room table.

Police said the auto was found abandoned in Tallulah, La., and had apparently been driven to Mississippi and back before it broke down.

The juvenile has been placed in the detention home and will be tried in juvenile court, officials said.

A theft of a raincoat containing several packages of cigarettes and a book of personalized checks was reported to Monroe police shortly after noon Saturday. The owner, identified as Mrs. Toby Smith, 1000 North McGuire, told officers the coat was taken sometimes between Thursday afternoon and Saturday while it was hanging in the garage of her residence. The personalized checks were on a local bank. Police are investigating.

In other action Saturday, Monroe officials reported the arrest of Robert L. Caldwell, 46, of 1502 South 7th St., Monroe, on charges of operating a motor vehicle while under the influences of intoxicating beverages. Bond was set at $500.

Arnell Jackson, 22, of 4010 Pippin St., Monroe, was charged with aggravated battery and placed under $500 bond.

Roy Lee Padio, 22, 118 DeSiard, was picked up by Monroe police on a warrant for theft.

Isaac Walker, 26, 2413 Grammont St., was arrested on three charges by Monroe police, including improper muffler and warrants for reckless driving and improper driver's license.

Local police officers reported a relatively quiet day for Twin City traffic Saturday. In Monroe, four minor accidents were invesitaged, and officers issued a traffic ticket in each case, including three for reckless driving and one for following too close. In West Monroe, police reported two minor accidents, with no charges.

Three charges were lodged against a West Monroe man by police last night. Bill Barney, 50, 508 Montgomery, was charged by West Monroe police with operating a motor vehicle while under the influences of intoxicating beverages, resisting arrest, and leaving the scene of an accident.

Jerry Knight, 28, of 1510 McMillan Road, West Monroe, was charged with two counts of simple battery.

U.S. Officials File Protests For Damages

WASHINGTON (AP) — The United States fired a pair of "strong protests" at Hungary on Saturday for a Communist demonstration on Viet Nam which damaged the American Legation in Budapest.

Otherwise, Washington marked time on appeals for diplomatic talks to end the Vietnamese fighting and watched for any new move from the Communist capitals. U.S. sources reported no sign of a major Red Chinese military action, despite a tough-sounding broadcast from Peking.

It was announced that Secretary of State Dean Rusk will return Monday from Cocoa Beach, Fla., where he has been vacationing the last 10 days. Afflicted with what was described as a lingering cold, Rusk was away from Washington during the new turn in the Viet Nam crisis marked by U.S. reprisal raids on the Communist North.

A State Department spokesman rejected what he termed an "untrue and irresponsible" report that Rusk would be succeeded by Thomas C. Mann in the top foreign affairs job. Mann, known to be high in President Johnson's esteem, was named Friday to the department's No. 3 position as undersecretary for economic affairs. Johnson first brought him to Washington a year ago to direct Latin-American relations.

The U.S. complaints to Hungary were filed speedily on the heels of Saturday's assault by demonstrators ostensibly complaining about the American air strikes.

Law Must Move School Boards, McKenzie Says

BATON ROUGE (AP)—President Harry McKenzie of the Louisiana School Boards Association said Saturday he believes the boards will wait for federal court desegregation, rather than voluntarily vote civil rights compliance.

This was the latest weathervane in a state where segregation still has some political force although its legal status has been wrecked.

For several days now, public attention has been focused on the State Board of Education and what it will do—and when—and what a key opinion by the attorney general meant.

But it's the local school boards—there are 67 of them—that will make the real decisions whether to comply or abandon federal money.

Of the 67 voters, eight already are under federal court desegregation orders, including New Orleans and Baton Rouge. Bossier Parish has a court suit pending.

That leaves 59 boards untouched so far by Negro lawsuits.

Jury To Convene At Winnsboro

WINNSBORO (Special) —Franklin Parish Grand Jury will go into session Monday morning to start the first term of the 1965 Fifth Judicial District Court.

According to the sheriff's department, there are 27 cases on the docket for investigation by the Grand Jury. Included are one case of murder and one of negligent homicide.

RECORD FLIGHT

NOT HONEY SWEET

State Spending Directors To Try Coordination Again

BATON ROUGE (AP) — Sen. Jackson Davis' economy committee and Gov. John McKeithen's top legislative budget leaders once again will attempt in a key meeting Monday to agree on how to coordinate.

All has not been honey sweet between the two, even though there have been soothing public utterances.

Evidence of the rawness broke into the open briefly a couple of weeks ago after Sen. Jamar Adcock of Monroe, budget chairman, said the legislature didn't intend for the Davis economy group to become a fiscal policeman for state agencies.

Rep. Eugene McGehee of East Baton Rouge, a member of Davis' committee, growled he was surprised at Adcock's "irresponsible statements."

McGehee also may have touched part of the troubled coordination when he said Adcock rarely had attended meetings "yet he sees fit to criticize."

The liaison group plans to sit down in closed conference with the economy committee Monday when it opens a two-day session.

The budget committee on Tuesday opens its third week of examining state spending proposals, preparing for the fiscal legislature.

The governor is still interested in economy. He needs to hold on to some annual revenues to support the big bond issues he wants.

Once the two McKeithen committees shift a little closer together-because the boss apparently wants it that way - members can concentrate on keeping heavier spending demands within the extra $30 million in revenues anticipated.

What has many state officials squirming is the red tape and extra office staff work they contend the Davis committee has thrust on them in the sacred name of economy.

Several state officials, who don't want to be quoted by name, have been quietly rasping their criticism of what they term high-handed tactics of the Davis group.

That's where Adcock stepped in, cautioning the Davis group wasn't supposed to be a police agency.

But the Davis committee task is to find ways to save money in everyday operations, and McKeithen likes to talk about economizing.

The governor has returned to the committee a checklist of some 80 items sent to him covering proposed scope of the committee's latest work. McKeithen checked off items drawing his attention.

Davis said consideration of these 80 items-which he didn't want to describe-would receive major attention of his committee.

Letter Presents Witness Account Of Lincoln Death

CAPE ELIZABETH, Maine (UPI)—A recently found, century old letter contains an eyewitness account of the assassination of President Lincoln—who was born 156 years ago Friday.

The letter was found in the Cape Elizabeth residence of Mr. and Mrs. John W. Holt.

"It was written by the father of the woman who lived here for 40 to 50 years," said Mrs. Holt.

The letter was found among the personal effects of Ada Gardine, a spinster who died in January, 1962.

"As the paper states, J. Wilkes Booth shot the President and jumped from the foot of the private box upon the stage holding a large boa knife about a foot in length," the letter said.

"No one but a stage actor could have performed the deed with such coolness. As he landed upon the stage he looked back to the private box with his own knife raised and said, 'Virginia is avenged' and left the stage at its rear, mounting a horse and escaped . . .

"Such a scene I hope never to behold again. The ladies were in tears, some fainting. . .

"It was some 20 minutes before the President could be removed from the theater as the house was full. We remained until after the President was carried out, then we went home."

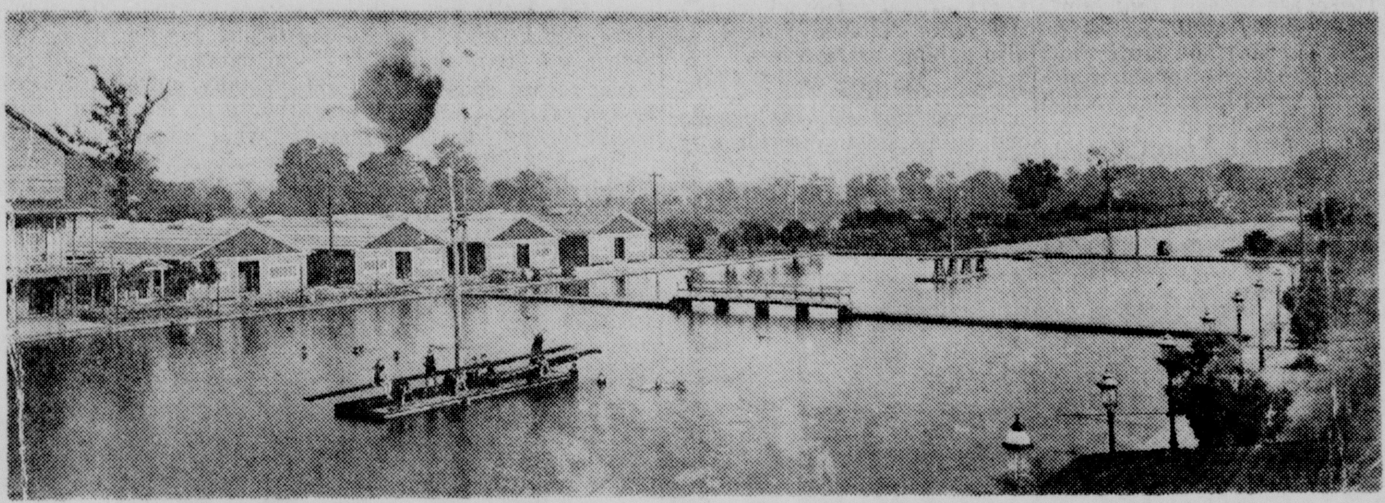
SCENES of YESTERYEAR . . . in the Twin Cities



HOW MANY REMEMBER THIS scene? It is a shot of the salt-water swimming pool (yes there was one), located across Riverside, and later, the Ouachita River levee from the Forsythe Park in Monroe. The pool, built during the administration of the later Mayor Andrew A. Forsythe, who struck salt water while drilling for gas in the park. When the salt water was brought up, the mayor began work towards the only saltwater swimming pool in North Louisiana. The pool was the central point of outdoor summer activities for many years, until the mid 1930's, when construction of the present levee forced its abandonment. The area along that section of the river is the public boat dock now. Incidentally, the present Swayze Natatorium, also in Forsythe Park, replaced the pool shown above. Note the walkways across the pool, and the lights on one side of it, and the diving board in the center. The pool was close to the Ouachita River, but was not exactly part of it. It was not known exactly when this picture was made. It was sent to us by Mrs. Pauline Polk of Winnsboro, La.

Gunner Praises American Medic For Pleiku Help

LYNWOOD, Calif. (AP) — An American helicopter gunner wounded in the Communist guerrilla attack at Pleiku in South Viet Nam last Sunday says the action of medics there should make Americans proud.

Spec. 4 Larry Holuk, 19, writing from a hospital in Saigon, gave a graphic account of the battle in a letter to his parents, Mr. and Mrs. John Holuk of Lynwood.

He said he woke up on the cement floor to the sounds of mortars exploding in the officers' quarters about 250 yards away.

"The five other guys in our building and I jumped up and started looking for our pants and boots. That was a mistake as the Viet Cong started to walk the mortar rounds right up to us.

"We should have grabbed our weapons, run outside and climbed in a foxhole."

"Medics who could walk bandaged themselves and got to work on the other men.

"One of the surgeons, wearing only his skivvies and with shrapnel wounds in his head, seemed to work tirelessly on the long line of patients. He never stopped to dress and take care of himself until the last one had been taken care of.

LAWYER SOAKED

ROCKFORD, Ill. (AP) — Reroofing the 88-year-old county courthouse is trying the patience of Asst. State's Atty. William H. Snively who twice in a day had no recourse but to reach for bucket and mop.

Snively came to work one morning to find puddles of water on his desk and chairs and a big pool of water on the floor of his fourth floor office.

He dutifully mopped up and draped soaked legal papers over chairs to dry. He had a repeat performance in the afternoon.

REPORT FROM MUSIC FIELD

Beat Music Down In The Twin Cities

By ROBERT SIMONTON
World Staff Writer

Beatlemania — Watusi — the Aminals — frug — combinations of dog, bird and swim.

These are modern mumblings which describe various states of sounds (music) and movements (dance) so vastly popular now in some areas they send certain people into a frenzy.

Not so in the Twin Cities!

A survey of music stores and record shops in Monroe and West Monroe indicate that the trend is away from so much of the franctic beat in records — both singles and albums — and in sheet music.

While rock 'n roll records are still popular among the teenagers — and some sub-teens — the more subdued sounds are also gaining as favorites.

AMONG SET

Among this set, the number one selling single disc (45 rpm) is "Downtown" by Petula Clark.

Other modern populars are "This Diamond Ring" by Gary Lewis and the Playboys and "Not Too Long Ago" by the Uniques.

The Beatles are definitely not as much in demand as before. But, "the English sound" is spreading out to groups like the Dave Clark Five, the Rolling Stones and the Bacholors.

One record shop listed a collection of more or less smooth numbers by the Supremes, "Where Did Our Love Go?", as the biggest selling album, while another said the sound track from the motion picture "Goldfinger" was "rocking out," yet it's anything but that type music.

Many standard pop albums featuring vocalists like Connie Francis, Elvis Presley, Robert Goulet and Pat Boone are much in demand. Vocal albums, incidentally, outsell instrumental albums in the Twin Cities.

What albums outside of pops are sought? Folk music, western and country tunes and sacred songs hold their own.

In fact, where rock 'n roll is the big deal with the young teens, folk music seems to be "it" with the college set. The Kingston Trio; Peter, Paul and Mary; and the New Christy Minstrels are big names in this category.

People are constantly feeding the juke boxes in Monroe and West Monroe. What do they play? Most juke boxes nowadays offer a wide variety of selections — from semi-classical to rock 'n roll. A spot check of places with juke boxes indicates that "Ode to the Little Brown Shack Out Back" pops up most often.

Just for comparison sake — the national number one seller is "You've Lost That Lovin' Feelin' " by the Righteous Brothers. It is number 37 on one local top tune survey and not even included on another.

One music store in the area does not sell rock 'n roll because the customers prefer "good listening music." Another reports the Beatle-type recordings are only "hot" for a short time. Enduring ones are ballads or movie themes or special effects music.

Sheet music — no rock ' roll sold there. It's the old standards, revised hits, folk tunes or sacred and gospel songs. Moving fast now in sheet music are "Dear Heart," "The Girl from Ipanema" and "More."

The latter song, actually the theme music from the motion picture "Mondo Cane," is in demand also in single and album recordings—a good example of an enduring instrumental bordering, if you please, on the semi-classical.

Guitar lessons are in vogue in some circles, therefore more records featuring guitarists and more sheet music sold.

In summing up the music picture in the Twin Cities it might be safe to say special groups prefer special records, but rock 'n roll certainly does not hold the edge as it once did.

Corvair by Chevrolet

The beauty of it, of course, goes deeper than the things you don't get. There's the other side of the coin—what you do get instead.

Take the no window post, for example. What you do get is hardtop styling—with curved frameless side windows—in every Corvair closed model. Even the lowest priced coupe or sedan.

The transmission and driveline hump you don't get means more foot room for both front- and back-seat passengers. Thanks to Corvair's rear engine, the floor is practically flat.

No radiator—the engine's air-cooled—also means no water, no antifreeze and no hose leaks to worry about. All of which add up to some more important pluses.

Power steering? Power brakes? Corvair needs them like a centipede needs crutches. With most of the engine weight on the rear wheels, the front ones are free to steer easily. And stops are quick and sure—with no nosediving.

Come on down to our showroom and discover the difference of driving one of these new Corvairs for yourself. Your reaction to all those "No's" you see up there will be positively great.

Water Usage In Twin Cities Enough To Float Battleship

By ROBERT SIMONTON
World Staff Writer

Residents of the Twin Cities consume enough water in one year to float a small battleship!

Monroe and West Monroe citizens use approximately two and one - half billion gallons of water yearly. That averages out about seven million gallons per day — five million for Monroe and two million for West Monroe; or about 210 million gallons per month.

Every day, everyone in the area uses water for something — but probably no one stops to think about the why or wherefore of this very necessary substance of our daily existence.

Let rain come, and our attention is focused on it. However, the heavy rainfalls recently are a mere pittance compared to the staggering figures associated with our use of this liquid.

According to Mike Tarver, commercial manager of the Monroe Utilities Commission, the amount of water consumed in Monroe from February last year to January of this year totaled 1,867,939,000.

He said the average consumption per customer per month is 10.1 thousand gallons. There are 14,486 water customers in Monroe.

West Monroe's water storage capacity is three million gallons, according to James O. Fleming, superintendent of the West Monroe water and sewerage department.

When the water level drops to a certain point and a certain pressure is reached, the pumps begin to fill the storage tanks up again.

West Monroe's main source of water is through deep wells and the big consumers of water in that city are the plants and mills.

Willie L. Ellerbe, superintendent at the Monroe water works, furnished these figures concerning the local water situation: Monroe's water storage capacity is nine million gallons; the city's water is stored in two elevated tanks, one ground level tank, and one clear well tank at the local plant; a 3.1 million gallon tank is now being installed at the water plant at 800 Park Avenue; the average daily flow of water is six and one - half million gallons per day; and the Forsythe Park swimming pool alone uses about five million gallons of water per year.

A tour of the Monroe water plant will reveal even more interesting facts. Machinery measures the tank level of water storage basins on Powell Ave., Thomas Ave., and Grammont St., and the flow rate — or number of million gallons per day pumped — from Bayou DeSiard, which is the city's main source of water.

Also, the complex machinery starts or stops the pumps on the bayou just like operating a light switch, and denotes power failure. As Mr. Ellerbe aptly puts it "this is very educated machinery."

The water leaving the Monroe water plant treatment center is second to none in quality.

The U. S. Public Health Service in conjunction with the Surgeon General of the U. S prescribe the standards of drinking water. All of the local analyses are very low in comparison to their maximum, according to Elmer Corkern, plant engineer here.

When the water is pumped to the plant, it is first treated with 1 R.P.M. of chlorine gas. This gas kills a large portion, if not all, of the bacteria which is present in the water. The water is also treated with alum, caustic soda, and filtered through antrafilt and rock.

The water then leaves the filter and goes into the clear well for a post chlorination of 1 R.P.M. as a double precaution to eliminate any bateria. From here it is picked up by service pumps and sent to the customer.

The plant has a laboratory, where tests are performed and the water analysed to determine its contents. Through these experiments, the local plant maintains — or actually exceeds — the rigid standards set up by the national public health service.

When you go to the faucet to get a drink of water, or brush your teeth, or when you put a load of clothing into your washing machine — you do these things as a matter of habit, not wondering about the water or what's in it.

Some of the ingredients and their parts per million gallons are phenolphthalen alkalinity (3.0), methyl orange alkalinity (30), dissolved solid micromhos (140), chlorides (12), chlorine residual (1.0), silica (2.0), soap hardness (20), dissolved oxygen (4.0), and iron (0.01). Have no fear — these contents are far, far below the maximum allowed by the government.

INCENTIVE FUND

SAN MATEO, Calif. (UPI) — A $50 fund has been set up at the College of San Mateo to help a student who is a poor scholar.

A group from South San Francisco set up the award and asked school officials that it be restricted to a promising student with less than a C average, to help motivate him.

Top Space Shots To Test Dangers For Moon Flight

CAPE KENNEDY (UPI) — Two major space shots on tap next week have key roles in America's drive to learn more about the moon and the hazards men face in reaching it.

On Tuesday, a Saturn-1 super rocket is scheduled to orbit a huge winged satellite named "Pegasus" to study bullet-like meteoroids whizzing in space that might endanger Apollo moonships.

On Wednesday, the space agency plans to send a Ranger television probe on another lunar sea scouting expedition to see if the moon's plains are smooth enough for manned landings.

Ranger, No. 8 in a series of nine, is nearly identical to the Ranger-7 spacecraft that scored a historic first last July by flashing back 4,316 exceptional closeup pictures of the moon.

Ranger-7's snapshots, up to 2,000 times better than the best moon pictures taken from the earth, showed that at least one lunar sea, now called mare Cognitum, is relatively flat. Ranger-8 will be aimed toward the sea of tranquility to see if it is similar.

The 3,200-pound Pegasus satellite to be carried by the Saturn-1 booster will be the first useful payload for the 190-foot rocket. The first seven Saturn-1's, all successful, carried either ballast or dummy moonships.

Pegasus, named after the winged horse of mythology, has a 96-foot wide wing that will unfold in orbit and scour space for meteoroids.

Program Is Set For Ninth Annual UGF Meet Tuesday

The program for the ninth annual meeting of United Givers Fund was released Saturday by Fred Petty, chairman of the banquet.

The "Dutch - Treat" dinner will be held at 7 p.m. Tuesday at the Frances Hotel Roof. Tickets are $3. No UGF money is used to defray the cost of the banquet, Petty said.

Sid C. Ory, civic leader and humorist, of Lafayette, will be guest speaker. Ory, an insurance company executive, is much in demand as a speaker for his "Cajun stories" and his business talks.

He has received numerous awards for his civic work and has been an officer of several community organizations, in Lafayette and throughout the state.

Petty will be master of ceremonies of the event. Entertainment will be provided by David College baritone.

The annual appreciation banquet will climax the UGF fund drive and will be dedicated to recognizing the hundreds of volunteer campaign workers and UGF agency leaders. Public appreciation will also be paid to the 11,350 individual and corporate donors for their support of the agencies through the UGF drive.

Outgoing president Jack S. Campbell will present a brief report of 1964 activities, followed by the Campaign Chairman's Report from Ralph Caldwell. Caldwell will also present plaques of appreciation to the firms and employees who contributed "Fair Share" support to the last campaign.

Special recognition will be given to President Campbell and Chairman Caldwell for their contributions to the organization during 1964.

The meeting will also feature election of 20 new members to the UGF board of directors. The board will in turn elect new officers for the coming year.

Kosygin Sees Red Victory

MOSCOW (AP) — Commenting on the Viet Nam crisis, Soviet Premier Alexei N. Kosygin declared today "our forces are superior to the forces of imperialism" and "victory will be ours." He asserted Communist forces can "stop the aggression in Viet Nam."

The official Soviet news agency Tass said Kosygin made the statement at a reception in the Soviet Embassy in. Pyongyang, capital of Communist North Korea, attended by the North Korean Premier and Communist party leader Kim Il Sung.

Kosygin recalled that he had pledged Soviet military aid to Communist North Viet Nam in a visit to Hanoi, the capital, this week. In saying that Communist forces could stop aggression in Viet Nam, he did not make clear whether he meant stopping attacks on North Viet Nam or driving U.S. forces out of South Viet Nam.

Kosygin toasted "the unity of the Socialist camp in the present-day situation," an apparent reference to Red China. He also toasted Soviet-North Korean friendship.

In reply, Kim toasted friendship with the Soviet Union and "the strengthening of unity of the Communist camp."

Unity with Communist China also was the theme in Moscow. Railway Minister Boris Beshchev, speaking at a Soviet-Chinese friendship meeting on the 15th anniversary of the signing of their treaty of friendship, mutual assistance and alliance, said:

"Under the present circumstances, the close alliance of the Soviet and Chinese people recorded in the 1950 treaty, particularly its provisions aimed at insuring peace and security in the Far East and Asia, acquires particular importance."

His reference to present circumstances probably meant the Viet Nam crisis. With top members of the Soviet Communist party Presidium in attendance, Tass reported Beshchev suid he was convinced friendly relations between the Soviet Union and China would grow stronger and existing difficulties would be eliminated step by step.

The government paper Izvestia said the treaty would contribute to the consolidation of friendship between the Soviet Union and Red China.

"The great alliance between the U.S.S.R. and the People's Republic of China has displayed its huge international importance," Izvestia said. "It is a mighty bulwark of peace in the Far East and throughout the world, an invincible force in the struggle against imperialist aggression."

CUBAN BORN but now an American citizen, Jorge Bolet, an internationally known pianist, is scheduled to present two concerts at Louisiana Tech. He will appear in Howard Auditorium in Ruston at 8 p.m. Wednesday for a popular program for students and will play a different concert in the auditorium the following night for the public membership of the Tech concert association.

HUNTER SAYS

LSU's Status Worth Saving

BATON ROUGE (AP)—President John A. Hunter said Saturday Louisiana State University's independence as a keystone of higher education under the state constitution "is worth preserving."

And he suggested that talk about coordination of higher education be placed in "its proper perspective as part of a larger problem."

He called for those suggesting a major overhaul that would put all institutions of higher learning under one commission to "get about the more important business of finding ways and means of supporting an expanding system of higher education in the next decade."

Hunter and President Vernon Galliano of Nicholls State College, president of the State College Presidents' Council, were questioned about the superboard proposal and discussion surrounding it.

Sen. Fred Eagan of New Orleans said earlier he was considering the possibility of legislation to create a single, all-powerful commission to draw up a master plan for higher education and serve as final authority for all fundamental matters in this area.

The New Orleans lawmaker said the need was pointed up recently in a clash between LSUNO and LSU in Baton, Rouge over a National Science Foundation grant application. He asked educators to come up with suggestions.

At his news conference Friday, Gov. John McKeithen said he was open to suggestions, and was sure Eagan would come up with "something worthwhile."

President W. E. Whetstone of the State Board of Education suggested that all institutions of higher learning be put under the education board. Whetstone said there was little coordination between the education board and the LSU board.

In Thibodaux, Galliano said laws already are on the books to take care of a coordinating council for higher education, and his main suggestion was that it include some lawmakers as well as members of the LSU board and the state education board.

This council now is made up of the combined membership of the two boards which supervise separate groups of higher education.

Galliano said the coordinating council had been holding meetings and had dealt with some problems.

College presidents, he said, "feel we are going to have to sit down and make a study and come up with" an overall plan. But he stressed there already is cooperation in a number of problems.

Elder Vanderbilt Dies Saturday At Los Angeles

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Gloria M. Vanderbilt, the mother of heiress Gloria Vanderbilt, died of cancer Saturday at Cedars of Lebanon Hospital, a spokesman said. She was 60.

A hospital spokesman said she was admitted to the hospital Feb. 2.

Mrs. Vanderbilt first entered Cedars of Lebanon Hospital for surgery last Dec. 8.

Her physician at that time said surgery was performed upon her aorta — the major artery carrying blood from the heart to other organs. Her physician did not expand upon the nature of the disorder, or the corrective measures.

She was later discharged from the hospital and was readmitted on Feb. 2.

Mrs. Vanderbilt was the widow of Reginald C. Vanderbilt.

Camellias Reflect New Flowering Beauty

Monroe Morning World
SUNDAY FEATURES
Monroe, La, February 14, 1965 1-B
Editorials Spotlight Sports

This is the season when the blossoming array of beauty of Camellias holds the center of attention here in yards, greenhouses, and at special showings. It also is the time when new varieties are displayed and gardeners exchange ideas on advances in the propagation of the plants.

By BILL HARDIN
Staff Writer

The propagation of Camellias in the Monroe area, as well as other sections of the Upper South, has taken on new looks — better looks for the camellia blooms, more expensive looks for the growers, but much better satisfaction to all persons who enjoy camellias.

New and better varieties are being introduced each year. Many of the older, established varieties fade out, but then enjoy a comeback, and still others remain favorites for different persons or groups from year to year.

But whether the grower prefers the new, exotic blooms, the tried - and - true oldies or the perennial favorites of all, the one big change which is affecting them all is the construction of greenhouses. Not 'hothouses,'' as one grower pointed out, but greenhouses, in which the temperature and humidity can be controlled — the temperature kept a degree chilly for humans but comfortable for the cold - weather plants — for Camellia plants can take the cold much better than the heat despite the belief of so many persons — and the humidity so high that persons entering begin perspiring, but the plants thrive with the excessive moisture.

A LEADING PROPONENT

One of the leading proponents of the greenhouse production propagation of Camellias is Philip F. Bernhardt, 1309 Spencer Ave., Monroe who is literally an heir to the facility. His mother had a small house at the old family home on North Third Street in Monroe.

Following her death, the greenhouse was dismantled and moved to his home in 1941. Inside the house were about 70 Camellia plants, all in cans and ready for protection which the house provides.

However, during the night the temperature dropped to seven degrees, and since there was no heat installed, Bernhardt ended up with a greenhouse, 70 - plus containers and no Camellia plants.

The next several years were spent collecting particular plants which he wanted. Some were grafted, while others were purchased from nurserymen both in this area and in south Louisiana. Today, his enlarged greenhouse has undergone numerous enlargements and holds between 200 and 225 plants, nearly all blooming size.

RECENT ACQUISITIONS

Some of his more recent acquisitions are Carl Tourje, a hybrid; Howard Asper, another hybrid; Purple Gown and Butterfly Wing.

(A hybrid is the resulting plant from cross pollination of a camellia japonica with a camellia susanqua, camellia japonica with a reticulatta, or a susanqua with a reticulatta.)

One of Bernhardt's prize plants is a reticulatta, producing rose pink blooms in abundance. However, a big drawback to these particular plants, the reticulattas, is that the bloom must be taken from the stem without any of the wood stock. Should the new wood be cut or broken, the plant dies back to the joint, thus losing much of the recent growth, sometimes as much as two years growth.

However, the abundance of the blooms makes the plant a favorite with many of the growers. This particular type of plant is very well favored in the South Pacific areas such as New Zealand and Australia, where many Camellias are grown.

GREENHOUSE NEED

In discussing his greenhouse, Bernhardt pointed out that heat is not the desired result of the building. "Camellias will not tolerate a 'hot house,' it must be a green house,'' he said. While the plant grows in the warmer climates, it is mostly in the subtropic and milder portions of the temperate zones. Actual blooming of the camellias, especially the older varieties, was during the winter season, when the climate was cool-to-cold and when the moisture was conducive to the opening of the buds.

Without either, the blooms will be less than perfect. The cold nights and cool days give the proper impetus to the tight buds to begin swelling and later opening into all shades of color, from the pure white through the pinks and into the deepest of reds. In this range are the variegated varieties.

And, unless the moisture is present in abundance, the buds lack the proper water, therefore opening into stunted blooms. Only during the winter season, with some allowances for the late fall and early spring seasons, is the moisture sufficient to work with other of nature's specialities to bring the plants into their full blooming.

BLOOMING ADVANCED

With the green house, where both the temperature and the humidity can be controlled, both the size of the bloom and the time of blooming can be advanced. However, basically, the Camellias will bloom during specified seasons.

During the recent years, horticulturists throughout the world working with Camellias have introduced new varieties which open in the earliest of the fall months, oftentime in the latter part of August. Two of the best examples of these are the September Morn, which may be white, pale pink or even a moderate shade of pink, all on the same bush, and the Arijishi, a deep full red.

Other varieties bloom in the late spring, many well into April. During the months between September and April, the hundreds of varieties bloom over long periods of time.

Incidentally, many of the varities grown here will be on display during the annual camellia show, which will be held here Feb. 20-21. The event is sponsored by the Northeast Louisiana Camellia show.

So a person with a number of varieties may have blooms for as many as eight or nine months of the year.

However, if grown in the open, this mid-winter period, say from late November through February, they must depend on natural protection and the possibility, and hope, of a mild winter. With winters like northeast Louisiana has seen during the past three years, many of the mid-winter bloomers, especially the whites and light pinks, have been seriously hurt, and even the entire crop of blossoms wiped out.

This, then, is basically where the greenhouse has become, and is increasingly becoming more dependent upon by the Camellia grower.

SHOW BLOOMS

Regardless of the season, of the weather and of other conditions upon which the growers must depend on nature, with a greenhouse properly constructed and with adequate facilities for ventilation and humidity, show blooms can be expected.

In the case of Bernhardt's green house, it is covered with plastic screen and polyethelyne. The top is so constructed that during the late spring all of the covering is removed and the top is then covered with camouflage material, similar to that used during World War II to protect gun emplacements. This allows filtered light and sun, but keeps the plants still under some sort of semi-shade.

Most of the plants are in containers, and are removed from the greenhouse and placed under trees growing in the yard.

The sides of the house are so constructed that a sheet of polyethelyne is fastened to each side of the frame making up the side. In between is the plastic screen. This, very similar to storm windows used in the north, provides about one-inch of air space, almost a vacuum, which acts as additional protection against the outside elements.

A special heater keeps the temperature at the required level. In this particular case, the temperature is in the middle 30's or low 40's at the most. Fans keep the air circulating, preventing the accumulation of too much warmth in any area of the house.

A number of other growers in the area have turned to greenhouses, but an even larger number continue to take their chances with the elements, growing the plants under trees, preferably pines, which give protection from both the heavy rains, such as those which have hit the area during the past week, and from frost during the winter, and the hot scorching sun during the summer months.

But whether the Camellias are grown under artificial protection such as the greenhouse, or under natural protection, trees, the goal is the same — production of blooms during the fall, winter and early spring months of all hues, shapes and sizes.

PHILIP F. BERNHARDT, one of the foremost Camellia enthusiasts in the Twin Cities, proudly displays several specimen blossoms which he has produced in the back-yard greenhouse. The variegated blossom, which Bernhardt is holding, is the Betty Sheffield, Supreme, one of the most popular of the recent entries into the Camellia world. The others are the Virgin's Blush, and the Ethel Davis, Variegated. Bernhardt is one of the increasing number of Camellia growers who are depending on greenhouses to produce perfect blossoms in this area. (Staff color photo by John I. Fogleman)

Iwo Jima --- Marine Corps' Costliest Battle Recalled

By RICHARD F. NEWCOMB
AP Staff Writer

It was a short age but a glorious one for sailors — the golden age of amphibious warfare.

It lasted only three years — 1942 to 1945 — and it can never come again. It began at a place called Guadalcanal on an August morning in 1942, and it ended in a blinding flash of light on another August morning, in 1945, at a place called Hiroshima. The atom bomb ended forever the great concentrations of men, of surface ships, of planes and guns known as the amphibious force.

Between the two dates, the United States Navy had brought to flower the art of projecting warfare over vast distances of water, of assaulting hostile shores and of capturing enemy bastions.

The European theater had its landings — North Africa, Sicily, Salerno, Anzio and Normandy, but those in the Pacific had a special quality. Perhaps it was partly in the names — names like Guadalcanal, Tarawa, Saipan and Iwo Jima.

Not all landings were bloody, and not all were made by Marines, though in the Pacific war those two ideas became so firmly entwined it is still difficult not to envision every beach head strewn with the bodies of Marines. And not all landings were smooth and sure, with victory certain.

The art developed slowly beginning in disarming quiet, on the misty morning of August 7, 1942, at Guadalcanal with a handful of transports shepherded by a small force of cruisers and destroyers. The 1st Marine Division walked ashore at Guadalcanal, to find Japanese breakfasts still warm on the table. But the hopes raised were permature. It took nearly six months, and 1,200 Marine dead, to subdue Guadalcanal.

Thus began the steady march across the Pacific, with tragic pauses all the way, at places that have now passed into history—Tarawa, the Marshalls, Saipan, Guam and Tinian, and bloody Peleliu. In the meantime General Douglas MacArthur coming up through New Guinea had bypassed Rabaul and Peleliu and waded ashore at Leyte in the Philippines, declaring "I have returned."

Now it was late 1944, and the Japanese were running out of space. Discounting the stalemate in China, only the home islands were left and a few outposts, one of them named Iwo Jima, or Sulphur Island. Here was to take place what has come to be called the classic example of amphibious warfare. Iwo Jima was a foul place, five miles long and two miles across at the widest, a place of rock and sand, of tuft grass and stinking, bubbling sulphur pits.

In peace, Iwo Jima had no value; in war it was priceless. It stood halfway between Guam and Tokyo — 700 miles either way. It was an airman's dream — the perfect base for fighter support to the B29s, even then gathering in the Marianas to burn Japan to the ground with fire bombs. In addition, it would be a haven for crippled Super forts and those drained of gas by headwinds on the 3,000 mile raids. Thus Iwo Jima had been on American planning boards since September 1944, masquerading as Operation Detachment.

Since the days of Guadalcanal, American seapower had grown incredibly. Where at Guadalcanal there had been four carriers in the Pacific, now there were scores, large and small.

SOMETHING NEW

And to boot there was something entirely new in sea warfare—The Fast Carrier Task Force made up of carriers, new battleships, cruisers and destroyers. The whole force could run at over 30 knots, strike with 1,200 planes and withdraw before the enemy could locate the source of his punishment.

For Iwo Jima the whole shebang was turned on. Three Marine divisions, the Third, Fourth and Fifth, made up the 5th Amphibious Corps, the largest Marine force ever committed to battle. Maj Gen. Harry Schmidt's landing force totaled about 70,000 men.

To transport it, land it, and cover it, Vice Adm. Richmond Kelly Turner, the "Terrible Turner," who had learned so much since Guadalcanal, had 495 ships. But this was far from all. Task Force 58 ran interference by running up to Tokyo for close-in raids.

It was a proud day for the Navy. Task Force 58 was the most powerful instrument of sea warfare ever devised. It was 116 ships, nearly every one new since Pearl Harbor, and the heart of it was the 16 fast carriers. "Murderer's Row" someone dubbed them, seeing them all together at Ulithi, ready to sail for Tokyo. With the carriers were eight new battleships, 15 cruisers and 77 destroyers Counting TF58, the Iwo Jima force, Marines, Seabees, sailors and airmen, was over 250,000 men and 800 ships. For one island of less than 10 square miles:

From Iwo Jima, D Day was Feb. 19, 1945, just 20 years ago, and H Hour was 9 a.m.

The island presented few tactical problems. The only feasible beach — narrow and steep, with soft, black sand and heavy surf — was the 3,500 yard strip on the east coast running north from Mt. Suribachi, a cone shaped dead volcano, to the south to a high cliff. The worst possible for an invader, the best for a defender, with high ground at either end to pour in fire on the assault troops.

Waiting were Lt. Gen. Tadamichi Kuribayashi and 21,000 men, not at the beaches but on the high ground. They had been working and waiting for eight months, building an under ground fortress of caves and tunnels, so artfully concealed that photo reconnaissance was nearly useless.

By Monday morning, Feb. 19, Gen. Kuribayashi was as ready as he could be He has written his wife and children, time and again, that no Japanese would leave Iwo Jima alive, finally telling his wife in exasperation: "Please stop hoping that I can return alive, that you will ever see me again.''

ISLAND POUNDED

For three days the battleships had been pounding the island, along with cruisers and destroyers, carrier planes and B24s from the Marianas. The defenders cowered in their caves and tunnels as the island rocked, and concussion snuffed out the lamps in the passageways. They waited. Offshore, as dawn came, were more ships than they had ever seen. It was D-Day.

The first wave of assault boats crossed the line of departure and struck the beach at exactly 9 a.m., in beautiful precision. Three minutes behind it was the second wave, and right behind that another, and another. From the sea the landing boats kicked up little white plumes of wake, like the largest water ballet ever staged. Ashore it didn't look quite so pretty.

The Japanese, stunned by the final cannonade and air sweeps of bomb and napalm, were quiet for awhile. Then gunfire began to fall on the beaches, like the patter of a soft summer rain at first, rising slowly and steadily to the crescendo of a mountain storm. The landing was on, and it was a fury.

Within an hour, the beach was littered with bodies and parts of bodies, with guns and medicines, with food and bits of torn litters, with burning Jeeps and foundered landing boats, a toothbrush from somewhere, and even a beer can—all the scrap of war. Still the landing waves came on, and still Marines climbed the terraces, moving inland, moving, moving, seeking the high ground. Get off the beach. Get off the beach.

By 10:30 the island had been cut at the narrow neck, by noon Marines swarmed around the first airfield, by night fall the Quarry up behind cliff had been taken. Bulldozers and tanks and artillery were ashore, and 30,000 men. The cost had been frightful. In nine hours the Marines had suffered 2,400 casualties and nearly 600 of them were dead. Still the rain of death fell on the beaches.

IN SCENE AT LEFT, an abandoned Japanese trench and bomb craters formed during the invasion provide meager shelter for Marines of the Fourth Division hitting the beach on Iwo Jima during the gigantic amphibious landing Feb. 19, 1945. A battered Japanese ship is in the right background. The photo was made by Joe Rosenthal, Associated Press photographer at the time. In center panel the going is hard in the volcanic sand as wounded Marines are helped by fellow Marines, less seriously wounded, and Naval medical corpsmen bound for an aid station during the invasion. Around them is wrecked American equipment on the beach and in the water. Four weeks of fighting for the little island cost the Marines 25,851 casualties, of which, 5,931 were killed. In the photo at right, fired on by Japanese waiting on the high ground, U. S. Marines drag light equipment through the volcanic sand of the beach on D-Day. At lower right in the same scene, a landing barge crewman crouches low. (AP Photos)

$1 Billion Arm 'Shot'

Washington news commentators say there is not much doubt that the administration's $1,092,000,000 Appalachia bill will pass the House of Representatives, although by a somewhat smaller relative margin than the 62-22 vote in the Senate. This bill, of course, is intended as a "shot in the arm" for the area, with little expectation that it will do much permanent good. There is one phase of the proposal, however, which makes it digestible if not palatable.

Eighty per cent of the appropriation, amounting to $840,000,000, will be spent in road construction to boost the economically depressed mountain area.

There are at least two reasons for saying the bill will be digestible if not palatable for the people of the nation as a whole. One is that anything spent on road construction not only helps the people of the area but also benefits those who pass through it—on vacations or for other purposes. The other is that anything spent in the United States does the people more good than the money we give away by the billions to other nations.

The legislation authorizes a five-year spending program in a 167,000 - square - mile area, comprising parts of 11 states and 355 counties, running from New York to Georgia.

There probably would have been less objection from people of other parts of the United States if the plan had been advanced as a straight road - building program and not as a "shot in the arm" treatment for the area. Anyone who has passed through the mountainous country knows there is plenty of room for improvement in the roads, which might be described as the corkscrew type, in view of their numerous turnings and twistings. Their length could easily be cut in half if it were feasible to straighten them in some places.

Three principal reasons have been given for the so-called depression in the area. One is the tremendous drop in coal mining that has resulted from the changeover in fuel uses, with locomotives using oil instead of coal and with industries and individuals turning more to the use of natural or artificial gas. Another is that industries have been moving from that area into the South. A third is that the people who have not been able to find jobs there have refused to move to other areas, where jobs might be available. Many of them seem to prefer to stay there and let the government support them. None of these situations is likely to receive much permanent relief through the construction program.

There would, however, be some advantages. Much of Appalachia, if given better means of access, would be an attraction for tourists from the crowded eastern areas.

Although there was far less objection in the Senate to the bill than when it was brought up before, some Senators expressed strong opposition.

Senator Roman Hruska, R., Neb., led an unsuccessful effort to delete the soil conservation section of the bill. Joined by other cattle-state Senators, Hruska argued that the beef industry, already over-burdened, would suffer from increased competition.

Senator Lee Metcalf, D., Mont., said that special privilege is being given to the Appalachia area at a time when the administration is cutting soil conservation all over the rest of the United States.

"I cannot justify in my mind a program which, on one hand, would contribute to further poverty, as has been pointed out, in other areas of the United States, and distributing largess to the people of Appalachia," Metcalf told the Senate, but on the roll call he voted for the bill.

Senator Jack Miller, R., Iowa, said he found the bill included at least 67 counties which could not qualify as distressed areas under the Area Redevelopment Act, but are, nevertheless, eligible for all benefits under the Appalachia bill.

Although one purpose of the bill under the late President John F. Kennedy was to prevent industries in his own area from seeking more favorable locations in the South, it probably will have little effect in that respect. Appalachia will get some improved roads and that will be about the end of the program.

Let's Have A Heart

"Hearts will be artificially replaced in man within 10 years, and that's a conservative estimate," says Dr. C. Walton Lillehei of the University of Minnesota.

A pioneer researcher, Dr. Willen J. Kolff of the Cleveland Clinic, disagrees on the time span. "I'll be disappointed if a synthetic heart does not replace the human heart within three years," he said.

When this is accomplished, it will climax centuries of search motivated at first by dreams of finding the "fountain of youth," or immortality and later by the practical desire to equip the human body with a non-human engine.

Scientists and physicians engaged in developing and perfecting artificial organs have substituted the word "when" for "if" in their discussions of the progress that is being made.

The first fruitful tampering with tissue to offset bodily frailty occurred more than 2,000 years ago when the great Hindu Surgeon Susruta developed a way to fashion noses for injured warriors from flaps of their cheek skin. His art remained obscure until the time of Christopher Columbus, when Italian nose-making flourished to compensate for the ravages of sword play. Other plastic surgery techniques evolved but always there was failure when surgeons tried to graft parts from one individual to another — until recent years. Now, some drugs are helping to overcome the human body's stubborn rejection of stranger cells.

Advocates of artifical organs, however, are working in another direction.

Skyrocketing activity in artificial heart research has been one of the spectacular phases of medical development. A tally published last fall shows the National Heart Institute has made 19 grants and nine contracts totaling $1.84 million to investigators in 18 states for "mechanical heart and other related work projects." One scientist estimated that at least that much more is being spent in similar research financed by industry and foundation sources.

The studies are going on in medical schools, hospitals, aircraft firms, health centers, pharmaceutical company laboratories, engineering schools and electronic plants.

The ultimate objective, the kingpin goal, remains a manmade heart with an unfailing source of power — perhaps an atomic-powered heart. It is this aim which brings physiologists, surgeons, biochemists, engineers and physical scientists, into a cooperative effort unmatched anywhere for intensity of purpose — with the possible exception of the United States man-in-space program, and the success of that could hinge on the artificial heart.

One author wrote: "Man's inhumanity to man makes countless thousands mourn." Soon that statement may be over-shadowed by another which says: "Man's investigation of man makes countless millions live longer."

Big Summit Parley Is Talked

Reported Planned By Five Powers

AFRO - ASIAN diplomats at the United Nations are the source of an intriguing report that there is to be a big power summit conference in Geneva by summer.

Foremost among those saying this is Ethiopian Ambassador Tesfay Gebre-Egzy, a top leader of the large and influential Afro-Asian bloc. The veteran diplomat is attributing his backstage information to several authorities, among them members of the Soviet delegation.

According to Ambassador Gebre-Egzy, five powers will participate in the purported summit parley — the U.S., Britain, France, Russia and Red China.

This is squarely in line with what President de Gaulle advocated in his widely - publicized press conference last week. His bland inclusion of Communist China caused much eyebrow raising, as it is neither a member of the United Nations nor recognized by the U.S.

Ambassador Gebre - Egzy is crediting the Geneva conference with two objectives:

(1) A "political" settlement of the war - menacing Southeast Asian problem; (2) extensive revision of the UN charter, which De Gaulle propounded in his far-ranging press dissertation.

No confirmation of this Afro-Asian report was obtainable in Washington.

Inquiries at the White House, State Department, usually well-informed congressional and other quarters produced no results. While evincing keen interest, those questioned denied any knowledge of the matter.

SIGNIFICANT OVERTURE—However, it was ascertained that exchanges are taking place between Washington and Moscow on convening a Geneva - type meeting to work out an agreement in the extremely explosive South Viet Nam dilemma.

On direct instructions from President Johnson, this has been discussed by Ambassador Foy Kohler with Leonid Brezhnev, first secretary of the Communist Party.

According to Kohler, Brezhnev has expressed interest but gone no further.

In cables to Ambassador Llewellyn Thompson, Kohler's predecessor in Moscow and now special Soviet bloc adviser to the President, Kohler reported that Brezhnev agreed such a parley "could be useful," but appeared to be in no hurry to set even a tentative date.

In effect, the key Kremlin leader accepted the U.S. proposal "in principle" — and that was all. Concrete details were left dangling in the air.

In the opinion of intelligence experts, the Soviet rulers are awaiting further developments in Viet Nam. Militarily, a great deal is quietly underway throughout that strife-torn area.

OMINOUS BUILD-UPS — Apparently as a direct outgrowth of the rapid-fire events of the past week, Premier Alexei Kosygin, at the conclusion of his Hanoi visit, made the following commitments:

—North Viet Nam will be provided with a considerable number of SAMs, ground-to-air anti-aircraft missiles similar to those extensively installed in Cuba. The SAMs will be located at important coastal and border centers.

—Initially, these high-ranging missiles will be manned by Soviet and Cuban crews while North Vietnamese are being trained in Russia and Cuba.

—Several hundred or more Soviet military "instructors" and "technicians" will be flown to North Viet Nam to join its armed forces.

—Additional Mig-21 fighters and some light bombers will be dispatched to reinforce the North Viet Nam airforce. It now has an estimated 40 Mig-21s on bases near Hanoi and the Chinese border. Identity of the pilots of these latest - model fighters is not definitely known; they could be Russians or Chinese.

Red China is known to have a squadron of Mig-21s on Hainan Island, in the Gulf of Tonkin opposite the center of North Viet Nam's long coastline. As reported in this column last month, these fighters regularly fly patrols across the Gulf of Hanoi and back.

It has also been definitely established that in the past ten days, two Chinese divisions have shown up at Mangla, just across the border of north central Laos. Purpose of this large force is believed to be to exert pressure on both Laos and Thailand — which is now an openly avowed subversion target of Peking.

As a counter measure, the U.S. is bringing some 12,000 Marines and several supporting air squadrons into northern Thailand.

This move will be announced as a "planned military exercise."

Preparations for this significant operation, to last "three months or longer if necessary," are being directed by Lieutenant General Richard Meyer, head of logistics for the Joint Chiefs of Staff.

General Meyer was flown to Bangkok last week on President Johnson's personal jetliner.

FLASHES — The deadly accuracy of the Viet Cong's mortar fire in the tragic Pleiku surprise attack is being attributed by U.S. experts to two factors: Careful fire plotting and ranging ahead of time, and radio-equipped spotters inside the U.S. air installation. Ironically, both the mortars (81mm) and ammunition were U.S.-made that the Viet Cong captured from the South Vietnamese . . . A military police inquiry in Brazil has charged Archbishop Dom Jose Milton de Almeida with "subversive activities." He is head of the Catholic church in Brasilia, capital of the country.

Interesting Data On Tuberculosis

DEAR DR. STEINCROHN: Is it true that tuberculosis is no longer a threat to the health of Americans? I rarely hear of it any more. For example, scores of my friends and acquaintances are down with high blood pressure, ulcers, coronary disease, arthritis, and other conditions. Not one that I know of is down with TB. — Mrs. O.

Comment: You have chosen the winners. They usually head the list of the sick. But there are many other also-rans in the race, and commonly overlooked. One of these is tuberculosis.

It may surprise you and others to learn that about 50,000 Americans break down with TB every year. That many seem like an insignificant figure when compared with the millions of arthritis or heart sufferers. But if you, or someone in your family, comes down with tuberculosis, I assure you that taking even one digit out of the 50,000 can be an awfully large ONE.

Here are some interesting facts about the disease: You don't inherit tuberculosis; you catch it from someone who has it.

There's no danger being associated with one who has completely recovered. He doesn't spread germs.

Although healthy people can catch TB, rundown folks are more susceptible.

You can't always tell one has tuberculosis by the way he looks and acts. It's necessary to use tuberculin tests, X rays and other examinations to make the diagnosis.

Tuberculosis is no respector of youth or age — one can come down with it at any age.

DEAR DR. STEINCROHN: I have a friend who has heart disease. He doesn't look too sick to me. Yet he tells me his doctor has told him he hasn't got more than two years to live. What do you think of that? — Mrs. Y.

Comment: Not having seen or examined your friend, who am I to say yes or no? However, I have always been more or less allergic in my feelings about doctors who hand out such definite pronouncements. After all, the brightest and most experienced among us, are far from being even little gods.

I have seen too many apparently hopeless patients live for many years. (I recall one of my own, a patient who didn't seem to be a one-in-a-million-shot of lasting out the night of his attack, who lived for 20 years and died of another disease entirely. I recorded this unusual case in the Annals of Internal Medicine. On the other hand, some who are apparently slightly ill, may take a sudden, unexpected turn and die. Throughout this country every day are living ghosts who go about their daily tasks as if nothing happened, yet were given up for dead years before.

I REPEAT, Mr. Y.? Your friend may be as critically ill as his doctor has said. But I would never put myself on the record with such a prognostication for at least two reasons: 1. I would not want any human being living in daily fear because of such a death sentence. 2. Neither I, nor any other doctor, can look so confidentially into the future and make accurate predictions on life or death.

Mrs. N.: A hordeolum is another name for sty. It is a small abscess or boil on the eyelid. Most often it will disappear after hot applications. Only rarely does it require incision.

DeGaulle States U.N. Is Failure

"WE SEEK NO WIDER war," the administration keeps telling the American people on Vietnam. But the administration can't speak for the enemy.

Flushed with success and scenting victory, the Communists have a different view. Their objective is not just Vietnam, but all of Southeast Asia.

How long can the U. S. government go on fooling the American people into believing we are engaged in an isolated action in Vietnam?

Whether we like it or not, whether we still believe we are in Vietnam merely to help the South Vietnamese defend themselves and whether we are equipped to fight the kind of protracted war indicated, the fact remains that the stakes are far greater than the administration is willing publicly to admit.

WE SOMETIMES talk as though the decisions in Southeast Asia were entirely ours to make. All the discussion about a negotiated settlement of the war in Vietnam, so prevalent among Democrats on Capitol Hill, presumes that we have some solid position from which to negotiate. Talk of a coalition government and withdrawal of American forces presumes that some arrangement could be made that would prevent the Communists from overrunning a particularly strategic area of the world.

You find we are on the very edge of defeat in Vietnam when you cut through all the wishful thinking and the diplomatic doubletalk, and the Communists are calling the tunes.

Our action this past week in bombing staging areas in North Vietnam, for example was only a response to Communist action. If they hadn't made a move, we wouldn't have retaliated.

Since we are in the position of merely reacting to Communist moves, it behooves us to look ahead and see what the Communists are planning. We don't have far to look — just over to Thailand. Red China has made it plain that this pro-Western nation is her next objective in the war to subjugate all of Southeast Asia.

PEKING'S BLATANT announcement of a political movement dedicated to the overthrow of the Thai government in effect laid down the gauntlet for the United States. It virtually proclaims victory in Vietnam and says the next arena for Communist aggression is the strategic nation to the west. [illegible] makes the Communist objective painfully clear and says that whether we wish it or not the Asian war will be widened on Peking's terms.

The timing of the Red Chinese announcemtnt was particularly significant. It came at a time when our cause in Vietnam is at its lowest ebb. It was made to coincide with a visit by Soviet Premier Kosygin to Hanoi in North Vietnam and a visit by White House aide McGeorge Bundy to Saigon in South Vietnam. It was followed up by a particularly vicious Communist attack which left eight Americans dead and over 100 wounded.

PEKING MADE it plain that it is shooting for a complete takeover in Thailand. In addition to demanding the overthrow of this pro-Western government, the Red Chinese said they would insist upon Thailand's withdrawal from SEATO, the American-led defense alliance, the abolition of all treaties with the United States, and the expulsion of "all imperialist troops" in Thailand.

Thailand, formerly called Siam, has a population of some 26 million people. It has a strong and effective government. Its people are tough and have shown themselves capable of resisting Communist movements in the past. But in recent months there has been evidence of weakening in the face of stepped-up Communist activity in Vietnam and Laos.

If the United States enters into a negotiated settlement in Vietnam, the resistance of the Thais to Communist aggression will be weakened further. And that nation could become another Southeast Asia "domino" to fall under the domination of Peking.

Communists Seek Widening Of War

Charles de Gaulle's summons to a reform of the United Nations shows the fluidity of mind that distinguishes his thought from that of the four dogmatists who have led America since the San Francisco Conference, twenty years ago, that instituted that organically maladroit body. Our Presidents, and most of our would-be Presidents, are required to incant otherworldly testimonials to the United Nations, any criticism of which is set down as heresy. De Gaulle is confident enough of his own powers of analysis to say, bluntly, that the UN has failed, is failing, indeed that it has lost "all its prestige." And he suggests that something be done about it. "I wish to tell you frankly that, in my opinion, it is in a return to prudence and to the Charter that the United Nations can find a balance." What does he propose? A "five" power conference in Geneva to review the UN and set it right.

That last, of course, produced the twin explosion. We do not even recognize that Fifth Power, Red China — nor does the United Nations even admit it to membership. The Fifth Power according to UN hierarchy is not the Red China that de Gaulle would deal with, but the Nationalist Government of Chiang Kai-shek — the legitimate government of China, if legitimacy means anything after de facto rule by the Reds for 16 years.

BUT WHATEVER one thinks about the participation of Red China in such a conference, the idea itself is bracing: that a leader of men, undisputed leader of a major Western power, should utter words that slice through the iconography, permitting us to come away from that asphyxiating incense that clogs all thought on the United Nations, and breathe freely the rational air in which it must be acknowledged that the UN has become a great big Afro-Asian narcissistic mess. It commands, among rational folk, about as much respect as any organization ostensibly devoted to peace and decency would command which is given to a seizure of rage when a civilized country like Belgium swoops down into the heart of darkness for a few hours to deliver a few missionaries from the sanguinary clutches of Gbenye, latest hero of the revolutionary set in Africa and Asia.

De Gaulle gives us, then, this sense of the return to reason that is so revivifying after the long fix. Will, in fact, anything come of his proposal? Almost surely nothing formal, for he has wounded the pride of the President of the United States, for which there is no known cure. And of course de Gaulle made it politically difficult for the United States to accept the proposal by including Red China among the powers that should be invited to the conference. In doing so, one must suppose [illegible] knew that this suggestion alone would eliminate any chance that such a revisionary summit conference on the UN might be brought together.

HIS PURPOSE, then, must have been to weaken the existing United Nations while appearing to offer a constructive alternative. Since that alternative will be rejected, as I say, we are left merely with the criticism. But that criticism is an important step forward, in my judgment, in the long hard road ahead towards the renewal of sanity in our relations with the UN. When the time comes seriously to revise the UN Charter — or when that other time comes, when the UN will more or less wither away from desuetude, de Gaulle will have been largely responsible. He does indeed desire to precipitate the end of the UN as it currently exists.

What are his principal objections to it? For years he has referred to it scornfully as "les dites Nations Unies" — the so-called United Nations. That is his root criticism: that since the organization known as the United Nations is absolutely nothing of the sort, it should not behave as though that is what it is. Specifically, the so-called United Nations, which are disunited concerning every subject of controversy known to mankind, must not arrogate powers over dissenting members, which [illegible] has taken to doing with the dissipation of the authority of the Security Council. Must not, for instance, send expeditionary forces to the Congo against the desire of France, and assess France "her share" of the cost. France has no share of the cost, de Gaulle reasons, in any decision to which France is not a party.

Ain't Is So

Thoughts on living:

According to the doctors, you will live much long if you give up everything that makes you want to.

Live as if you expected to live a hundred years, but might die tomorrow.

Part of the world is living on borrowed time while the rest of it is living on borrowed money.

A good description of modern living: A senseless whirl which has been spelled in three words — Hurry, worry and bury.

Definiton For Love

Love is swell. It's so enticing.
It's orange Jell; It's strawberry icing.
It's chocolate russe; It's roasted Goose.
It's ham on rye; It's banana pie.
Love's all good things without a question,
In other words — it's indigestion.

A SIGN ON a service station in the Twin Cities: "If you have nothing to do, don't do it around this place."

THIS ONE FROM a friend: "A man and his wife were getting along fine — until the other day when she decided to return home."

How To Win Out

It may be that you don't like your minister. Well, the answer on how to get rid of him was sent in to us the other day by—of all things—a preacher friend. It goes something like this:

1. Look him straight in the eye when he's preaching, and maybe say "amen" occasionally. If this doesn't shock him to death, it will make him preach himself to death in a short time.
2. Start paying him whatever he's worth. Having been on starvation wages for years he'll promptly eat himself to death.
3. Shake hands with him, tell him he's doing a good job. He'll work himself to death.
4. Rededicate your own life to God and ask the minister to give you some church work to do. Very likely he'll keel over with heart failure.
5. If all else fails, this one is certain to succeed — get your congregation to unite in prayer for him. He will soon be so effective that some larger church will take him off your hands.

Any takers?

DEFINITION OF a banker — He is a man who will loan you money if you prove to him you don't need it.

Sunday Poem

A MINUTE

It's the time it takes to smile, or to give a warm hello.
It's the time it takes to say, "Well done."
It's the time it takes to sympathize.
Or avoid calling someone what he should be called.
It's the time it takes to cheer someone,
  Or make things better.
How much is a minute worth?
It's priceless or worthless — depending on how you use it.

This Age

Occasionally you run across a saying, or a poem that does a better job of describing an idea or thought than in any way you know. Here's one that struck our fancy about this age.

This is the age, of the half-read page,
And the quick has, and the mad dash,
And the bright night, with the nerves tight,
The plane hop, and the brief stop,
The lamp tan in a short span,
The big shot, and a good spot,
And the brain strain, and the heart pain,
And the cat naps, till the spring snaps -
And the fun's done, and then comes taps.

Civil Rights Sleeper

According to Insider's Newsletter, there's a sleeper in the civil rights affair. It says section 2 of the 14th Amendment says in effect that persons denied the right to vote cannot be included in census totals on which the apportionment of Congressional seats to individual states is based.

Since 1870 the clause has been ignored, but the NAACP legal defense fund wants to rescue it from oblivion. It has brought suit to compel Census Bureau compliance with the provision. If the suit proves successful, the NAACP estimates Southern states would either have to register their Negro residents or risk losing up to 19 representatives. Already in federal court, a decision is expected around March 1.

Note To Judges

A municipal judge in Albuquerque, N. M. has come up with a novel idea regarding successive traffic violations. It came about when 18-year-old Doug R. Godfrey was convicted of three traffic violations within two months. So Judge James A. Mahoney ordered the youth to carry a large sign on his car reading: "Beware, I am a traffic violator."

Said the judge: "I feel this is much more good than paying a fine, which I am not interested in, and more good than his possibly losing his life. Perhaps it will impress him with safety and impress others that see the sign."

At any rate, the judge is due an orchid for his efforts in trying to come up with something to help protect the public from those drivers who habitually flout the law and endanger the lives and limbs of innocent people.

And at that, it's not a bad idea.

Life Could Be Easy

Life can be annoying at times, but take the case of President Charles de Gaulle of France for example — if you think you have problems.

De Gaulle has told close friends that he is annoyed because his adversaries are not in his league. He believes Stalin was the last major figure he faced. Khrushchev, he considered an eccentric and the new Soviet leaders he sees as mere bureaucrats.

Then he complained: "That's all I find confronting me in the world these days. Bureaucrats, nothing more."

Some Conclusion From Around

DID YOU know it's easier to borrow money on a sunny than a rainy day. On a rainy day most people are so preoccupied with their own miseries they don't feel like helping anyone else . . .

A WISE MAN never makes a bet after midnight — or a third martini . . .

MUCH OF what passes for scholarship today is merely tedious gobbledygook and double - talk . . .

OFFICE BOYS now spend more time combing their hair than stenographers waste fixing their fingernails . . .

AND CHAUFFEURS of rented limousines wear the same mournful expression, whether their passengers are going to a funeral, a wedding, or a race track.

Deceptive Appearance

A wife reported this conversation recently:

Reading the poor marks on his son's report card, a father was very angry. "Don't be so hard on him, dear," said his wife smoothingly "I know the boy's trying, and — "

"Oh, it isn't the marks I mind so much," interrupted the father. "It's the deception. Why the dickens does he have to look so bright."

Life's Interesting Side

AIR TRAVEL, a report says, is giving business executives a new ailment — "jet plane strain." Some firms now warn their top men against holding important conferences after long flights until they have recovered from fatigue.

QUOTABLE NOTABLES — "I have found the best way to give advice to your children is to find our what they want to do and then advise them to do it." — Harry Truman.

A SURVEY HAS found that customers who stay 10 minutes or less in a supermarket spend $3.67, those who shop over 40 minutes spend $22.02. Note to one wife — Time alloted — 8 minutes.

SCIENCE HAS created a new telephoto lens that can pick out a golf ball eight miles away, but what the average golfing duffer wants to know is how he can hit one half that far. . .

IN CHINA pictures take the place of words. You have to have a vocabulary of at least 1,000 words to read a newspaper. College professors usually know 20,000 or more picture words.

How To Be Popular

The following item, typifying the usual concept of popularity, appeared not long ago in a high school student paper under the sober heading "Six Rules for Being Popular."

1. Own a car. 2. Be a good conversationalist. 3. Own a car. 4. Own a car. 5. Present a good personal appearance. 6. Own a car.

Note: If the car is a red convertible, rules 2 and 5 can be disregarded.

TWIN CITIES WEEK IN REVIEW

Weird Weather Source Of Woe

By RICHARD TYLER
World Staff Writer

Everybody talks about the weather, the man said, stating a plain and natural fact, and nobody ever does anything about it.

True enough. But if ever anybody intended to do anything, last week would have been the time to got the ball rolling.

The weather was bad. The weather was bad. (It bears repeating.)

It rained, sprinkled, poured and drizzled, and the Twin Cities couldn't have gotten wetter if they'd fallen asleep at the shower controls.

TYLER

In one day, Wednesday, rainfall totaled 1.77 inches, with 1.65 inches of it falling between 6 and 11 p.m. The Twin Cities absorbed 4.66 inches of rain between Saturday and Thursday alone.

Adding to the misery were erractic temperature fluctuations, highlighted by a sharp slump late in the week. The weekend forecast called for a slow rise in readings and, while we're pecking these notes Friday, we wouldn't be surprised to wind up reading in the rain today.

To say it rained up a storm Thursday is little more than a statement of fact. Tornadic winds pounded the Twin Cities on that day, along with most of northeast Louisiana, accompanied by the drenching rains that were by-then familiar. Hail was noted in some parts of the area, while the rain - driving local winds, timed at Selman Field, roared up to 65 m.p.h.

Property damage, confined almost entirely outside local limits, was reported, as were auto accidents, possibly attributable to the weather, which injured at least eight persons.

Actually the week started dourly, thanks largely to the type of weather we've so berated. Monroe set a new record when its police investigated a total of 31 auto crashes and collisions in a single day, many traceable to rain-slicked streets.

Fortunately, most were of the fender-bender variety, and only one person required hospital treatment. That lady — mainly bruised — was released in about two hours.

A different type of epidemic claimed attention early in the week, as well. Absenteeism spurted at several schools and many fell victim to influenza and related symptoms.

Both the City of Monroe and Ouachita Parish school superintendents maintained close touch with the situation, and the signs showed betterment by week's end. Average absenteeism, never pushing far past 10 per cent, the outer limit of the norm, apparently didn't becoming alarming, though at selected schools, it approached, at times, epidemic proportion.

Absenteeism

In the parish system, for example, absenteeism reached 19 per cent of enrollment at Claiborne School, Kiroli reached 18 per cent and Sterlington High School, 16 per cent. Officials termed 25 per cent absenteeism in the range of epidemic incidence. Among Negro schools, Robinson Elementary, by Thursday, pushed to 20 per cent, registering a one-day tumble in attendance of five per cent from Wednesday.

Teachers at many of the schools were harder hit, proportionally, than students.

Today, therefore, may be Valentine's Day, the property of Dan Cupid, but most of last week belonged to Zeus, the Thunderer.

If the weather lacked variety, however, the rest of the news didn't. There were dramatic turns in the long-running story of federal non-discrimination demands, the Ouachita Parish Police Jury created storms of its own, Louisiana Jaycees brought their annual state board meeting to town, other conventions were held, officers elected, an industry-seeking delegation went to Washington — and these were only a few of the dynamos humming.

But to begin at the beginning, it's been said that conformity is the virtue most in request in society. Apparently the request becomes a demand when that society would be a "Great Society."

At any rate, there were certainly no signs of softening in U.S. Health, Education & Welfare and Agriculture Department edicts calling for state and local compliance pledges on non-discrimination.

Probably the biggest splash in that story, locally, came Wednesday when Dist. Atty. Albin P. Lassiter released an opinion that no school board below the state level has power or authority "to enter into an agreement with any federal agency relative to funds for the school lunch program." It is in that program that most federal funds are expended for local uses.

He cited state laws. "It seems clear that the Legislature has vested full power and authority for furnishing school lunches to the State Board of Education."

In a relating development, Louisiana Atty. Gen. Jack Gremillion, earlier in the week restated, for Monroe's W. E. Whetstone and others, his opinion that no state laws forbid the State Board's signing a pledge, if it desires to do so. Whetstone, the board president, has said he will call a special meeting before the March 3 compliance deadline to arrive at a decision.

Local boards have been given the same deadline, it is understood, by the HEW Department, though they have until April 1 on the Agriculture Department's program, a heavy supplier of cafeteria commodities.

D-Day for the State Board is March 3 in both cases. Probably the next ball of yarn to unwind will be a decision as to whether signing at the state level — and there's been no firm indication this will be done — will obligate local boards to comply, or whether they can forfeit federal assistance independently.

A development Thursday would recommend the latter. Dr. T. N. Armistead, president of the State Board of Health, was in Monroe to brief regional health officials, police jurors and school board members on aspects of the pledge.

Noting that "in all probability" the high board will sign (it uses approximately $3 million in federal money a year, some $500,000 of it distributed direct to parishes), he said local health units were left the option of complying or withdrawing from federally-assisted projects.

Dr. Armistead's appearance was one of five at various points in the state concerning the compliance quandary.

Wednesday

Wednesday was a busy day, officially speaking, in the Twin Cities. The police jury held its regular meeting, and spring and summer tourism plans were unfolded as Louisiana Tourist Development Commission convened with key leaders in Monroe.

Perhaps the most attention-grabbing development with the jurors was one which resulted in no decision — bid openings on the purchase of a diesel tractor.

Bids were read late in the session and, though there were only three of them, five votes were called before the matter was held over. The problem, it seemed, was determination if the tractors being bid met specifications. The debate was traditionally heated.

The World In Focus

Reds Bid For Showdown

By John Cale

Retaliation

FOLLOWING THE acceleration of the Southeast Asian war's pace early last week, President Johnson promised continued air strikes in North Vietnam in retaliation to any major guerrilla strikes.

As news of subsequent developments reached the United States, including the Viet Cong attack with hand-carried explosives on an American troop billet in Qui Nhon, it became fairly obvious that the United States intended to carry out a policy of "raid for raid."

The week saw at least three occasions where U. S. land and carrier based planes backing up Vietnamese bombers roared northward to attack communist training areas and supply points.

REEDY

Washington newsmen, seeking all available news relating to the Vietnamese flareup, pelted President Johnson's press secretary, George E. Reedy, with questions. But obviously, as has been the case in tense military situations throughout history, he can't break tightened security rulings.

In Summary

SO WITH increased secrecy and tension, analysts began seeking signs — also a custom dating all the way back to antiquity. Nohting specific may have turned up in news paralleling releases on the fighting. But there was little doubt that the exposure of American-fighting men to increased dangers led the parade of events; all else hinged on this fact.

FOR EXAMPLE, the stock market closed sharply lower Thursday in the wake of reports of the U. S. air strike in North Vietnam. Observers believed the decline resulted from uncertainty about the general course of events in Southeast Asia coupled with the lack of any real "correction" in its rise to recent heights.

The Dow Jones average of 35 industrial stocks was down 11.09, with most of the decline coming late in the day. It was the sharpest drop in the closing average since the 21.16 point sag on November 22, 1963, the day the late President John Kennedy was assassinated.

BY FRIDAY morning, however, the figures revealed most losses were turning toward stability and regain.

OTHER EVENTS could only amaze and confound those who read and interpret signs. Beatle drummer Ringo Starr took an 18-year-old bride, a hairdresser. Plenty of material there, if she's the reformer type.

BY THE TIME this appears, the close results in the United Steelworkers Union election held Tuesday may be known. At this writing, the challenger I. W. Abel held a slim lead over incumbent David J. McDonald for President of USW.

LANGUAGE DIFFICULTIES fanned outbreaks in Madras, India, on the heels of that state's decision to adopt Hindi as the official language. The edict sparked bloody uprisings among student and anti-Hindi groups who are continuing the struggle for an independent, Tamil-speaking nation in Madras.

COMPLICATIONS IN the diplomatic relations involving West Germany, East Germany, Israel and Egypt resulted in a reported West German decision to halt arms shipments to Israel.

Soviet Premier Kosygin, whose appearance in North Vietnam happened to coincide with stepped-up guerrilla activities against South Vietnamese and American military units, continued his Asian tour with a visit to North Korea.

IN CALABASAS, California, they had to uproot and move a century-old "Hangman's Tree" to make way for the route of a Saturn II moon rocket to its test site. The tree is an historical monument and cannot be destroyed. Both the rocket and the hanging site share a common process — a tense countdown prior to the scheduled activity.

AND IN ATLANTIC CITY, New Jersey, Alexander Calandra, professor of physics at Washington University, St. Louis, told a group of newspaper education writers that in many instances, the public was being sold "a bill of goods" regarding "new" math and science programs.

Also In Washington

IN THE STRANGE new kind of war being fought in Viet Nam, detailed military shots are being called in Washington as never before in history.

This is because each military move against the communists outside the borders of South Vietnam is loaded with potential for bringing on a big-scale war.

In pre-atomic days, military commanders directed military operations once the fighting began. This was true in Korea, too, although a decision against carrying the war north of the Yalu into Red China was made by President Harry S. Truman.

THE ADVENT OF the Kennedy administration brought to power a group of civilians, led by Secretary of Defense Robert S. McNamara, who believed in the idea of controlled response to Communist threats and actions.

The aim was to keep a tight reign on military moves, to tailor the response, to the threat, and to limit any clash to the lowest level possible.

The objective was to minimize the danger of accidental war, to prevent a situation from getting out of hand and escalating into general war — into a war that might lead ultimately to a dreaded nuclear exchange.

FOR ALL THE SURPRISES that have occurred during the past week — including the suicidal Red assault on the Qui Nhon hotel and the reportedly heavy air-strike retaliation — this so-called "tit-for-tat" policy set by McNamara is apparently still being followed.

Matter Of Concern

CLEVELAND

WHILE THE VIETNAMESE crisis was a matter of justifiable concern to President Johnson and other high level officials, Representative James C. Cleveland of New Hampshire told of an encounter of a type which has grown all too common in the nation's larger cities.

The congressman, a veteran of two wars and many a political battle, went outside his Washington home — located near the Naval Observatory — to see if he could aid a woman who had screemed in distress. He was forced back into his house by a man slashing at him with a long knife.

"My wife heard this woman screaming. I didn't at first. I went out," Cleveland said.

"A man was carrying this woman down the street in his arms. I yelled at the top of my voice, figuring the sound of a human voice might stop him.

HE SAID THE MAN put the woman down and she walked toward a car parked at the curb where another man was standing. The man at the car suddenly lunged at Cleveland with a knife, the congressman said, adding he backed into his house and slammed the door behind him.

Revealing

MORE SPECULATION than substance could be the estimate of value placed on an account in the West German magazine, Der Stern (The Star), in which American journalist Edgar Snow interviewed Red China's Mao Tse-Tung.

But in view of the times and the accompanying search for signs, here is a gist of the interview:

SNOW, 59, has known the Red Chinese leaders since the early days of their revolution in the 1930's. He is the only American writer who has had access to Mao and other top leaders in Peking in recent years.

According to Der Stern:

Snow asked Mao whether Red China would intervene in Viet Nam.

MAO REPLIED THAT Red China was not maintaining any troops abroad and had no intention of fighting anyone abroad, as long as Red Chinese territory was not attacked.

That, Mao continued, is why he excluded any possibility of war between the United States and Red China over Viet Nam.

Mao also claimed that U. S. Secretary of State Dean Rusk had declared that the United States would not attack Red China.

MAO CLAIMED that many South Vietnamese troops "trained and armed by the Americans—enlisted men, officers and even maybe generals—are deserting to the Viet Cong."

Asked when he thinks the war in Viet Nam will come to an end, Mao replied that he believes the Americans will lose interest in the war "in one or two years."

Dock Strike

THE INTERNATIONAL Longshoremen's Association rejected a bid Friday for a complete settlement of the 33-day dock strike, but ordered longshoremen back to work in all but two ports.

Representatives of the Atlantic and Gulf areas, primarily the ports at Miami and Galveston, rejected a proposal by federal mediators for settlement in their areas.

However, minutes later, Thomas W. Gleason, president of the AFL-CIO union, said he had ordered longshoremen back to work in all other Atlantic and Gulf ports where agreements already had been reached.

THE SHIPPERS ACCEPTED the federal mediators' proposal, which called for an over-all back-to-work movement while negotiations continued under a mediator appointed by the presidential panel.

Ralph A. Massey, president of the International Longshoremen's Association's South Atlantic and Gulf Coast District, said the longshoremen agreed to continue negotiations but would not end their strike.

THE RESPONSE came only minutes before the 12 noon deadline set by Johnson for a report on the last-ditch effort to mediate the strike.

Foreign Affairs

THE UNITED STATES does not appear to be directly involved in the diplomatic hocus - pocus last week that saw West Germany turn away from an arms shipment to Israel program. But along with the crisis in the Far East, this is a development that cannot be overlooked.

The inclination of the U. S. State Department to try and push past Congress and public opinion generally in continuing aid to Nasser is curious enough.

But now, the unexplained "goodwill gestures" from Bonn to the United Arab Republic have raised more than questions. In the past, West Germany has drawn fire for "missile scientists" sent to serve as Nasser's military advisers. But last week's account revealed that West Germany had also worked for Israeli friendship through an $80-million arms program.

Approximately 80 per cent of these had been delivered when Cairo announced Wednesday that Bonn had agreed to call a halt.

IN BONN, CHANCELLOR Erhard refused to be pinned down on when the arms shipments would stop. He told a questioner he would not date it from today, nor would he define areas of tension, saying he could not foresee all possible situations.

Erhard also spoke sharply about U. A. R. President Gamal Abdel Nasser's invitation to Walter Ulbricht, head of the East German Communist regime. This had come, he said, in spite of the friendship West Germany has cultivated with the United Arab Republic and other Arab states.

AS A RESULT of the invitation, he said, the West German government is bound to reconsider its relations with Cairo.

Erhard said his government has no intention of giving up the principle under which it threatens to break off diplomatic relations with any country that establishes full diplomatic relations with the East Germans. He recalled that his principle was applied in Cuba and Yugoslavia.

Wedding Of Week

RINGO STARR, 24, the Beatles off-beat drummer, surfaced from the depths of a honeymoon hideaway Friday and said: "Marriage — I think it's wonderful — especially after 25 hours."

RINGO

Ringo wed Maureen Cox, 18, in London Thursday morning.

Ringo stood in the garden of a house close by the English Channel with his arm around his bride. Both shivered in the chilly north wind.

RINGO SAID he had a more-or-less secret wedding because he feared that if he had let the date be known the ceremony might have been spoiled by too many fans.

"I hope I didn't disappoint them, but a wedding is a rather serious thing and we didn't want to make a circus out of it."

Reds Bid Also From Britain

A MORE SERIOUS note from England stated that Sir Winston Churchill bequeathed an estate worth 156,961 pounds — $439,490.80 — mainly to his wife and three children in a will made public Friday.

A far greater sum is thought to have been poured into a trust fund which Sir Winston, the will disclosed, set up for his children and grandchildren in 1946.

ASSOCIATES BELIEVE the former prime minister's income from his writings since World War II alone exceeded $2.8 million. Virtually all of it went into the trust fund, which is exempt from estate taxes. The fund is known as the Chartwell Literary Trust and is named after Churchill's country home in Kent.

A lawyer who handles it confirmed that Churchill's children — actress Sarah, Mrs. Christopher Mary Soames and journalist Randolph Churchill — and grandchildren are "provided for" by the trust income. He declined however, to give any hint as to the total amount of the trust.

The estate held by the 90 - year - old statesman when he died on January 24 after a stroke included his London residence at 28 Hyde Park Gate and the valuable new chapel stud farm near the Lingfield race track in Surrey. Sir Winston sold Chartwell to a group of friends in 1946, but retained life tenancy. Soames, Mary's husband, was bequeathed an option to buy the stud farm.

THE GROSS ESTATE, before payment of debts and estate taxes, $851,233.20. The estate tax was $305,460.40. A third goes to the widow, Lady Clementine Churchill, and the other two-thirds is divided equally between the three children.

The will left $28,000 to Anthony Montague Browne, Churchill's private secretary since 1956. Bequests ranging from $560 to $1,820 went to seven other secretaries and household employes.

Need An Anti-Tank Gun? Maybe Grenade Launcher's The Weapon

By BERNARD GAVZER

NEW YORK (AP) — For a short time after three anti-Castro Cubans fired a bazooka round at the United Nations building in December there was a wariness on the part of clerks in surplus Army and Navy stores.

A stranger trying to buy disarmed bazooka shells or light mortars found shopkeepers abrupt or evasive.

But it was soon back to business as usual. In one store, the clerk eyed the customer and they talked about World War II trophies and then the clerk said:

"I got a British mortar from World War II, worth $50 right out of the case. I'll give you a good deal on it; it takes up too much room and I got to clear my space. Go upstairs and see it."

It turned out to be a British grenade launcher. The price was $15.60. A grenade launcher cannot be tucked under a coat and yet few New Yorkers seemed startled at the sight of a man lugging one along a business street in the late afternoon.

The fact is that almost anyone can buy almost any kind of military hardware or firearms almost anywhere in the United States.

He can be bent on assassination or he can be a Cuban exile bent on bombarding the United Nations.

All that is needed is money.

It has been argued that having a souvenir mortar or bazooka doesn't mean anything. Not until there is ammunition, and that is what is hard to come by.

"Any high school boy can go to a drug store and buy potassium chlorate, saltpeter, sulphur and charcoal and make black powder," said an Army weapons expert. "With this explosive, he can take a disarmed hand grenade or mortar round and make it an active missile. There are simple techniques by which this can be done."

The purchase of high-powered rifles and ammunition involves little difficulty.

TRY WEAPONS

In the gun department of one store the clerk spoke highly of a five-shot automatic Winchester .243-caliber rifle, which he said was "good for varmits, white tail deer and target firing."

Realizing he was dealing with a novice, he said, "There are four rounds in the clip and one in the chamber. This is a capital gun." The price was $155.

At a discount house, the clerk permitted some practice holding of a four-shot, bolt-action Savage ($97.89) and a seven-shot Marlin 30-30 ($69.89) and raised no objection when the weapons were aimed at light fixtures and the trigger was pulled several times.

"That Savage is a good piece, isn't it:" the clerk said. "I'd like to hunt with it myself."

All that is required besides the purchase price is the signing of a statement that the purchaser is 18 or older, is not a convict, does not plan to overthrow the government, and is not under indictment for a felony.

In New York, ordinary citizens are prohibited from possessing a pistol or revolver, even if they keep it locked in a dresser drawer and never fire it. Still, it is easy to buy ammunition.

In a store, this exchange recently occurred:

"I'd like to buy some ammunition for a Czechoslovakian pistol. It's a 6.75, I think. Would you have any?"

"Let me check it." The clerk looked through a chart. "That's .32 caliber. I may get some 6.75 in a few days, if you want."

"Okay, how much will it be?"

"About $4 a box."

The clerk did not seem surprised or curious about anyone buying pistol ammunition in a city that prohibits having such a weapon.

For the person who shops by mail or who has access to large firms dealing in weapons and arms, there seems to be relatively little limit as to what can be purchased.

One mail order house aimed at the he-man among men, offering an anti-tank rifle for $119.95, and ammunition at $9.95 for 10 rounds.

The ad pictured a 20 mm Lathi rifle and the text said: "We defy any weakling to own one — because it is only a MAN'S gun!"

Another advertised an "original GI 60-mm mortar complete with sight, base plate, and mount ready for firing or a place in your military collection." It was $49.95.

Still another had a special: "i-mm rifle for only $6.66 ea."

This free-and-easy purchase and possession of everything from a palm-size .22 pistol to a 20 mm anti-tank rifle has been attacked as posing a danger to society.

In the forefront of the attack is Sen. Thomas J. Dodd, D-Conn., chairman of the Senate subcommittee on juvenile delinquency. Sen. Dodd introduced a bill Jan. 6 which would impose restrictions upon the manufacturer, dealer, common carrier and purchaser of firearms. He has expressed especial concern about the mail order gun business.

Rep. John V. Lindsay, R-N.Y. has said he also will introduce a bill to tighten gun laws. He said he did not intend any legislation which would deny the rights of the sportsman or the gun collector.

"I want to make it clear that this would not infringe upon the constitutional right to bear arms nor that a legally competent person would be denied the right to purchase a gun," he said.

The constitutional right is stated this way in the Second Amendment, which is part of the Bill of Rights:

"A well regulated militia being necessary to the security of a free state, the right of the people to keep and bear arms shall not be infringed."

PROPOSAL OPPOSED

The reaction to new proposed regulations was explosive.

In the vanguard is the National Rifle Association, which claims a membership of 670,000. The NRA says it is basically "opposed to proposals to license the possession or purchase of a firearm."

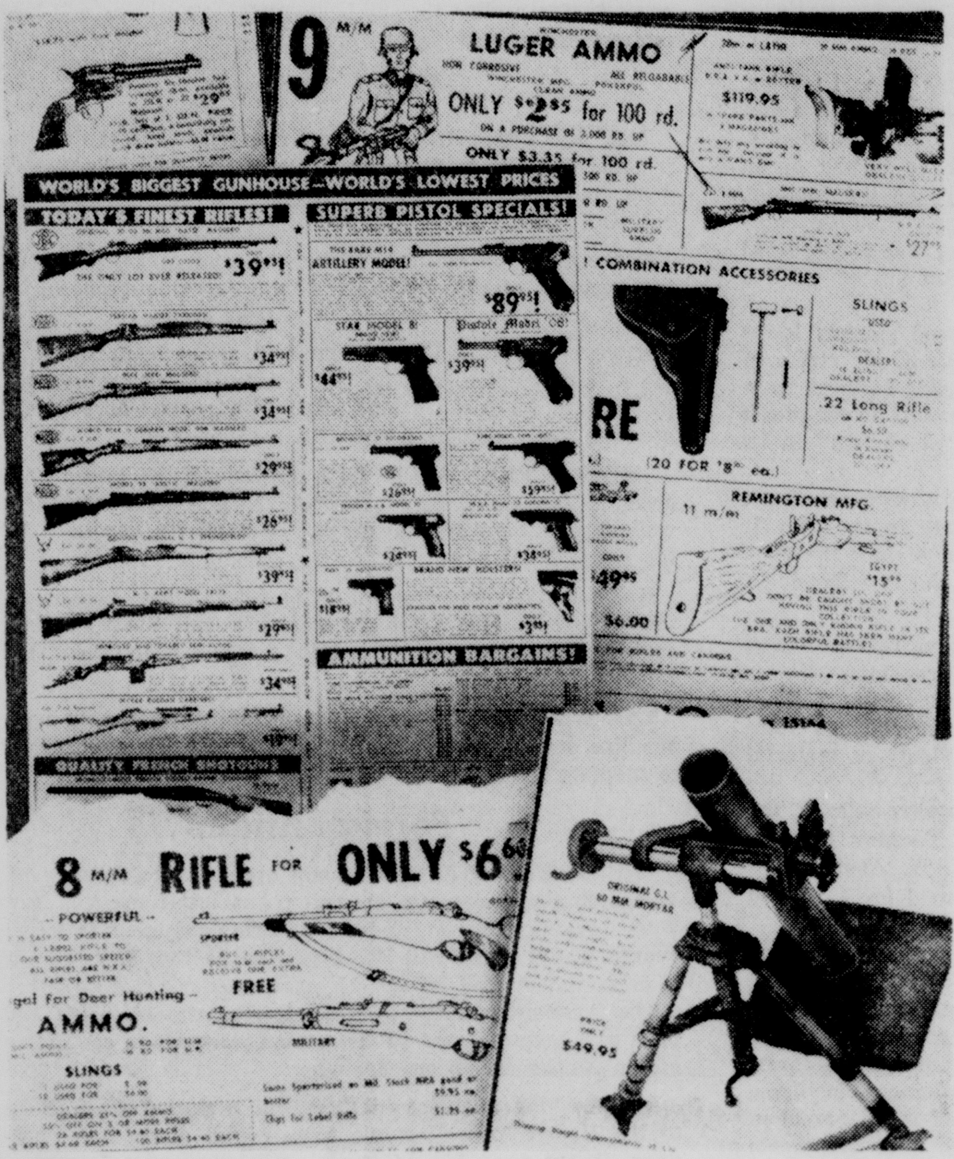
"The inevitable result of such licensing regulations, whether it be by permit system, police authentication or the like," said Franklin L. Orth, NRA executive vice president, "is to vest the arbitrary power to say who may and who may not own a gun in the hands of an appointed or elected official."

Critics of the so-called gun lobby also question the arrangement under which rifle clubs affiliated with the NRA obtain ammunition from the Defense Department. More than 60 million rounds are dispensed this way each year. New York City police expressed concern when it was found that a rifle club in Harlem had stored 12,000 rounds of .30-caliber ammunition in basements of the homes of club members. The club had only 30 members.

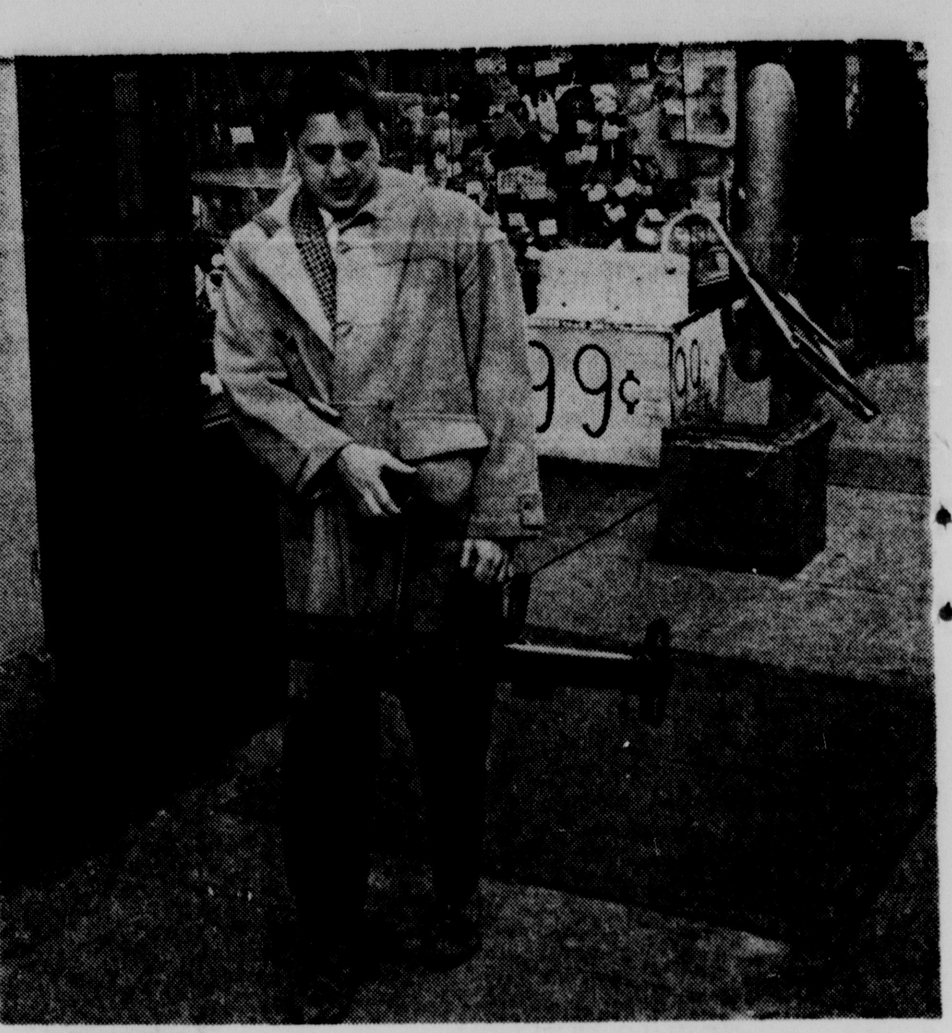
The Defense Department's Office of Civilian Marksmanship, which more or less shepherds the ammunition distribution program, says that good marksmanship is vital to the defense and security of the nation.

Gun people say that without the hunter there could be serious threat to farm crops and forest land by an animal population explosion.

While the sportsmen and legislators argue, the surplus and mail order dealers keep briskly at business. And so the casual man can get himself a bazooka or an old cannon or even a recoilless gun.



ADS LIKE THESE offer many types of guns and ammunition in specialty publications in the United States. At bottom left is a mail order ad with the statement which must be sent for purchase of a weapon by mail — a condition not considered a bar by critics of easy sale of guns. With a few exceptions, almost anyone in the U.S. can buy weapons and ammunition or its ingredients, and million's of Americans own rifles, shotguns or handguns. (AP Newsfeatures Photo)



TURNING THIS World War II souvenir into a deadly weapon is a matter of a simple part and a bit of easy know-how to make ammunition, says AP Newsfeatures writer Bernard Gavzer. He carried the British-made grenade launcher after buying it for $15.60 at an Army-Navy type surplus goods store in New York. A recently introduced Senate bill to control the weapons trade has reactivated arguments for and against easy purchase of guns. (AP Newsfeatures Photo)

Common But Expensive

Signs Of The Roads --- And Replacing Them

By FRANCES PHILLIPS
Staff Writer

What do you think about highway signs? These signs have become so commonplace on today's roads that they go virtually unnoticed unless a driver is consciously seeking directions.

But here around Monroe, most local motorists, traveling in familiar territory probably just glance at such signs without thinking very much about them

To one small group of men, however highway signs are one of the most important things in their lives.

They know, for instance, that in Ouachita Parish alone, there is an average of more than 20 signs per mile of road.

They are also aware that taxpayers in Ouachita and eight surrounding parishes spend more than $95,000 each year to maintain these signs.

For these man, maintenance is practically synonomous with repair and replacement, for that's how they spend most of their time — fixing damaged signs.

The worst aspect of the whole situation is that the great majority of their work is unnecessary — or would be except for what they describe as "sheer malicious vandalism."

These men are employes of the Louisiana Department of Highways, stationed at the District 05 headquarters here in Monroe, and spending most of their working hours dealing with signs.

District Engineer A. A. Braddock, along with all his other responsibilities, is concerned about the sign problem and the money that is being spent as vandals continue to deface signs as fast as the highway department can install them.

A few of the signs, naturally, are damaged by wrecks and other accidents, but this number is practically nothing when compared to those ruined deliberately, whether by maliciousness of mere thoughtlessness.

BULLET RIDDLED SIGN

One of the prime examples Braddock used to illustrate his concern was a sign reading, "Slow — School" that had been shot up with a high-powered rifle.

About three-quarters of a million dollars is invested in signs in this highway district, according to local figures.

An inventory of the nine-parish area listed about $432,720 worth of signs, not including Interstate-20 projects. A partial amount for I-20 signs, not counting the portion from Calhoun to West Monroe, is estimated at almost $300,000. The I-20 figures, according to highway officials, will increase from year to year.

Most of the signs used in District 05 are prepared at the local shop. A few of the signs, for instance those used on Interstate-20, are sent to Monroe already completed.

The familiar red, white and blue I-20 emblems are made by a silk-screen process, but the locally-made signs are faced with a material called Scotchlite.

This material is supplied to the local shop in sheets of different colors. It is applied to the metal sign faces by a special heat procedure.

The blank metal signs, which are received from Baton Rouge, are covered with the Scotchlite to provide a durable, weather-proof surface.

The material resembles a bumper sticker in that it has one sticky surface protected by a thin sheet, which is peeled off before the Scotchlite is placed on the sign.

Both the background color and the numbers or letters can be applied at the same time, if desired. Highway officials said they use only one step on some signs and two steps on others, depending on the individual work.

The numbers used on speed limit signs, for example, are received by the local office in large stacks, and are applied here. The speed limit signs, however, are shipped to Monroe complete except for the numbers. Shop crewmen simply peel off the necessary numerals, say "3", and "0" for a 30 mile-per-hour zone, and lay them on the sign, place it in the applicator and turn on the heat. In a matter of minutes the numbers are permanently applied to the sign.

MOSTLY METAL

The vast majority of highway signs are metal, but occasionally a wooden sign will be made for a "rush" situation. The Scotchlite can be applied to "any clean surface," signmen said, so that a wooden sign would be handled in the same manner as a metal sign.

Damaged signs that can be repaired also undergo treatment at the Monroe shop. The existing surface is removed with a special chemical, the metal is restored to as near its original condition as possible, and a new face is applied. Highway signs in the nine parishes of District 05 total approximately $95,300 each year.

This figure includes labor, equipment rental and material for the district, which is composed of Ouachita, Lincoln, Union, Jackson, Morehouse, West Carroll, East Carroll, Richland and Madison Parishes.

Thirteen men are employed as full-time workers on sign maintenance. Buddy Hammonds, district sign traffic superintendent, heads three road crews and a shop crew, each composed of three men.

The shop crew, of course, is based at district headquarters here in Monroe, along with one road crew, which covers Ouachita, Richland and Morehouse Parishes. The crew working out of Ruston is responsible for Lincoln, Union and Jackson Parishes, while the Lake Providence group takes care of East and West Carroll and Madison Parishes.

The crews are responsible for patrolling their territories and keeping the signs in good condtiion. Damaged or defaced signs are brought to the shop in Monroe for repairs.

This maintenance amounts to quite an extensive undertaking, since there are almost 2,040 miles of road in the district and 28,788 signs. This figures average out to 14-plus signs per mile throughout the nine parishes. Ouachita Parish has a higher percentage than the district, with an average of 21 signs per mile of road.

The frequency of road signs increases even more in and around Monroe and West Monroe. Just for example, the 10.3 miles of U. S. Hwy. 80 eastward from the Louisville-DeSiard intersection to the Richland Parish line at Bayou LaFourche containes 229 signs.

Signs are still more abundant on the portion of U. S. 80 from this same intersection westward to the Lincoln Parish line. This stretch of road is 20.5 miles in length and contains 714 signs.

While it is true that local and area drivers who know their way around will scarcely look at these signs, travelers and tourists would have a far more difficult time without them.

Try really noticing all the different guiding and warning signs one day, then try imagining what the roads would look like without them.

CURTAIN CALL

By JACQUE BIEGENWALD

Advance ticket sales for "Sound of Music" are brisk, with mail orders coming in every day and the telephone in our box office ringing steadily. From all indications, this show will be a sell-out.

And with good reason. It is one of the best, if not the best, musical written in recent years, running longer than any other on Broadway since "My Fair Lady."

Rodgers and Hammerstein, who are tops in the writing of music, produced a covey of winners for this show. From the opening scene where four nuns sing in perplexion, "How Do You Solve A Problem Like Maria?" to the final, spine-tingling close, "Climb Every Mountain," it is good, honest hummable music.

ENCHANTING CHILDREN

It's an axiom in show business that one should never follow a dog or child act, for the simple reason that no one can top them. "Sound of Music" is proof of that if ever proof were needed. We don't have any dogs in the show, but there are seven of the most enchanting children seen on our stage in a long time.

You'll smile, chuckle and wish you could take everyone home with you as they romp through, "Do-Re-Me," "Goodnight, Farewell," and "The Lonely Goatherd." Each of their songs is punctuated by their lively governess, Maria, played so professionally by Camille Wood.

There have been several changes and additions to the cast list of "Sound of Music." It now reads: Maria—Camille Wood, Captain von Trapp — Bill Blythe, Sister Berthe — Nancy Franklin, Sister Margaretta — Donna Barber, Mother Abbess — Barbara Addison, Sister Sophia — Doris Youngblood.

Rolf Gruber — Ken Garrison, Elsa Schraeder — Charlotte Turpin, Ursula — Betsy Taylor, Max Detweiler — V. P. Dalrymple, Herr Zeller — Dennis Cooke, Admiral von Schriber — Garland Moore, Franz — Hugh Matthews, Frau Schmidt — Jacque Biegenwald, Baroness Eberfeld — Marillyn Taylor, Baron Eberfeld — Don Lomax, and John Goorley as a guest.

The von Trapp children are Liesl — Jeannie Taylor, Friedrick — Steve White, Louisa — Lynette Cage, Kurt — Forrest Files, Brigitta — Sunny Meriwether, Marta — Desha Swayze, and Gretl — Courtney Swayze.

Comprising the nuns chorus are Gayle Smith, Anne Hodge, Patricia Derrick, Patty Shoudy, Paulette Butler, Anita Womack, Kay Harris, Harriet Adams and Beverly Ernst.

RESERVATION

If you haven't sent your reservation form (from the mailer) back by now, please do so immediately. We try very hard to give everyone seats he wants, but as opening night approaches, it becomes increasingly difficult as all the most wanted places are filled by then. Or, you may call the theater at 323-1235. As we've reported before, performance dates are Feb. 19 through Feb. 28.

Our wardrobe department had a problem last week — a wedding scene between the principals, Maria and Captain von Trapp — and no wedding dress for Maria.

We didn't have such a sumptuous item in our wardrobe room, and a great deal of deep thinking didn't produce a solution.

Then, like a gift from heaven, the Rev. and Mrs. W. Bradley Trimble called to ask if they could donate one! The Rev. Trimble, who is rector of Grace Episcopal Church, had been given the dress by a former Parishioner. And, as is fitting for such a story, it fit Camille as perfectly as though it were her own. Needless to say, we're very grateful to the Trimbles for the gift.

Even with all the excitement of preparing for opening night we always enjoy hearing news of old friends and other Little Theaters.

Henry Haas Jr. had an opportunity to see "My Fair Lady" in Houston recently, a production of their Little Theater. With pardonable pride, Henry reports that it was good, but just couldn't compare with our show last summer.

Bob Evans received word last week that Brenda Madden, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Jack Madden, is appearing as one of the children in the Brevard (N.C.) Little Theater production of "The King and I." Brenda moved from Monroe to N.C. about two years ago. While here, Jack was active in our Theater, serving as a board member, treasurer and vice-president in charge of administration.

Sara Womack stopped in to watch rehearsals of "Sound of Music," and told us the exciting news that she is planning to be married this summer. Sara is doing graduate work in speech and hearing therapy at the University of Ohio, where she will finish in June.

Norma Brandle lettered seven new tile in our Green Room last week. We're always so proud of Norma's elegant work and are very appreciative of her contribution to Strauss Playhouse.

A PORTABLE movie light brings illumination where it is needed, conveniently. Here's the Cine-Jet portable light outfit hooked up with an 8mm Bauer Electric S camera on a gray day at the zoo. The movie maker can follow the action indoors or outdoors and provide the light he needs without being tied to an electric outlet.

CAMERA ANGLES

Several Devices Are Introduced

By IRVING DESFOR
AP Newsfeatures

Several New photo items might prove interesting to camera fans:

For one thing, there's a new portable movie light that has interchangeable, rechargeable batteries. This provides movie makers with a convenient source of illumination at events and in places where there is no electric outlet handy. Offhand one thinks of the movie possibilities at night at sports events, fairs, carnivals and at beach, picnic, ice skating and ski parties when the light is too dim to shoot normally.

BATTERY CAPACITY

The Ultrablitz-Bauer Cine-Jet packs enough light in a single on-the-shoulder battery unit to shoot about 100 feet of 8mm film. For further filming, like a wedding, for instance, the battery can be replaced with a fresh one in a matter of seconds. Each battery can then be recharged overnight in 12 hours.

Is the unit really portable? The lamp head alongside the camera weighs less than a pound; the battery unit is about five pounds.

As for the light output: it is 3400 K and can reach distances up to about 13 feet for best results. At that distance it requires an f-1.8 lens opening with ASA40 color film. Artificial type color film should be used, of course.

As a portable light, the Cine-Jet may have great appeal for commercial and industrial photographers as well as for amateurs. I think the unit could have been greater versatility if it were also usable on AC current at any time needed instead of solely on battery use.

NEW CAMERA

Breaking precedent for the first time in its 37-year life, the Rollei Company of West Germany has introduced a new camera which departs from its twin-lense reflex principle. At hand is the Rollei, 16, a subminiature camera with electric eye, automatic shuter speed and lens aperture control. It requires special 16mm film cassettes and at present only two films are available: black and white Plus X (ASA 125) and Kodachrome 11 daylight (ASA 25). They yield 18 pictures on each roll of film, each one measuring 12 by 17mm.

The Rollei 16 has an f-2.8 Zeiss Tessar lens for which accessory Mutar lenses will be available for wide-angle and telephoto shooting. The built-in exposure control selects shutter speeds from 1-30 to 1-1500 and lens apertures down to f-22. Time exposures and flash shooting is also provided for.

NEW BOOKS

Turning to new books, we find a poetic essay on the little French town of Lourdes by Shirley Burden (Doubleday, $7.50).

It reveals how a sensitive photographer wanders through the area capturing people, moods and details of fields, rocks and river. These images are then blended together with a minimum of words to evoke the spirit of the religious fervor which attracts thousands annually to this shrine.

Photographs by Shirley Burden (a Mr. not a Miss) have previously been exhibited in New York's Metropolitan Museum and Museum of Modern Art, the Tokyo Museum and other galleries throughout the world.

'MARDI GRAS'

NEW YORK (AP) — Guy Lombardo's next production at the 8,200-seat Jones Beach Marine Theater is to be "Mardi Gras," a musical with a New Orleans setting.

Sir Herzig wrote the story, which spans from 1814 to the present, and songs are being written by Carmen Lombardo and John Jacob Loeb. A main performer in the exhibit, which opens June 26 and runs to Sept. 5, is Robert Clary, who appeared the past two summers at Jones Beach in "Around the World in 80 Days."

STARTS TRAVELING

NEW YORK (AP) — Australia is the first overseas country to get a production of "Hello, Dolly!" Starring in the production, which opens March 27, is Carole Cook, a west coast protege of Lucille Ball.

The hit Broadway musical's down-under version is being directed by Fred Hebert, an associate in Frederick Brisson Productions, who previously staged "The Pajama Game" in Sydney.

EMPHASIS ON HAYDN

EDINBURGH (AP) — Opera and concert segments are being lined up for the Edinburgh International Festival, Aug. 22. to Sept. 11.

The first British Isles performance of "Le Pescartici" on the opera stage will highlight emphasis on music by Haydn. Several symphonic programs featuring his work are also planned.

Other operas are to include Mozart's "Don Giovanni," Benjamin Britten's "Albert Herring" and Offenbach's "La Belle Helene."

Featured performers are to include the Hamburg Radio Symphony, the Netherlands Chamber Orchestra; Claudio Arrau, John Ogden, Yvonne Loriod and Wanda Wolkomirska.

Joint Drive Is Urged On Drink Evils

By LOUIS CASSELS
United Press International

The time has come, says a Methodist leader, for teetotallers to join forces with moderate users of alcohol in "a tough campaign to make drinking and driving socially unacceptable."

The proposal comes from Roger Burgess, an executive of the Methodist Church's Division of Alcohol Problems and General Welfare.

The Methodist Church teaches total abstinence, and has tended in the past to shy away from cooperative endeavors with groups that condone moderate drinking.

OF ONE MIND

Burgess points out, however, that all religious bodies are of one mind about drinking and driving. It is a dangerous and irresponsible practice, and causes about half of all highway deaths.

Burgess proposes that churches enlist the aid of civic clubs, business, labor unions, schools and official agencies in "an intensive public information campaign to condemn all driving after drinking." The campaign, he says, should include "strict enforcement of present drinking and driving laws with special traffic checks."

OPPOSE EDICT

The national Catholic magazine America has called for repeal of Canon 1374, the church law which says that Catholic children must attend Catholic schools.

America emphasized in an editorial that it's all in favor of sending Catholic children to Catholic schools. But it said it should be left to the voluntary desire of Catholic parents rather than be made a legal obligation.

In actual fact, the Jesuit-edited weekly said, Canon 1374 is both unenforceable and unnecessary, because "there are not enough Catholic schools to accommodate all Catholic children." The real problem, it said, is not forcing parents to send their children to parochial schools but turning away those who are "pounding on the doors" seeking admission.

IS DESCRIBED

The Phenomenon Of Glossolalia

By GEORGE W. CORNELL
AP Religion Writer

He was standing at the door of the ballroom in Philadelphia's Bellevue-Stratford Hotel when a strange feeling came over him.

"It was as if somebody had poured warm oil over me, all through my body," Laurence Hammond, an Illinois mining engineer, related. "There was an electric quality about it."

Inside the ballroom a convention of the Full Gospel Businessmen's Fellowship had been going on, and Hammond had listened to delegates tell of the Holy Spirit gripping them and speaking through them.

And then, he recounted, as he lingered outside the door, puzzled by the world affair, as first happened to him. "It was like being bathed in love," he said.

Hammond, an Episcopalian, is one of thousands lately to report experiencing glossolalia — "speaking with tongues."

The phenomenon—once common only in Pentecostal churches — has recently sprung up in many congregations of traditional denominations, Methodists, Baptists, Lutherans, Episcopalians, Presbyterians.

RESEARCH STARTED

A federally supported research project to investigate the psychological and linguistic aspects of tongues-speaking has been started at Lutheran Medical Center in Brooklyn.

Hammond, 56, of Glencoe, Ill., general manager of the Tonuco managnese mines in New Mexico and onetime special assistant on the War Manpower Commission, said the experience brings a sense of immense happiness.

"I never knew what joy meant before," he said in an interview. "It's a wonderful thing. And then a great peace settles over you and you feel a great willingness and boldness to talk about Jesus Christ."

When it first happened to him at that ballroom doorway six years ago, he said, he originally felt simply a strong urge to pray, and he started murmuring, "Praise the Lord. Amen. Bless the Lord."

FELT LIFTED UP

But that didn't sound right somehow, he recalled, and then that blissful ocean of warmth suffused him, and, "I felt lifted up from the floor about two feet. I felt a great lightness and warmth and love."

At that moment, he said, the monosyllabic sounds started pouring from his lips: "Ka ka ki adi la . . ."

"It was as if my own mind were detached from what I was saying," he said. "I tried to pray in English but couldn't. The Holy Spirit had taken over and I couldn't stop it. It went on for maybe 25 minutes."

Afterward, he said, "I felt like shouting. I had a tremendous desire to do it, but I thought, 'That's just not considered proper', and so I restrained myself."

And that is how one individual first underwent what he calls an "indescribable experience" which he has had many times since — an activity that most Christians have long viewed with skepticism but which lately has broken out in new quarters.

Scripture tells of the apostles speaking "with other tongues, as the Spirit gave them utterance" at the first Pentecost, when people of many languages all understood, as related in Acts 2.

ST. PAUL TELLS

St. Paul, in his letter to the Corinthians, Chapter 14, also tells of speaking with tongues, and says not to forbid it, but insists it is more edifying to speak intelligibly.

There is no Scriptural evidence that Jesus ever spoke in tongues.

Modern manifestations of it occasionally have caused parish controversies, resulting in transfers of pastors encouraging it. Its exponents often are zealous in urging others to seek "the gift".

Hammond, who holds a doctorate of philosophy from the University of Geneva, says that as an Episcopalian, sometimes called "God's frozen people," he feels that tongues-speaking provides a needed fire of devotion.

"The Holy Spirit has been neglected in many churches," he said. "But the fullness of the Spirit is now stirring up the people. It strengthens and deepens service in the church. It's the breath of life.

"Without the Holy Spirit, a person never reaches his full potential as a Christian."

MANY DIALECTS

Ordinarily, he said, tongues-speaking is in an unknown language, although linguistic experts sometimes can decipher it. He said a person, knowing only English, may speak in any of the world's 3,000 languages and dialects.

In cases where the words are translatable, he said, they may mean simply things such as, "God is great. God is good." Usually, however, exact meanings of the sound are unknown, he said, only the sense of their holy importance.

The gift, he said, "is not to be sought for self, but for closeness to God and to be able to serve Him better. It involves yielding the total personality to God, so He can use it as He wants.

"In this way, you give voice to the deepest thoughts and feelings about God that you've never been able to express before. You don't think about words or syntax. You can't control it. You only know that God's love is flowing into verbalization."

News Briefs In Religion

METHODISTS IN CUBA

LAKELAND, Fla. (AP) — The Methodist Church in Cuba still has 8,744 members despite the large number of refugees who have come to this country.

Bishop James W. Henley, who has episcopal responsibility for Methodist work in Cuba, said the report came from a district superintendent at the recent annual Cuba Conference.

Bishop Henley had visited Cuba twice in the last four years but was unable to get his papers cleared in time to attend the conference.

The report showed a budget of $131,280 was adopted for the new church year and that eight new pastors, including three women, were admitted into full ministerial status.

CHURCH INJECTIONS

HOUSTON, Tex. (AP) — The River Oaks Baptist Church here plans to sponsor a summer program aimed at inoculating the entire two million population of Honduras against diptheria, whooping cough and tetanus.

About 100 Houston youths and 15 doctors will spend 10 weeks in the Central American country in connection with the project beginning next June.

CAMPUS CHEATING

BOSTON (AP) — Dr. Robert Hamill, dean of Marsh Chapel at Methodist - related Boston University, says sexual laxity and cheating, are the two most obvious moral issues on college campuses. He says that from 40 to 80 per cent of college students cheat.

MORE SPACE

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — A 14,000-square-foot addition is planned to the Muhlenberg Building here, headquarters for several agencies of the Lutheran Church in America.

THWARTED CALLING

CHICAGO (AP) — "The average pastor is frustrated," says Dr. Charles W. Steward, director of research at the Institute for Advanced Pastoral Studies, Bloomfield Hills, Mich.

On the basis of studies by the Institute, he reports in the magazine. Christian Advocate that the clergy's troubles result mainly from the fact that they consider themselves counselers, teachers and preachers but are forced by practical circumstances to be administrative "organization men."

CHEMISTRY OF FAITH

NEW YORK (AP) — A chemist who rose from cheese-making to head of research in that field for a national firm, Swift and Company, has been named as associate director of evangelism for the Lutheran Church in America. He is George W. McDonald, 54, who spent 14 years in milk chemistry before switching to full-time work in the chemistry of faith.

Protestants' Ratio Highest In Congress

By GEORGE W. CORNELL
Associated Press Religion Writer

Protestants occupy a bigger share of seats in the new U.S. Congress than they do of the country's church membership, while Roman Catholics make up a smaller part of Congress than they do of the people.

Checks of the religious affiliation of members of the House and Senate showed the variation.

Protestants hold a total of 404 seats, or about 75 per cent of them, while they constitute 55 per cent of the nation's 118 million church members, or 35 per cent of the over-all population.

On the other hand, Roman Catholics hold 108 seats, or 20 per cent of them, while they make up about 37 per cent of the country's church membership, and 24 per cent of the total population. There are 14 Roman Catholic senators and 94 congressmen.

There also are proportionately more Jews on the religious rolls, about 4.5 per cent, than on the congressional rolls, 3 per cent.

LARGEST SEGMENT

As they do in the population as a whole, Roman Catholics make up the largest number of any religious body in Congress, while Protestant representatives and senators include members of various denominations.

Next to Roman Catholics, Methodists hold the largest number of seats of any one denomination — 94 of them, 70 in the House and 24 in the Senate. Next come Presbyterians — 66 congressmen and 13 senators — for a total of 79.

Numbers of members of other denominations in Congress include:

Episcopalians — 12 senators, 58 congressmen, a total of 70.

Baptists — 11 senators, 45 congressmen, a total of 56.

United Church of Christ (including Congregational Christian and Evangelical and Reformed members — 5 senators, 19 congressmen, a total of 24.

Jewish — 2 senators, 15 congressmen, a total of 17.

Lutheran — 2 senators, 14 congressmen, a total of 16.

Protestant (denomination unspecified) — 2 senators, 15 congressmen, a total of 17.

Unitarian-Universalist — 5 senators, 8 congressmen, a total of 13.

OTHER GROUPS

Latter-day Saints (Mormons) — 4 senators, 6 congressmen, a total of 10.

Disciples of Christ — 1 senator, 10 congressmen, a total of 11.

Christian Scientist — 3 congressmen.

Society of Friends (Quakers) — 1 senator, 1 congressman, a total of 2.

Churches of Christ — 5 congressmen.

The remainder of the House and Senate included one member each of five small Protestant bodies, and six congressmen who indicated no religious affiliation.

At least three clergymen are members of the 89th Congress, including Rep. Adam Clayton Powell, D-N.Y., a Baptsit; Rep. Walter H. Moeller, D-Ohio, a Missiouri Synod-Lutheran minister, and Rep. John H. Buchanan, R-Ala., a Baptist minister.

Among the nation's 50 state governors, 13 are Methodists, 8 Roman Catholics, 7 Baptists, 6 Presbyterians, 6 Episcopalians, 5 United Church members (including Congregational Christians),2 Mormons, 2 Lutherans and 1 Unitarians.

As for the President and vice president of the nation, both of them — in religion — display a touch of interchurch ecumenical movement.

Vice President Hubert H. Humphrey belongs to the Congregational Christian church back home in Minneapolis, but is an affiliate member of the Chevy Chase Methodist church on the outskirts of Washington, D.C.

President Johnson is a Christian (Disciples of Christ) Church member back in Texas, but often goes to Episcopal services in Washington. His wife and both his daughters are Episcopalians.

38 YEARS IN OUACHITA PARISH

Salvation Army Here Gives Spiritual And Material Aid To Those In Need

Salvation Army Headquarters, Hart, Harrison Streets, Monroe.

The Salvation Army, which gives spiritual and material help to people at the point of need, whatever the need may be, is marking 100 years of service around the world, and 38 years in Monroe and Ouachita Parish.

The local unit is headquartered at Hart and Harrison streets in Monroe, and is under the command of Captain and Mrs. Ronald C. Greene.

Captain Greene pointed out concerning the work here that, "The Salvation Army has never been a large church, but since 1927 many people have attended its Sunday school, church services, Home League, and youth activities. At present time there are 92 senior soldiers (members) and 54 junior members, seven to 14 years of age, and a Sunday school enrollment of 135."

VARIOUS PROGRAMS

He explained that there are nine youth porgrams carried on each week at the Salvation Army headquarters here in addition to the activities for adults conducted during the week and on Sunday.

He related that the corps has a small band and songster group that takes an active part in the Sunday services.

"With the great social program of the Salvation Army," said the commanding officer, "it encourages those who come needing help to renew themselves through firmer religious ties. Born in a time of social upheaval 100 years ago, the Salvation Army this year marks a century of service, and for the past 38 years in Ouachita Parish it has sought to feed the hungry, clothe the needy, care for the troubled, befriend the friendless, and to strengthen man's faith in himself and his God. Being a part of the United Givers Fund, many assist us in carrying out all of these services to mankind."

Giving some background on the Salvation Army movement, Capt. Greene said, "An old adage has it, 'The hand that rocks the cradle rules the world.' Of course, it comes from a simpler time when almost every home had a cradle and there was someone at home to rock it. Today, with more and more mothers going back to business as soon as the children are in school, and other families pulling up the roots of generations to join the mobile work force gaining material advantages, but losing the stabilizing forces of community and church affiliation, it sounds a trifle quaint.

TIME OF STRIFE

"In 1865, the industrial revolution was changing the face of England. The movement of large groups of country people to the cities resulted in disrupted families, overcrowding, lack of jobs, and food shortages. The Salvation Army, founded in that year by William Booth and composed of a small band of hardy warriors, immediately set to work to meet the spiritual needs of people and to establish rescue homes for women, children, etc. In 1879, the Salvation Army came to the United States and it spread rapidly throughout the country and Canada.

"In June, 1927, a young woman captain by the name of Bonita Sugars came to Monroe with just enough money to rent a little store building that served as headquarters and a room for living quarters. She was followed by Captain and Mrs. Lawrence Monks, Captain Grace Norman, Captain and Mrs. William Workman, Major and Mrs. Albert Riggins, Captain and Mrs. George Whittaker, Adjutant and Mrs. Glen Washburn (now retired), Major and Mrs. Clarence Hammer (retired), Captain Ben Jones, Captain and Mrs. Jack Hesketh, Major and Mrs. James Magown, Major and Mrs. Charles Stratford, Major and Mrs. Louis Mockabee, Captain and Mrs. William Grantham."

In August of 1963, Captain and Mrs. Greene were appointed to command the Monroe Corps.

HARDSHIPS

The early years of the Salvation Army in Monroe were times of hardships for the officers in charge. Many of the early officers went months without salary, depending upon friends of the Army to supply them with food enough to keep them going, said Captain Greene. In many cases, people in need came first before their own personal needs were met.

Continuing to retrace the history of the Salvation Army here, the commanding officer said, "In 1942, Captain and Mrs. Jack Hesketh were appointed to Monroe for the purpose of organizing a Boys' Club program. This program was carried on until 1963 when it was felt that it was no longer neded.

"During the administration of Captain Hesketh, plans to house the Salvation Army Red Shield Club and Corps were made. It was by the efforts of Major Charles Stratford and Major Louis Mockabee, that these plans were carried through. In 1953, a small building was constructed to house the growing program. In 1955, a house was purchased at 115 Hart St. to house the growing transient program. In 1960, a small block building was completed to house the ladies' activities of the corps. Under the administration of Captain William Grantham Jr., $114,000 was raised to complete the corps building with a new transient lodge, youth hall, kitchen, Home League room, and chapel."

The theme of the Salvation Army's anniversary observance is "A Century of Service to God and Man."

MANY SERVICES

The Army has served in peace, war, depression, and in times of disaster caused by, flood, storm, fire and other elements, tending both to spiritual and physical needs.

At present, around the world, 25,000 Salvation Army officers assisted by 30,000 employees, implement the Army's spiritual and social ministry in 71 countries and geographic areas through 20,000 centers. The Army preaches the gospel in 147 languages.

Salvaton Army workers have been described as "Servants of All," and U.S. secretary of health, education and welfare, Anthony J. Celebreeze, said, "The Salvation Army's dedicated service to those in need of help has benefited all mankind."

Statistics on the number of persons aided through the many services of the Salvation Army in the United States last year, show direct benefit to millions of persons. These services included care for newborn infants in Salvation Army hospitals and maternity homes, programs in clubs for boys and girls sponsored by the corps, care for children in foster homes and Salvation Army homes, camps for children, mothers, and older people, instructional camps for budding musicians and young people with other special interests, Red Shield or Salvation Army-operated USO clubs for armed forces personnel; Army's Transportation and Immigration bureaus for aid to travelers, indoor and open-air evangelistic meetings for adults and children, mobile units to provide snacks or hot drinks for victims of disasters or workers on emergency duty, material assistance to families, Bible study groups for prison inmates, prisoners paroled to the Salvation Army, aid to released inmates and their families, visits by League of Mercy members to individuals in hospitals and other institutions, and the Army's Employment Service Bureau to help in obtaining permanent employment for job seekers.

MISS MARY L. SCOTT

Missionary Society Head Speaker Here

A former missionary to the Far East, and now executive secretary of the Nazarene World Missionary Society, will speak at 11 a.m. services today at the First Church of the Nazarene, Stella and North 4th, West Monroe, it was announced by the Rev. E. A. Johnson, pastor.

She is Miss Mary L. Scott who has offices at international headquarters of the denomination in Kansas City, Mo.

Miss Scott is being accompanied on a tour of the district by Mrs. T. T. McCord, Pineville, state president of the Nazarene World Missionary Society.

SERVED IN CHINA

The guest speaker will discuss mission work. She served as a missionary to North China from 1940 to 1945 and saw the Iron Curtain close around that nation. She was interned by the Japanese during World War Two, returning to the United States in 1945.

After a furlough in the states, she returned to missionary work in South China in 1947. Two years later, communist conquests and political developments forced her to return to the United States.

She is a graduate of Olivet Nazarene College, Kankakee, Ill., and received a master's degree from the University of Michigan. She taught English two years at Olivet College and for five years in the high school at Hammond, Ind., prior to becoming a missionary.

Lobby Role For Pastor Said Varied

OLYMPIA, Wash. (AP) — Like any other lobbyist at the state legislature, he meets with lawmakers, carries a legislative program in his briefcase, and makes periodic reports to his employers.

But the Rev. Paul Beeman is a lobbyist with a difference, as his title suggests.

The Rev. Mr. Beeman, a Methodist minister in Seattle, is on loan from the Washington-Northern Idaho Council of Churches as legislative representative during the Washington legislative session.

The presence of Mr. Beeman in Olympia among the politicians, influence-seekers and various special interest groups raises some questions," said Lane Smith, religion editor of the Seattle Times. "Some question whether the church should get into politics."

PASTORS ANSWER

The Rev. Mr. Beeman answers this way:

"If the church doesn't take an interest in the corporate lives of men, who will? If Jesus were alive in America today, he might very well have run for the legislature."

Although this is the first time the council has had a registered lobbyist here, the Seattle clergyman says "This isn't the first time the church has been officially represented in Olympia."

"Every man of faithful Christian conviction who serves in the House or Senate is himself the church at work in that place," he says. "The church has always been there and always will be, as long as Christians run for office."

YARDSTICK

The council has adopted a 22-point "yardstick for Christian political action," calling for abolition of capital punishment and passage of civil rights legislation and measures to help "the poor, the migrant, the uneducated and the disadvantaged."

"We believe that the blind opposition to any form of new taxes is not in the best interest of the state," the Rev. Mr. Beeman says. "To provide the services which we as Christians believe we must, new sources of taxation are vital."

This is likely to be one of the minister - lobbyists' most controversial proposals. Washington now has a 4 per cent sales tax. Gov. Dan Evans, a Republican, has said he will propose a new tax if needed. Organized labor is seeking a graduated income tax.

The Pastor's Corner

THE DOUBTING DISCIPLE

Except I shall see the print of the nails . . .
—John 20:19-25

Capt. Greene,
Commanding Officer,
Salvation Army, Monroe

As I look at the life and story of Thomas, he was not making his doubts an excuse but, in despair, found it really difficult to believe. It looks like that he was the brooding type, bow before circumstances - mute and stoical. We should look at his complex nature of feeling of inferiority. Thomas called Didymus' — meaning, the twin, or the second; possibly not a clever as his brother. The twelve never seemed to understand him; when Christ first appeared after the Resurrection Thomas was not with the disciples. It could be that Thomas found their company difficult.

VERY LOYAL

As we look back we find that Thomas was very loyal, after the disciples had tried to discourage Christ from going to Lazarus' grave, in John 11:8, Thomas comes back in the sixteenth verse, "Fellow-disciples, let us also go, that we may die with Him." R. L. Stevenson tells of three men on a pilgrimage, discussing gounds of their faith. One comes running, telling them all, all is lost, Odis is to die, evil is to triumph. "I have been grossly deceived; all is lost," said priest. "I wonder if it's too late to make it up with the Devil," said Virtuous Man. The third, asked what he would do: "I'm off to die with Odin!"

Thomas was like that, yearning to know, for he asked Christ in the fourteenth chapter of John about the way. I believe that his mind was puzzled, and he was struggling for faith. Feeling insisted on opening up questions which the reason had settled once for all. So Thomas wanted faith, but couldn't believe. Then came his collapse. He was absence from the disciples' company after the Resurrection, and this should have not been. He was left brooding, all was lost, the Lord was dead. So his words of despair "Except I shall see. . .", equivalent of saying: "I can't have the old experience back," God can't deal with my nature's, "Muddle in my life can't be unravelled, and there can't be such a thing as resurrection."

POWER OF TRUST

As water will bear you up if you trust, so will God. Launch out upon him. Now comes the confession, "My Lord and My God," says Thomas. And what did Christ say, "Peace," This is the way he always deals with troubled souls. The second words were an invitation: "Reach hither" the Devil won't mind the conviction that salvation is possible if he can prevent our acting upon it. Christ invites us to act upon it. Mr. C. S. Lewis says, "The more often you feel without acting, the less you will be able to act and, in the long run, the less you will be able to feel."

So get to know what Jesus feels. Now comes the response of a re-created soul: "My Lord and my God." What a remarkable confession for Thomas, for now it was Christ (Messiah); God (Jehovah) Thomas saw all in a moment.

Are we like Thomas, hovering in shadows when light of faith would illumine the way for us and joy flood our hearts? Shall not we believe with the same intensity as Thomas?

Terrific Tommy Enloe pulled off the steal of the century Saturday night—grabbing a Southwestern pass with 11 seconds to play—and converted his treasure into a million dollar field goal that gave Northeast State's Indians a 98-95 victory and placed them a giant sized step closer to the Gulf States Conference basketball title.

Enloe's deed, possibly the most important of his sparkling career, atoned for two missed free shots seconds earlier and, with the help of Louisiana Tech's 89 - 82 victory over second place Southeastern, moved the Tribe into a two game lead with just two GSC tilts remaining.

The Indians are now 7 - 1 in loop games, Southeastern is 5 - 2 and Southwestern is 4 - 3. Northeast travels to Northwestern Tuesday night then finishes its conference schedule with a showdown battle against Southeastern here Thursday night.

Winning one of the last two games would assure Northeast of a share of the title althuogh a victory over Southeastern is needed for the Indians to win it outright should the Lions win their other two remaining games.

The win over Southwestern will surely rank with the all - time thrillers at Brown Gym.

After leading the entire contest, Northeast suddenly found itself behind 95 - 94 with just 44 seconds to play on a shot by Bob Hilton.

However, Enloe brought the ball down court swiftly and sank a jump shot from the foul line with 33 seconds to play, pushing Northeast in front, 96 - 95.

At this point Southwestern called time out, with 29 seconds left. Dean Church took the toss in when play began again and dribbled deliberately up court as the Bulldogs from Lafayette started setting up operations for possibly one last open shot.

But suddenly as Church passed over the center line to Hilton, Enloe leaped in front of Hilton, clutched the ball and sped down court for the easy layup to give Northeast its big triumph.

A final shot by USL's Dave Kessler was disallowed as time ran out an instant before — but even if it had been counted the goal would have left the Bulldogs short.

Earlier in the night it had appeared that the victory was going to be much easier as Northeast had a couple of 11 point leads in the second half.

But Church, Southwestern's all - American star, with a strong assist from Hilton, kept the Bulldog attack going until it finally caught the Tribe in the last seconds.

Church, who had 11 points at the half, scored 20 points in the last 20 minutes while Hilton repeatedly grabbed offensive rebounds which gave the visitors second and third opportunities to score. Hilton also finished the night with 17 points.

After moving to a 30 - 22 lead with seven minutes left in the first half, Northeast suddenly went cold and USL cut the gap to a mere two points, 32 - 30, with 4:59 left in the half.

But just as suddenly, the Tribe returned the favor and meshed eight straight points on two - pointers by Enloe and Dick Williams and two buckets by Larry Butler. With 1:51 left in the half, Northeast led 44 - 34, and the Indians carried a 48 - 40 lead out at the break.

With Butler scoring consistantly on his over-the-head specialties from long range, the Tribe managed to stay about 10 points in front for the first five minutes of the second half.

However, USL scored three straight times near the 15:00 mark for a 62 - 57 score and the difference was never more five points again.

To make matters worse for the struggling Indians, Butler fouled out with 12:54 to play. With Church feeling the urgency of the situation, the fabulous point - maker — who scored 39 against Northeast earlier in the season — began working harder for shots.

And he found them, scoring 16 of his club's last 31 points.

With 10 minutes to play Southwestern trailed by only two points, 73 - 71, but sophomore Mike Vining hit for Northeast seconds later and the teams stayed four points apart for several minutes.

With four minutes left Bob Cutrer hit, .leaving the 'Dogs down by only three, 88 - 85. But Northeast's other half of it's 1 two scoring punch, Glynn Saulters, came through with two free shots — pushing the Tribe in front by five, 90 - 85.

Hilton crammed in a rebound shot with 4:02 left and USL was behind by three again, 90-87. Northeast failed to score and Church hit a minute later, at 3:02, and the score was 90-89.

At this point, Saulters picked up a vital three point play when he was fouled while shooting an unbelievable underhand layup from almost behind the goal — which he made. The Lisbon product's free throw made it 93-89 with 2:40 left.

Southwestern came down quickly, but missed its shot and James "Polk" Brian, who filled in well for Butler, grabbed the rebound. Northeast went into a stall at this point, but it proved unsuccessful when Bob Bornscheuer stole the ball and was fouled while shooting a layup.

Bornscheuer made his two free shots and the score was 93-91.

With Northeast in a stall again, Enloe was fouled and had a one - and - one situation. He made the first shot but missed the second, leaving NLSC in front 94-91 with 1:22 remaining.

Church calmly connected with 1:12 left but charged Enloe on the shot. With the score 94-93 Enloe missed his first free shot and USL controlled the ball. Hilton then scored with 44 seconds —giving USL its only lead of the game and setting the stage for Enloe's last seconds heroics.

The game from an overall view was little short of spectacular.

Southwestern made 53 per cent of its field goals and 90.6 of its free shots while Northeast hit an outstanding 59.0 per cent of its field goal shots and made 83.9 from the free throw line. USL missed only three of 32 free shots and Northeast five of 31. The Tribe had three more field goals than the Bulldogs.

Saulters, among the most outstanding first-year college players in the country, led Northeast with 27 points and Enloe finished with 22. But the reason for victory can be seen even better by looking at the rest of the Tribe scoring column.

Butler, playing only about 20 minutes, scored 16 points. Paul Thompson netted 13 — and as usual led all rebounders with 11 — and Williams had 10 points.

Also due for plenty of credit are Lawson Swearingen, Vining and Brian who provided Northeast with all the bench strength it needed.

Swearingen, playing only a short time, hit his only field goal attempt and grabbed one rebound. Vining made one of two floor shots and two of two from the foul line and Brian, the sailor from Pleasant Hill, made two of two from the field and handled the ball well.

Cutrer finished with 16 and Dave Kessler added 13 for the Bulldogs.

Naturally, there were very few rebounds in the game as can be seen by the tremendous shooting percentages. This makes Thompson's 11 caroms even more alluring. Williams had eight for Northeast while Hilton had nine for USL and David Adams got seven.

Northeast also won a freshman game from the Bulldogs, 75-66, as Ronnie Suggs scored 24 points, 18 coming on free throws. Chris Rhodes and Rich Bailey added 16 points and Walter Hays tallied 10.

AFTER 54 HOLES

Yancey Birdies 18th To Capture Open Lead

PHOENIX, Ariz. (AP) — Bert Yancey of Philadelphia tapped in a short birdie putt on the final green Saturday and grabbed the undisputed lead after 54 holes of the $67,500 Phoenix Open golf tournament.

Yancey, a 26-year-old who never has won a professional golf tournament, shot a three-under-par 69 for a three-round total of 206, ten strokes under par

It gave him a one-stroke advantage over Al Geiberger and Rod Funseth.

Tom Nieporte was just two strokes back at 208 and four others, including defending champion Jack Nicklaus, were three strokes off the pace.

Joining Nicklaus at 209 were Frank Beard, Claude King and Don January.

Yancey took the tourney lead in the first round with a 67. He shot a 70 in the second round and shared the 36-hole lead with Beard and Geiberger.

Yancey left his approach shot just inches from the cup on the 18th green Saturday and had little difficulty dropping it for a birdie four and the lead.

The same hole proved disastrous a few momments earlier for Nicklaus. Bic Jack, who led briefly during the round, sliced his drive out of bounds and took a two-stroke penalty. Nicklaus wound up getting a bogey six on the hole when he one-putted after blasting out of a trap.

Yancey, a former West Point cadet, is in his first full season on the pro tour. He played briefly in 1962 and again last year when his best showing was a fifth place finish in the Insurance City Open.

Last week in the Bob Hope Desert Golf Classic in Palm Springs, Calif., he pocketed $2,300. First place in the Phoenix turney is wrth $10,500.

Nieporte shot a seven-under-par 65 Saturday, the best score of the three rounds. Beard had a 63 in Wednesday's pro-am' preliminary.

Yancey strung out birdies on holes 12, 13 and 14, then ran into difficulties on 15, a par-three, 163-yarder which he three-putted. Earlier, he had three-putted from 18 feet on the fourth hole.

Louisiana Tech Trips Southeastern, 89-82

RUSTON (Special) — Louisiana Tech saw an 18 point lead dwindle to seven points in the final five minutes here Saturday night, but still downed Gulf States Conference co - leader Southeastern Louisiana, 89-82, behind the 33 point production of ace Jerry Hood.

The loss dealt the Lions' title hopes a severe jolt since Northeast State took a firm grip on first place by beating Southwestern in Monroe, 98-95, Saturday night. Southeastern dropped to 5-2 in the league to remain tied with USL, while Tech held fourth with a 4-4 mark.

Southeastern is 11-9 overall and Tech is 9-9.

Down 81-64 with 5:22 to play, Southeastern chopped the margin to seven in the foul marred contest. The Bulldogs had four men on the bench in the end via the foul route and the Lions had three.

Hood, who bucketed 39 in an earlier game with the Lions, paced Tech with 9-15 shots from the field and 15 consecutive free throws. Tech had four others in double figures including Jim Pruett with 19, Leon Baremore with 12 and Dan McCormick and Bob Watson with 10 each.

Lion freshman standout C. A. Core, who left midway of the final half with five fouls, led Southeastern with 21 points. Gary Childers had 15, Don Wilson 13, and Ronnie Small 10.

Southeastern led Tech by a wide margin in rebounds, 52-37, with Core getting 10 and Childers 14. However, Coach Luke Marler's crew was miserable at the free throw line, hitting only 22-38 and missing the first on 1-1 situations several times. Tech hit 27-36 at the charity line.

The Lions stayed with Tech in the early goings with Core spearheading the drive, However Malcolm Smith, Tech's freshman star' did an outstanding defensive job on Core in the second half before the Lions' 6-5 Indiana product fouled out.

Trailing 19-18 Tech took the lead for good on a fielder by Baremore with 11:40 remaining in the half and built the margin to 12 points at 46-34 by intermission.

Southeastern, which had downed Tech 99-82 in Hammond, could not seriously chop the Bulldog lead after the half until the final five minutes of play when repeated floor mistakes began to cost the Techmen.

Pruett, the Shreveport sophomore was a sharp shooter from the field for Tech, connecting on 9-13 shots, nearly from 15 to 20 feet out.

In a preliminary tilt, Tech's George Stone rebounded a missed free throw for a two-pointer to give the Bulldog Frosh a 97-96 win over Tyler Junior College to avenge an earlier loss.

Terry Ewing paced Tech with 28 points, while Stone had 23, Earl Thompson 11, Curtis Barham, Tom Gregory and Mike Taylor 10 each.

Tom Stillabower and Robert Hayward led the Apaches with 27 and 34 points, respectively.

TAKE SEC LEAD

Tennessee Jolts Vanderbilt, 79-68

KNOXVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — A. W. Davis and Ron Widby dealt the knockout blow Saturday night as Tennessee handed seventh-ranked Vanderbilt its first Southeastern Conference basketball loss of the season 79-68.

Davis, playing his last game against Vanderbilt, tossed in 22 points, and grabbed seven rebounds.

Widby also got 22 points, 18 of them in the second half, and picked up seven rebounds.

The victory was Tennessee's 10th straight and put the Vols one-half game ahead of Vanderbilt in the conference title race. Tennessee is now 9-1 in the league and 17-2 over-all. The defeat, Vandy's first in 14 games, left the Commodores at 8-1 in the SEC and 16-3 for the season.

Tennessee took command at the start and in five minutes had built up a 13-5 lead. The Vols kept pecking away and twice in the second half led by a 20-point margin.

Clyde Lee, Vanderbilt's 6-9 all-SEC pivotman who led the Commodores to a 77-72 triumph over Tennessee earlier in the season, paced Vandy with 20 points. He was limited to six rebounds against his season average of 15.5.

A tight zone defense held Lee, who leads the SEC scoring with a 23-point average, to four goals from the floor. The game was 10 minutes old before he scored his first basket.

Keith Thomas was runner-up for Vandy with 17 points.

Coach Ray Mears, whoe jubilant Tennessee players carried him off the floor on their shoulders after the game, said "we had a fine offensive effort but I felt it was our defense that really won the game.

"We knew we had to stop Clyde Lee and John Ed Miller to win. Lee got only four baskets and Miller none and that's a great defensive job."

Vanderbilt's Roy Skinner said "Coach Mears had called this the game of the season for Tennessee and the Vols certainly played like it. Davis is a great one."

Grambling Gets 107-101 Victory From Panthers

GRAMBLING (Special) — Grambling used a furious closing streak to topple Prairie View, A&M, 107-101, Saturday night in a Southwestern Athletic Conference encounter.

Ramrodded by All-American candidate Wilbur Frazier, the Tigers hit a dazzling 55 per cent and recorded their 16th victory against five defeats.

Grambling canned most of its points with a team demonstration of outside shooting. Five Tigers hit for double figures for 37 points by Frazier, appropriately enough, leading the assault.

Johnny Comeaux tallied 23, James Jones netted 22, Howard Davis pumped in 17, and Richie Johnson added 10.

Guy Maning led the sharply-drilled Panthers with 39 points, most of which were scored after the issue was decided.

Maning was forced to carry the Lions' share of the offensive lead as Stone Green and Roger Warren were the only other Panthers in double digits. They hit 13 points apiece.

The game was deadlocked 21 times in the opening half and rocked back and forth after intermission before Grambling managed a comfortable edge.

Coach Fred Hobdy called the contest a well played affair. He said alert defense and the ability to penetrate Prairie View's tight zone made the difference.

The wind was number 228 for Hobdy, who has suffered only 40 defeats in nine seasons.

Among the group of lettermen are included Joe Ganey and Sonny Walpole who made six touchdowns each, and Chris Tarver, Ray Nicholson, Gary Don Moseley and Donnie Jones, other backfield performers.

Added to this list are kicking artists Ronnie Powell and Keith Tarver who both kicked field goals last season.

TEXAS AGGIE GIANT

Shot Put Champion Betters Own Record With 66 Feet

DALLAS (AP)—Randy Matson, the Texas Aggie giant, threw the shot 66 feet 2¼ inches Saturday night to better his own world's indoor record.

Matson set the record Friday night at fort Worth's Will Rogers Games with a heave of 65 feet 8¼ inches.

Watson was picked as outstanding athlete of the university division. Stebbins got the honor in the college class and Aldredge was named top athlete of the high school division.

A crowd of 5,000—2,000 less than expected—turned out.

Matson's mighty throw came on his third try and was within an inch of his toss that won second in the Olympic Games.

He had throws of 63-6¾ and 64-9½ before making the record. He tossed the shot 66-1¾ on his fourth try but scratched. He had 63-¼ on his fifth and wound up with 60-9 on his sixth and final effort.

Matson's was the only authentic record of the night. Every event was a record in the college division, which was new to the meet. But none approached Texas indoor records.

Richard Stebbins of Grambling, who ran on the winning American Olympics 400-meter relay team, tried for the world's record in the 300-yard run but failed by 1.7 seconds as he came in 31.6.

George Aldredge of Highland Park High School of Dallas came within a tenth of a second of Stebbins.

There were some surprises. Bobby May, the NCAA champion hurdler from Rice, finished fifth in the 60-yard hurdles.

Richard Romo of Texas, who was expected to threaten the state 1,000-yard record, did not run. He was spiked at Fort Worth Friday night and may be out of action for six weeks.

THIS WEEK

Spring Training Slated To Begin

NEW YORK (AP) — Florida and Arizona will be swarming with big league baseball players in a few days with the start of the spring training season just around the corner. In fact, the first rookie camp is due to open Monday at Lakeland, Fla., when the eager Detroit hopefuls congregate at Tigertown.

Fifteen of the 20 major league clubs will train in Florida. Four will work in Arizona and one, the Los Anglees Angels, will do its conditioning at Palm Springs, Calif.

Before the next three weeks are over about 800 or 900 athletes will be seating it out, trying to make the big leagues. Seven new managers have taken over, five in the National and two in the American. The most interesting move, of course, was the switch of Johnny Keane from the St. Louis Cardinals to the New York Yankees, the team he beat in the World Series. Yogi Berra, his Series foe, will be trying to get himself into shape for a player-coach role with the New York Mets.

Washington's batterymen will be the first big leaguers due to report, Sunday, Feb. 21 at Pompano Beach, Fla.

The others will follow close behind until everybody is on hand at all 20 camps by Friday, March 5. Cleveland, the Los Angeles Dodgers and the Chicago Cubs have their men report all in one group. Most of the others have the pitchers and catchers check in first and the rest of the players a week or so later.

Normally the exhibition games all start on the same day. Not this year. The regular opening day is Saturday March 13 but there will be at least seven games played before that date.

The Indians will be in Mexico City for a three-game set starting Tuesday, March 9. Washington and the New York Yankees open at Pompano Beach, Thursday, March 11. Houston and Minnesota play at Cocaoa, Friday, April 12. On the same day the Los Angeles Angels will be in Reynosa, Mexico, and Washington will be in Mexico City.

Here is a rundown on the teams and their training sites, with reporting dates for batterymen and full squads:

Racing Champs Invited To Run At Harmon Strip

The management of the new Bob Harmon Memorial Raceway, which is now in the final stages of completion, indicated today that the track should be completed within the next month, barring more bad weather which has postponed the opening for several months.

White Alger, track director, stated that due to the championship schedule that has been planned for the season, it is highly necessary" for both the safety of the spectators and for the competitors that the track base be "perfect before the asphalt cn be lid."

Recent rains have plagued the construction progress and prevented the builder from achieving this highly specialized type of construction. Alger added that opening "won't be long" from now.

Most of the newly crowned champions who just finished competing in the fifth annual National Hot Rod Association Winter National Championships have been invited to appear at the raceway during the spring and summer season.

Included among the list of top racing performers who have invitations to come to Monroe are Don Prudhomme, Granada Hills, Calif., who is the top Fuel Eliminator in a blown Chrysler with a speed of 201.34 mph.

Jimmy Nix, Oklahoma City, Okla., is the top Gas Eliminator in his Chevy, top speed of 179.28 mph. Top Stock Eliminator Bill Jenkins, Rosemount, Pa., who ran 126.05 mph in a 1965 Plymouth, has received an invitation to appear at the raceway.

Many others who are top competitors in their classes have been invited to appear.

Alger also announced that motorcycle and go - car racing would be held this season.

Federal Aid For Outdoors

With Sam Hanna

UNDER NUMEROUS PROGRAMS

President Johnson's "Great Society" program also includes federal funds for the development of outdoor recreational facilities under the new Land and Water Conservation Act.

Not too much is known about this act in official circles of Louisiana because, as state officials have pointed out to us, the details are still fuzzy within the U. S. Department of the Interior.

But this much is known. Right now Louisiana is eligible to receive $267,000 in federal funds for land acquisition, improvements and development. This is not much money.

But next year, Lamar Gibson, director of the Louisiana State Parks & Recreation Commission, says Louisiana will be eligible to receive $1,133,000 in federal funds under the new program.

This, of course, will be available on a matching - fund basis. The federal government puts up so much. Local government puts up so much.

Preparing for the program, the State Parks & Recreation Commission plans to conduct a survey of the state's outdoor recreational needs. Part of this survey will be included in a bigger state - wide plan being made by the Department of Public Works.

Local groups interested in cashing in on the federal funds available also will be required to conduct a study of their local needs, including local inventories of existing facilities.

A closer examination of the new federal program, however, discloses that the Land & Water Conservation Act is really not anything new in the field of developing outdoor facilities.

Information published by the Department of Interior shows that state governments, local governments, organizations and individuals can apply for federal funds on just about anything you can imagine for outdoor development.

There are over a half dozen federal agencies with funds available for outdoor facilities, ranging from farm ponds to duck ponds. Many people, some of whom denounce federal aid, are already participating in the programs.

Off hand, facilities built with federal assistance in this area include several public boat launching ramps on Lake D'Arbonne, Cheniere Lake and Bayou Macon in Franklin Parish.

But apparently the Land & Water Conservation Act will sponsor more such projects on a grants-in-aid basis. Over a million dollars will be floating around Louisiana next year and you can rest assured it'll be spent.

Personally, we feel that the federal government has a rightful role in the fields of pollution abatement on streams that flow from one state to another, and in the field of waterfowl preservation since migratory birds are involved.

But should the federal government take a hand in the development of local outdoor facilities?

It's already being done. We just don't hear much about it amid the denouncements of federal aid.

PARISH-WIDE COMMITTEE

The Ouachita Parish Police Jury has appointed a parish - wide group known as the Ouachita Parish Outdoor Recreation Committee, composed of eight men representing various segments of the parish.

This committee has met three times already, trying to determine a course it should take.

In short, the committee tried to determine if it would be best to approach the subject of outdoor development from a planning stand - point, to begin with, or to approach it on a project - by - project basis.

This is a general explanation, we realize, but then the committee, of which we are a member, has been general to say the least.

But something may be accomplished. After all, this is the first time that representatives from so many different groups — wildlife, chamber of commerce, farm bureau, agriculture and industry — have ever sat down together here to discuss outdoor problems.

The committee may be able to get all these groups working together to promote outdoor recreation for Ouachita Parish. There's a lot that could be done for the local people just as there is much to be done to promote Ouachita as a place to play.

You'll be hearing more about the committee in the future, we hope.

TURKEY SEASON UPCOMING

Today is the last day of the season for quail hunters and rabbit hunters.

They bring to a close the major hunting seasons for the 1964 - 65 year, beginning with the dove season back in September. Counting the turkey season upcoming in April, the hunter has a choice covering about seven months of the year.

From all accounts the rabbit season has been a good one, but a lot of hunters believe the season is too long. Some say they're killing rabits with young ones.

The quail season, however, hasn't been so good for most hunters. Or at least it hasn't been an improvement over the past two or three years.

Looking ahead, the turkey season opens April 3rd and runs through April 18th, covering three weekends. The season limit again will be one gobbler.

It should be a good season, if the weather is right, because the state's turkey population, from all reports, has been increasing.

A lot of hunters, of course, are anxious for the Wild Life & Fisheries Commission to hold a season on the new Georgia - Pacific Game Management Area, which is one of the state's better turkey areas.

Fishing, meantime, will continue to be spotty, depending on the weather. But spring is not far away and of course that's when fishing really attracts the sportsmen.

So with the passing of the bird and rabbit seasons, there's still a lot of activity ahead.

LITTLE MAN'S CORNER

It was good weather for ducks, but the season was closed and the little men had trouble making news afield.

But the fishing was good for some at Black Bayou. Pop Portman of Monroe landed five good - size bass. One weighed almost five pounds and the other went almost four. Three of them averaged two pounds.

Paul Danna got a 6 - pound, three - quarter bass and James Cummings landed one that weighed 5 and three - quarters.

The pro, Sam Ladart had trouble catching specs, but Fred Summers and P. J. Tornature of Monroe landed 40. Most of them were male. The females are spawning.

And the catfishing must be good in Black Bayou, because Hoarace Buckley caught 45. That included a bluecat that weighed 5 and three - quarter pounds.

On the bird hunting scene, Hank Hargrove doesn't hunt quail around here, but he drove over to South Texas for a visit with relatives and enjoyed four days of great bird shooting.

He says over there they don't bother with singles. But that's nothing on this area. Here you can't find the singles.

From Lake St. John, Hollis Wallace got the limit of white perch in the Blue. Despite the rain, the fishing has been pretty good in the Lake St. John area.

John and C. L. Loadsley of Monroe got the limit of white perch and some bass in Lake St. John. Mrs. Mary Wingate, Mrs. Stella Steed, and Mrs. Muriel Meyers of Monroe landed the limit of white perch in Old River Lake.

Meantime, there have been a lot of reports of big bobcats being killed around the area, but Arnold Wright of Catahoula Parish reported one of the largest.

He was out in the Catahoula hills not too long ago and ran across a big cat that bristled and acted like he was going to jump Arnold, who had left his rifle behind in the truck.

Arnold's dogs came along, however, and ran the bobcat off. But Arnold went back and got his gun, returning to kill the animal, which weighed 25 pounds. The 'cat was 18 inches high and was three feet and four inches long.

AUGUST A. BUSCH Jr., 64-year-old head of the Anheuser-Busch breweries, which in turn owns the St. Louis Cardinals baseball club, hoists a brimming tankard of beer from the 10,000,000th barrel turned out by Anheuser-Busch. At left is his son, August III. He also is the toast of his town. St. Louisians call him the best citizen they've ever had. His friends say he is the last of the great merchant princes. OWNS CARDINALS

August Busch Jr. Bosses Empire Of Beer, Baseballs

ST. LOUIS (AP) — August A. Busch Jr., bosses a brewing empire brimming with fine lager beer bobbing with baseballs.

He's the 64-year-old patriarch of a family which controls the largest brewery in the world, Anheuser-Busch Inc., which just incidently owns the world champion St. Louis baseball Cardinals.

Estimates of the family's cash value range from $400 million up and Busch is said to be able to account for about half that figure.

Friends say he is the last of the merchant princes, a business baron whose life is his work in an era of the 35-hour work week and month-long vacations.

St. Louis admirers say he is "the best citizen this, or any other, city ever had."

"The way to success in business is to love that business and stay with that business 24 hours a day, seven days a week," says the grey-haired, blue-eyed, amiable yet sometimes volatile man.

When Busch took over Anheuser-Busch at the death of his older brother in 1946, the company operated only one plant at St. Louis. Now, there are Busch breweries in Newark, N.J., Los Angeles; Tampa, Fla. and St. Louis. Another plant is under construction at Houston, Tex.

Anheuser-Busch is so large it cannot acquire another brewery without federal government approval.

"We bought one in Tampa a few years ago," Busch says, "but we were forced by the government to sell it."

His life is the brewery and the St. Louis Cardinals, who won the 1964 baseball World Series after a last minute drive carried them to the National League pennant.

"When I go to sleep at night, I'm thinking about the brewery," Busch says. "I dream about the business and eat my breakfast with the business. I'm never away from it."

But he's also a Democrat who chaired the Missourians for Johnson-Humphrey during the last electon. "Frankly, I'm a strong Democrat because Franklin Roosevelt did more to end prohibition than any other man," Busch says "Prohibition almost killed the brewing industry."

Busch is a civic leader who believes in making friends. He authorized the purchase of the baseball Cardinals in 1953 simply to keep the club in St. Louis.

"I sent a delegation of three men to Fred Saigh (then owner of the Redbirds) when it looked like the team might move from the city," Busch remembers. "We agreed on a purchase price of $3,750,000."

The brewery also has donated about $5 million toward construction of St. Louis' new $85 million downtown sports stadium, scheduled for completion in 1966.

It's all part of Busch's friends philosophy.

"Friends want to buy your product and when you have friends, you want to give them the best available. We do." Says Busch.

Busch runs the liquid empire made up of Budweiser, Michelob and Busch Bavarian beers from a red brick former school house on the north edge of the St. Louis plant. His father attended school in the building.

The brewery covers 70 south St. Louis city blocks and can be seen from the window of Busch's executive offices, which are decorated in olive green. They are adequate, not plush. This is a working center.

The boss works from between two desks, one a gaslight era rolltop antique and the other more conventional.

"A man has to think and progress," Busch says. "But, he also has to give respect to his traditions and his past."

Grant's farm includes its own zoo, miniature trains and an old world German homestead. Busch Gardens has exotic birds, plants and replicas of fairy tale characters. All these also feature free beer for parents.

"Let's be honest," says Busch. "We get a kick out of it for the kids, but the parents remember what we do for them and they just might buy our products."

Grant's Farm was opened to the public in May 1953.

"Stan Musial's wife, Lillian, started it," Busch recalls.

"She asked me if her church group could tour the farm because the cabin Ulysses S. Grant once lived in is there. I said yes and before you know it, church and civic groups from all over the area asked to tour the place.

"Momma (Mrs. August A. Busch Sr.) liked the children and because of that we decided to have full-time public tours," Busch remembers.

Busch, his mother, wife and five younger children live in a rambling, buff brick, French Rennaissance style mansion trimmed in red on the 281-acre estate. The 34-room mansion was built in 1911.

"A few years ago, the house was really empty," Busch says. "But we filled up the rooms a little bit."

He has 10 children ranging in age from three to 25 years old. Busch has been married three times.

His latest marriage was to trim, blonde Gertrude Buholzer, whose father owned a restaurant in Lucerne, Switzerland, where she met Busch. They were married in 1952 when she was 25. They have five children.

Busch and Trudy love horses. For 10 years, he was master of the foxhounds at Bridlespur Hunt Club, founded by his father.

The famed Budweiser Clydesdale horses are stabled at Grant's Farm. Riding and carriage horses also are there for the use of Busch's family and guests.

It isn't unusual to see Busch driving a horse drawn carriage filled with his children around the paths of the farm in a scene from a bygone age.

Busch was born at St. Louis March 28, 1899 into the family which has owned the Anheuser-Busch brewery since 1857. That was the year Eberhard Anheuser, a soap factory owner, took over the failing firm because he was the chief creditor.

Adolphus Busch came to the city from Germany when he was 18 years old. Eight years later, he married Anheuser's daughter, Lilly. Adolphus became head of the brewery in 1865 and things began to hum.

"That was the man who started it all," the impeccably dressed Busch says as he motions to the oil painting of the first Adolphus on his office wall.

Adolphus died in 1913 while on a trip to his native Germany, one year before World War I began. After the war came the brewing industry's black plague — prohibition.

NEEDS INVESTIGATING

Writer Agrees Sports Is Now Big Business

NEW YORK (AP) — This guy in Washington says sports has become a big business, what with television getting into everything, and it ought to be investigated.

The sports writer, who grew up reading about Connie Mack's $100,000 infield and Matty, the pitcher with the $10,000 arm, thinks maybe the guy has something. You don't see such small figures any more.

Didn't CBS spend a lot of millions to buy control of the Yankees? And how about those huge TV contracts for pro football? They have sellouts almost everywhere every Sunday.

Baseball isn't doing badly in some towns, too, and college football set another attendance record last fall. Then there was a story the other day that more than 61 million people went to the horse parks last year and bet more than $4 billion. That's big money.

So the sports writer makes a few phone calls and digs through the files and comes up with a batch of figures — rough but reasonably accurage — and goes down the hall to the financial desk to get some comparisons with other big businesses.

"Big business?" says the financial editor. "Peanuts! Don't bother me with that little stuff."

"Peanuts," the sports editor yells. "Do you call it peanuts when CBS spends $11.2 million to buy the Yankees?"

"Yeah, but just a couple of weeks later CBS spends $13 million to buy what? — a company that makes electric guitars. They're just putting a little of the loose change into diversification."

"Well, how about these figures. The major leagues drew 21,280,346 paid admissions last year. At $1,750, a fair average, that makes around $37,275,000 in gate receipts. The National Football League drew about 4½ million people at $4 a head—that's $18 million. If the prices are the same the AFL got about $5.4 million from 1.35 million people. That's big money to me."

"Sure, if you're comparing it to your pay or mine. But on this desk we spell it B-I-G — like Telephone and General Motors both showing $1.7 billion income after taxes. There are a hundred or so companies with annual sales over a billion and I'd bet the entire take from sports wouldn't reach that."

The sports writer is a bit sheepish but still stubborn. "Lets try some more," he says. "We still have those big racing figures. College football, hockey, golf are all setting records. Last year Arnie Palmer and Jack Niclaus took over $100,000 apiece in golf prize money and this year the pros will be shooting for something like $4 million.

"Then there's basketball, auto racing, soccer, dog races, jaialai, the minors. You name it, we got it."

"Listen" says the financial end. "If you want to audit the books of every two-bit sport, all the accountants at Price Waterhouse couldn't do that with Merrill Lynch, Pearce, Fenner and Smith helping them. Let's take the big ones first.

"Racing? Take your 61 million admissions and make it $2 a head to allow for the small tracks. There's $122 million. The $4 billion total handle represents money turning over and over with about 15 per cent coming out each time. That gives you $600 million for the tracks and the states.

"College football? A survey a couple of years ago put the gross at $65 million. Lets make it 75 and include all post- season games.

"Golf? You have four tournaments big enough to interest the television people. Your USGA report says the Open drew 55,000 people last year and their share of the gate—about half—was $154,850. The Masters probably does better and the PGA and Crosby a little worse. Can't guess the gates at the 40-odd other tour tournaments, but let's be liberal and call the total $6.5 million.

"Sure, college and pro basketball draws maybe 15 million people but its mostly kids on freebies or student tickets. Saw a 30 million figure for auto races but that would require a lot of big crowds. The NHL couldn't draw more than 2.5 million people with every seat filled."

The sports writer was busy with pencil and paper. "If I add right, I make it something over $870 million, including the betting," he said. "And don't forget the conessions and the big television contracts. That's what the congressman was beefing about."

The financial end yielded grudgingly. "Last time I went to a ball game I had two hot dogs and a can of beer and knocked the spots off a dollar bill," he admitted. "But concessions area separate business and the club only gets a percentage of the profits, not total sales.

"The pro football clubs will split up nearly $22 million from TV; some baseball clubs get a million and some a lot less. A handy sum to play around with. Keeps them from looking for a handout from the Small Business Administration. College football gets about $7.5 million and the other live sports are one-shot things that maybe total a few hundred G's.

"I'll give you a little over a billion total, but do I make my point?"

By this time the sports writer was feeling uncomfortable. "Maybe it isn't as big as GM or Jersey Standard," he said, "but I still see a lot of rich guys trying to buy into sports. Why?"

"It's like Blue Shirt Charlie Bidwill used to say: "What if I do lose $100,000 a year on pro football? Think of the fun I have."

"Don't forget," the FE added, "I used to be a sports writer, too."

It will be the purpose of this space to comment from time to time upon the many intricate pattern of events composing the design of life—which might be compared to a giant mosaic.

More particularly, observations and interpretations will be made concerning the Twin Cities, Ouachita, Louisiana and Americana mosaics as they pertain to the cultural aspects of society.

CULTURE CENTER

There's no doubt but what the area is a cultural center.

Two outstanding achievements are the Masur Museum of Art and the Twin Cities Symphony. Both of these are fine examples of artistic triumphs for a city of this size.

Another notable accomplishment is the Monroe Little Theatre, which consistently endeavors to bring to the stage of the Strauss Playhouse dramas and musicals of merit.

Not only are more of these fine arts needed here, but more encouragement from the public is desirable.

HIGHER LEARNING

Residents of the Twin Cities are fortunate to live in an area endowed by two institutions of higher learning. Activities of cultural significance are almost constantly offered by our own Northeast State and a short distance to Ruston awaits similar events at Louisiana Tech.

And, if we are genuinely interested enough, there is Shreveport — or even Dallas or Memphis.

ABOUT CHILDREN

There is no better way to introduce a story than to report about something which appeals to the masses — children.

If you want to give yourself a tremendous lift, just visit the "Youth Art Exhibit" at Monroe's Masur Museum. It is refreshing to see how children from area elementary and junior high schools have chosen to express themselves through their art work.

Also being shown at Masur is the touring "International Red Cross Youth Art Exhibit."

It is a combination that can hardly be surpassed in this particular realm of art — so, go view for yourself — 1400 South Grand 2-5 p.m. Tuesdays through Sundays — you will come away exhilarated.

PLAYHOUSE

In five short days, "Sound of Music" will unfold in all its glory before the footlights of Strauss Playhouse.

Monroe Little Theatre is to be commended for bringing this unusually warm and enchanting musical story of the famous singing Von Trapp family to the local scene.

This musical ran for 1,442 performances on Broadway and it is still being staged in London, after more than 1,456 performances.

The opening — Friday, Feb. 19. The closing — Sunday, Feb. 28 (a matinee). Curtain time—8:15 p.m.

NLSC PLANS

The Northeast college calendar lists three events worthy of attention.

Original art by a New York City artist is currently being shown at the art gallery at Bry Hall. The exhibition, entitled Cyril, contains work on loan from the Louisiana Art Commission, Baton Rouge by a young New York artist.

Students from 36 schools will participate in the 13th annual Speech and Drama Festival at Northeast on Feb. 19-20. Contestants will compete in one-act, drama, debating and individual events.

A March performance has been set for the major spring production of the college speech department, according to George C. Brian, director. "The Warrior's Husband" is a three-act satire on Greek legend by Julian Thompson.

There is really no reason to clutter up the beautiful Monroe mosaic. Therefore, March and April have been set aside by city officials and the Monroe Beautification Board for an anti-litter campaign.

With everyone's cooperation, the Twin Cities can achieve another distinction and become the pacemaker city of cleanliness.

AT SHREVEPORT

Highlighting cultural activities in Shreveport in the near future will be the appearance of the Houston Symphony Orchestra at the new Civic Center on Wed., Feb., 17. Sir John Barbirolli will conduct a program including Brahms, Berlioz and Delius — and one of his own compositions. Tickets, ranging from $3 to $5, may be obtained at the Box Office, Civic Center, 600 River Parkway, Shreveport.

Other attractions of note upcoming in Shreveport are the drama "Beyond the Fringe" (New York's Drama Critics Award for 1962-63 season) on Feb. 27; Ferranti and Teicher, duo-pianists, on March 12; and the Jose Greco dance ensemble on March 21. All of these offerings are under the auspices of Variety Attractions and ticket information may be obtained by writing that agency at P.O. Box 731, Shreveport.

CONFERENCE

The Fifth Deep South Writers' and Artists' Conference will be held June 11-13 at the University of Southwestern Louisiana, Lafayette. Sponsors of the conference are Louisiana Branches of the National League of American Pen Women.

Awards will be made in the following categories: books, poetry, television and drama, nonfiction, and art — plus a number of special awards. Deadline for manuscripts is April 1; however, the deadline for books has already passed.

Information concerning the conference can be obtained from Miss Julia Collier, 1508 McArthur Drive, Mansfield, La. She is serving as director of the event.

Good Morning Everybody

This is K. Able Signal again.

After spending the last few months in research and planning we feel much happier to report that we have started the physical side of our construction. Our new main trunk line from the tower in Kiroli Woods, down along Arkansas and Trenton is being strung on the poles.

Our technicians are busy behind the construction crews, splicing cable together and setting amplifiers. When this new line is complete it will be necessary to interrupt the service in order that we can connect it. Then, when we have power on the new line all the amplifiers down the line have to be rebalanced. We have been asked "why can't you do this at night and not disturb our programs"? The answer is that we must have the station operating to balance the Signal and they shut down from 12 Midnight to about 6 AM!

At this point we would like to record the fine help and co-operation we are receiving from all the utility companies on whose poles we will be stringing our cable. A fast completion of pole rearrangements and turnaround of paper work makes our job much easier and will get a variety of T V entertainment into your home that much quicker.

We hope the weather will let us continue outside work faster than it has done 'til now but we just have to wait and see.

'Til next week then . . .

February 14, 1965

At left: Portraying leading roles in the Monroe Little Theatre's forthcoming production, the popular "Sound of Music," are Camille Wood and Bill Blythe, with Courtney Swayze, who has one of the children's parts. The musical will open Friday, February 19 at Strauss Playhouse, and run through Sunday, February 28. Curtain time is 8:15 p.m. with a matinee scheduled for the final performance on February 28.

At right: "Will you be my Valentine?" asks young Albert Herchenhahn, 6½, as he presents this flower-bedecked heart shaped box of candy to his mother, Mrs. Fred Herchenhahn, 1607 Roselawn, in observance of Valentine's Day today. Throughout history lovers have proclaimed their affection through Valentine missiles on St. Valentine's Day, February 14. The thousands of Valentines being received today run the gamut from deep and heartfelt tenderness to open fun-producing humor.

Below: The wedding of Miss Sheila Giddings, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Loyd C. Giddings of Jackson, Mississippi, formerly of Monroe, to Daniel Philip Stagg Jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. Daniel Philip Stagg of Bunkie, was solemnized Sunday, February 7 in Colonial Heights Baptist Church in Jackson. Vows were exchanged at 3 p.m. before an altar banked with mass arrangements of white gladioli and palms interspersed with foliage and lighted white tapers.

At left: Edgewood Baptist Church in West Monroe, was scene of the ceremony Saturday, February 13 at 4 p.m. which united in marriage Miss Dianne Love McGee and Harry Lee Williams. The bride is the daughter of Mrs. William Thomas Montgomery, West Monroe and the late Harry W. McGee and parents of the bridegroom are Mr. and Mrs. Riley Williams, Monroe. Rev. Roy Grant, uncle of the bride, performed the ceremony.

VALENTINE QUEEN of Beta Pi Chapter of Beta Sigma Phi sorority is Mrs. Bobby Wilson, who reigned over the annual Valentine banquet in her honor held Saturday night, February 13 at Admiral Benbow Inn.

Ann Walvoord Is Bride Of William M. Graff Jr.

Miss Ann Walvoord, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James Garrett Walvoord of Grand Isle, became the bride of William Morris Graff Jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. William Morris Graff of West Monroe in a ceremony Saturday, February 6.

Vows were exchanged at 7:30 p.m. in Metairie Ridge Presbyterian church at Metairie with Rev. J. W. Bracey officiating. Wedding music was presented by Mrs. B. A. Blackstone, organist, and Frank Mathews, soloist.

Cathedral candelabra holding lighted tapers and bouquets of bridal flowers formed a background setting at the altar.

Wearing a gown of silken taffeta in light ivory, the bride was given in marriage by her father. The fitted bodice, appliqued with a floral motif of re-embroidered Alencon lace, featured a circlet neckline and elbow sleeves. The dome shaped skirt was enhanced with scrolls of assymetrical lace, beaded with tiny seed pearls and sequins. A chapel train fell from a self fabric rose at the back waistline. She carried a cascade bouquet of lily of the valley and phalaenopsis spray orchids in light cream shade.

Miss Connie Trout served as maid of honor and bridesmaids were Miss Sheila Vanderbrook, Miss Nancy Taylor, Miss Janice Graff and Miss Pat Ittmann. They wore long dresses of red peau satin, styled with high necklines, elbow sleeves and floating back panels falling from the shoulder. Matching Dior bows formed their headdresses and they carried cascade bouquets of white tulips and English ivy.

Jesse Hanchey attended Mr. Graff as best man and groomsmen were Gary Parrish, Stanley Harris, Jack Lominick and James Walvoord. Ushers were William Walvoord and Roy Walther.

Following the ceremony Mr. and Mrs. Walvoord entertained at a reception at Metairie Country Club, where palms and baskets of flowers formed a background bower for the receiving line.

For travel when the couple left on a wedding trip the bride was wearing a pink suit with camel colored accessories and the orchid from her bouquet. A member of Delta Delta Delta sorority, the bride is a senior at Louisiana State University. Mr. Graff graduated from Northeast Louisiana State College and received his master's degree from LSU. He is presently a geologist with an oil company in New Orleans, where the couple will reside.

The vice-president, Mrs. B. D. Allbritton, conducted the business session which included annual reports. Mrs. F. V. Allison was named chairman of the past president's fund for 1965 convention.

Mrs. Coon, who served as chairman of the nominating committee along with Mrs. W. Barlow Inabnet Sr., and Miss Eleona Brinsmade presented the slate of nominees for 1965-66 officers, accepted by a unanimous vote.

Following the business session the program chairman, Mrs. Allbritton briefly interpreted the "Present Status of Music in Education and in Compositional Phases, USA." Fiona MacLeod's poem. "The White Peacock," was read by Mrs. Coon prior to Mrs. Eloise Stanhope's performance of Charles Griffes' "The White Peacock," written for piano. Mrs. Stanhope also played Chanty from poems of the Sea by Ernest Bloch and An Improbable Dance by Kilpatrick. The program was concluded with Miss Eleona Brinsmade's version of "The New Look in Opera," a review by Kaubion Bowers.

A social hour followed during which refreshments were served from a table which held a large silver compote of camellias, which blended with those used throughout the home. Miss Olmstead presided at the silver service.

Specialists Offer Tree Tips

BURLINGTON, Vt. (UPI) — Property owners planning to build a new home should hire a landscape architect before starting to build, say Extension specialists at the University of Vermont.

The money spent for this service will pay for itself many times over, the experts say. The landscape architect will advise which trees are worth saving and give valuable tips on how to locate the home so it shows off best among the trees.

The specialists warn that a foundation should be no closer than 20 feet from the trunk of a tree.

Personality Revealed In Color Choice

NEW YORK (UPI) — The girl who likes yellow is no coward, despite the old saw, says a manufacturer of hair coloring products here.

In a study to determine whether color preferences revealed personality types, the manufacturer says it found that the girl who likes yellow has a "zest for novelty."

"Strong-minded and willful, she wins every argument," the manufacturer says. "A man interested in a girl who likes yellow will earn her admiration on one condition — that he agrees with her.

"She's always a perpetual optimist. Take her to a sad movie and she'll find the silver lining."

Belts, Longer Jackets Mark Spring Suits

Although the unbelted dress remains firmly enthroned for spring, suits show a tendency to return to belts. The longer jackets are the cause. To get variety into the tunic and walking lengths, every designer is showing a few with belts.

In a few instances, perhaps prophetic, the belt actually cinches the waist. Larry Aldrich has one or two suits like that. But most belted suits place a bow-tied leash loosely on the hipbone, slotting it through tabs, or under the back.

Some coats, looking newer with belts, particularly straight and narrow coats, looking newer with narrow belts at that same hipbone line.

Will dresses gradually appear with belts? If Paris follows the Thirties trend, dresses will be next.

MRS. DONNIE EUGENE UPTIGROVE

Uptigrove-Jeffress Vows Read By Candlelight

In a candlelight setting Friday night, February 12 at 7 p.m. in St. Mark's Episcopal Church at Crossett, Miss Jessie Anne Jeffress became the bride of Donnie Eugene Uptigrove of Monroe. The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Leslie Ernest Jeffress of Crossett and parents of the bridegroom are Mr. and Mrs. George H. Uptigrove of Hamburg.

The Rev. Charles B. Hoglan Jr., of Forrest City and the Rev. John Ross Wellwood performed the double ring ceremony before an altar where white tulips, gladioli and stock were arranged on either side of the cross. Standing brass candelabra held lighted white tapers and candles burned in wall sconces down the nave of the church and in each window.

Ray Haney and John Sharer lighted the candles preceding the ceremony and John Terrence Wellwood was crucifer. Mrs. Charles B. Hoglan Jr. presented appropriate organ music.

Given in marriage by her father the bride wore a floor length gown of Chantilly lace fashioned with sculptured bodice, portrait neckline and cotillion sleeves. An A-line skirt swept to the back, releasing in a cathedral train. Her elbow veil of French illusion was attached to a princess crown of lily of the valley entwined with seed pearls. She carried a white prayer book on which rested a white orchid with a cascade of stephanotis.

Mrs. Fred Smith served as matron of honor and bridesmaids were Mrs. Harry Joe Tumblison and Miss Earline Walker of Monroe. The attendants were identically dressed in short frocks of red velveteen with A-line skirts falling from Empire waistlines. Short veils were attached to their miniature red velveteen pillboxes and they wore long white gloves and carried lighted white tapers, to which were attached corsages of red roses with white satin leaves.

Harold McKiever of Hamburg attended the bridegroom as best man. Serving as ushers were Bill Haney and Dan Webb.

Following the ceremony a reception was held in the parish hall of the church. The bride's table was centered with an arrangements of white spring flowers in a silver bowl, and flanked by the punch bowl and wedding cake, crested with a white orchid. Mrs. Jimmy Ross presided at the punch service and Mrs. Harold Glynn Young served the cake. Mrs. Dickie Dunn was at the bride's book.

Upon their return from a wedding trip the couple will be at home at 403 Gulpha Drive, West Monroe.

MISS MARTHA DIANNE ODOM

Engagement Of Area Couple Revealed At Tea

The home of Mrs. C. H. Elkins in Ruston was the scene Saturday afternoon for an announcement tea honoring Miss Martha Dianne Odom of Hodge, whose marriage to James Ellis Davison of Ruston, will be an event of April 10.

The bride-elect is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Everett D. Odom of Hodge, who made the formal engagement announcement. Parents of the prospective bridegroom are Mr. and Mrs. Paul M. Davison of Ruston.

The wedding will be solemnized in Hodge Baptist Church at 7 p.m. with Rev. J. D. Wagnon officiating.

Co-hostesses for the annoucement party were Mrs. J. C. Elkins of Winnsboro; Mrs. B. H. Elkins of Lewisville, Ark., Mrs. W. O. Ferguson, Monroe and Mrs. Royce Odom of Bastrop.

Guests were greeted by Mrs. Elkins and presented to Miss Odom, her mother and mother of her fiance.

White miniature chrysanthemums and orchid statice formed a mass arrangement on the mantel in the reception room and an identical arrangement with white satin streamers bearing the names "Dianne" and "James" centered the refreshment table. A crystal punch bowl was at one end of the table and individual cakes were served opposite.

For her party Miss Odom wore a powder blue brocade sheath with matching blue shoes and a white carnation corsage.

Miss Tommie Lou Elkins of Lewisville, Ark., registered guests in the bride's book, placed on a table centered with a white taper in a silver candlestick, encircled with mistletoe. A large number of guests called during the appointed hours of 3 until 5 p.m.

Miss Odom has chosen her sister, Miss Delora Odom to serve as maid of honor for her wedding. Bridesmaids will be Miss Jean Francis, Houston, Texas; Miss Sondra Ellis of Fordyce, Ark., and Miss Joyce Murphree of Luling. Candlelighters will be Miss Tommie Lou Elkins of Lewisville and Gary Elkins of Winnsboro.

The bride-elect was graduated from Jonesboro-Hodge high school and is now attending Louisiana Polytechnic Institute in Ruston. Mr. Davison is a graduate of Ruston high school and of Louisiana Polytechnic Institute. The couple will be at home in Ruston.

...On Dit...

by Marillyn Taylor

Several lovely social affairs were planned this week for ladies attending the state conference of Colonial Dames XVII Century, which was held Tuesday through Thursday at the Virginia hotel. Business sessions and banquets belong in someone else's department, but this reporter will tell about the purely party parties.

On Tuesday evening, VAN GLADNEY, state president from Bastrop, was honored at a reception held in the home of LUCILLE TURPIN on Loop road. Society colors of gold and blue were carried out in floral arrangements noted throughout the house. Before the glass wall overlooking the bayou was a silver wine cooler holding King Alfred jonquils and blue Dutch iris in a mass spring bonquet. Camellias were placed before the pier mirror in the living room, on the mantel in the library, and other vantage points.

Guests were greeted at the door by BETSY TAYLOR. In the receiving line were JUDY TURPIN; DOT AMMAN; Van; MRS. THOMAS BURCHETT of Ashland, Kentucky, president general of the national society; and MRS. CHARLES ROBERSON of Abilene Texas, national vice-president general.

Blooming plants in pots were banked around the fountain in the garden room. Here were noted chrysanthemums and azaleas. Three small refreshment tables were placed in this room. Violin music was provided between five and seven.

Visiting guests exclaimed with delight over Lucille's delicious coffee punch: a marvelously rich concoction of ice cream, whipped cream, coffee, served by RUTH MADISON. At a second table, JO MATTISON presided at the crystal punch bowl filled with strawberry punch. On the third table were sliced ham and turkey, and several spreads and dips. Each table was decorated with candles.

The dining table was centered with Lucille's antique silver epergne, overflowing with King Alfreds, yellow acacia, and blue Dutch iris. LESSIE GARRETT served coffee punch from the silver bowl in this room.

Silver trays held chicken salad sandwiches, salted nuts, and petit fours. Others who assisted were MERLE ADAMS, CHARLOTTE TURPIN, BEN McLEAN, EMMA ALEXANDER, and MRS. DREW HAYS of Ruston, MRS. GEORGE LESTER of Baton Rouge, and MRS. A. M. ROBINSON of Bastrop.

Following luncheon at the Lotus club on Wednesday, the ladies motored to Columbia (almost) for a party at the home of JENNIE REYNOLDS. This, one of our old plantation homes, is always a delight to homefolk and visitors alike.

The hostess greeted her guests in the spacious center hall at the entrance. The doors which open into this hall from the front gallery and those separating the halls are in four sections, paneled, with the original glass. A fanlight extends over all four sections. In this room, as throughout the older parts of the house, floors are of cypress, aged to a beautiful honey shade. Exquisite Savonerie rugs are used in both sections of the hall. Walls of the entrance are covered in a bright floral printed paper. Outstanding pieces of furniture are the antique green velvet loveseat, an old pier mirror, and an unusual low sideboard.

To the left is the first of several bedrooms featuring white painted paneling combined with wallpaper. Here paper is a subdued blue-grey shade, complimenting the lovely old tiles facing the fireplace. A tall old bed with full tester is focal point of the room.

Across the hall is another bedroom with cypress floors, white paneling, fireplace of slave-made brick. The study opens from this room. Wallpaper here is an all-over floral print in shades of green. There is another fireplace here, and an antique plantation desk. Gun cases are built into the painted paneling.

Opposite is another bedroom, a charming small room with halftester bed and marble top dresser. Wallpaper is in shades of lavender, with white wainscotting. Mauve draperies hang at the windows, which are the double hung sashes, eighteen light, seen all over the house.

The dining hall, with the Savonerie rug over the cypress floors, has walls covered with mauve paper. At Wednesday's party, the table was covered with a green velvet cloth edged at the floor with pink fringe. A silver compote overflowing with King Alfreds, camellias, and white gladioli stood on a silver tray. Jennie's daughter, JENNIE CRUMP, served tea. Pink candles burned in branched candelabra on candle stands in each corner of the room.

In the family dining room, three steps below the level of the older part of the house, walls are of pine paneling, with cypress used for kitchen walls, also in this newer part of the house. Refreshments were served from two round tables, each centered with a spring arrangement incorporating red camellias, bird's nests, and tiny figures of robins. The hostess's mother, MRS. W. N. REYNOLDS, served coffee.

A charming feature of the Colonial Dames XVII century banquet Wednesday night at Bayou DeSiard country club was the presentation of flowers to visiting dignitaries by children in colonial attire. LOU LEMERT and MARY HAZEL GLADNEY of Vidalia wore scalloped, embroidered organdy frocks, identical except for color of sashes, over ruffled pantaloons. They were escorted by CORBIN AMMAN and ALLEN TURPIN, in colonial court dress. They presented nosegays to Mrs. Burchett, Mrs. Roberson, and Mrs. Gladney.

Lou and Mary Hazel were also serving as pages at the business sessions, along with FRANCES DEAN HERR, LYNN FUNDERBURK, KAY ADAMS, and MARY VAUGHN INABNET.

□ □ □

A surprise birthday party honored PAT FUNDERBURK Monday night at the Paragon. ZELMA MARION was hostess honoring her daughter. A Valentine motif was carried out in decorations, with a two layer cake as centerpiece. The top layer of the cake was a big red Valentine. At each side of the cake was a styrafoam heart on which stood a compote holding red candles and red and white carnations. Those attending were CHARLOTTE BOURLAND, WAENA MAYO, ANN CLARK, LIBBY ANDERS, EDWINA WELCH, MAGGIE FAYE WALKER, and ANGIE IRWIN.

'Twas a flying visit by MRS. MILLARD SHELLMAN, who arrived Tuesday night late, left Friday at noon. She was the guest of her daughter and son-in-law, JUDY and GENE WORTHEN. Mrs. Shellman was en route to her home in Saugatuck, Michigan, after a winter vacation in Mexico.

For Valentine's Day, here are some quotations on that oft-remarked-on subject, love. First, from William Shakespeare:

"If thou remember'st not the slightest folly That ever love did make thee run into, Thou hast not loved."

"Love is a spirit all compact of fire."

"They say, base men being in love have then a nobility in their natures more than is native to them."

"Doubt that the stars are fire; Doubt that the sun doth move; Doubt truth to be a liar; But never doubt I love."

"Love is blind and lovers cannot see The pretty follies that themselves commit."

"Young men's love then lies Not truly in their hearts, but in their eyes."

Other authors have made these comments on love:

"Love is local anguish — I am 50 miles distant, and am not half so miserable."

—Samuel Taylor Coleridge.

"What we call love had been exhausted, and there we stood face to face in our true natural relations: two egotists, perfect strangers to each other."

—Leo Tolstoy.

"Lovers always think that other people have had their eyes put out."

Whole Apple Best For You

Americans still repeat that adage, "an apple a day keeps the doctor away." One doctor advises that it should be the whole apple, except for the core and stem.

He also recommends scrubbing the skin with plenty of soapsuds, then rinsing it thoroughly before eating the unpeeled apple.

Ice Cream Hot Item In Cold Weather

NEW YORK (UPI) — Ice cream is a hot item in cold weather.

An ice cream manufacturer says that the average American eats 22 quarts of ice cream a year, only a third less during the fall and winter than during the summer and spring.

The manufacturer, Good Humor, quoted U. S. Department of Agriculture (USDA) statistics that show consumption of 426 million gallons of ice cream and related products during the six fall and winter months of 1963-64, compared with 645 million gallons during the six spring and summer months of 1964.

The related products included sherbet, frozen desserts, water ices and ice milk. Consumption of the latter was up 44 per cent over totals of the 1958-1962 period.

Dressmaker Returns To Fashion Scene

A few years back, women who once had most of their clothes made for them were mourning the disappearance of the "little dressmaker." Even in Paris it was said you couldn't find the round-the-corner sewing genius who could copy a Dior for a fraction of the price.

But the little dressmaker hasn't really gone, she's just come back in a smarter new disguise. In New York, at least, she does her own designs, does them ready-to-wear with fittings for alterations.

She may be very expensive, as at Martha's in the Savoy-Hilton hotel, or she may be comparatively moderate, as at Despina, who likes Greek inspiration in her clothes.

MR. AND MRS. LEMUEL MICHAEL MARCHBANKS

MR. AND MRS. MALCOLM EUGENE EVANS

Vows Unite Couple In Wisner Church

Wedding vows were exchanged by Miss Linda Sue Francis and Monroe Richard Roberts Jr. in a ceremony Friday, February 5 at 6 p.m. in South Central Baptist Church near Wisner. Parents of the couple are Mr. and Mrs. Joseph S. Francis and Mr. and Mrs. Monroe R. Roberts.

Baskets of white gladioli flanked the altar where Rev. Harold Dunn performed the ceremony. Appropriate nuptial music was provided by the organist, Miss Ann Dunn.

The bride was given in marriage by her brother, Glynn Edwin Francis of Winnsboro. She wore a pale pink suit with matching accessories and a corsage of white carnations.

Attending the bride was Miss Sue Roberts, who wore a light blue brocade model and a corsage of pink carnations. Edgar Ray Barlow served the bridegroom as best man.

A reception followed in the reception room of the church. The bride's table, covered with a white lace cloth over pink, was centered with pink camellias and pink tapers in crystal candelabra.

After a wedding trip to New Orleans the couple will be at home in Wisner.

Double Wedding Unites Aulds Twins, Area Men

The twin daughters of Mr. and Mrs. Jessie D. Aulds of Calhoun were married in a double wedding ceremony on January 30 at 6 p.m. in Beulah Methodist Church at Calhoun. Miss Trudy Aulds became the bride of Lemuel Michael Marchbanks of Port Lavaca, Texas and Miss Judy Aulds, the bride of Malcolm Eugene Evans of Mandeville.

Mr. Marchbanks is the son of Mr. and Mrs. James D. Miller of Lake Providence and parents of Mr. Evans are Mr. and Mrs. Jack Evans of Rayville.

Vows were exchanged in a setting of white stock and gladioli, fern and smilax and burning candles in candle trees flanking a center arch. Pews were marked with white satin bows.

Rev. W. G. Stegall performed the double ring vows with Miss Paula Tudor, pianist, providing appropriate wedding music.

Trudy was escorted by her father and Judy was escorted by her brother, Darwin Aulds of Dahlgren, Virginia. Both were given in marriage by their father. The brides wore identical gowns of candlelight peau de soie, styled with fitted bodices and short skirts falling in soft folds. Lace overblouses featured scalloped necklines and long tapered sleeves. Their brief illusion veils cascaded from peau de soie roses worn crown style and they carried bouquets of carnations and white roses. Each wore a pearl pendant, gift of the grooms.

Misses Charlotte and Charlene Aiklen, also twins, of Homer, served as maids of honor for the brides. They wore frocks of mauve peau de soie with matching veils on velvet leaf circlets and carried single long stemmed American Beauty roses.

Gary Tryon served Mr. Marchbanks as best man and Loyd Sharbono was best man for Mr. Evans. Ushers, who also served as candlelighters were David Griffith and Larry Branch.

For the occasion Mrs. Aulds wore a Dresden blue silk dress with lace applique and matching accessories. Her corsage was a pink orchid. Mrs. Miller chose copen blue silk with accessories to match and a white orchid, while Mrs. Evans wore royal blue wool with a pink orchid pinned to her shoulder.

Following the ceremony a reception was held in the social room of the church. The brides placed their bouquets on the table where the crystal punch bowl and tiered wedding cake flanked silver candelabra holding lighted tapers. The bride's table was covered with a white satin cloth, caught up at the corners with white satin bows.

Miss Jetta Pearl Ziegler served the cake and Mrs. Loyd Sharbono poured punch. Miss Elizabeth Miller and Miss Susan Evans, sisters of the bridegrooms, invited guests to register in the bride's books. Tea girls were Miss Carolyn Smith, Miss Judy Parker, Miss Teresa Purdy and rice bags were distributed by Debbie Sanford and Patsy Smith.

When Mr. and Mrs. Evans left for a wedding trip to New Orleans, the bride was wearing a white wool suit with pale blue accessories and a corsage of white roses. Mrs. Marchbanks chose for their wedding trip to Biloxi, Mississippi, a navy wool suit with navy accessories and a white rose corsage.

Mr. and Mrs. Marchbanks will establish a home in Port Lavaca, Texas. Mr. Marchbanks graduated from Lake Providence high school and attended Louisiana Polytechnic Institute and is now employed in Port Lavaca. Mr. Evans finished Rayville high school and graduated in June, 1964 from Louisiana Tech where he was a member of Tau Beta Pi and Eta Kappa Nu. The brides were graduated from Calhoun high school and from Louisiana Tech in January, 1965. Mr. and Mrs. Evans will be at home in Mandeville.

REHEARSAL SUPPER

Mr. and Mrs. James D. Miller and Malcolm Evans were hosts for the rehearsal supper on Friday evening at the Holiday Inn in Ruston, following the wedding rehearsal. The two couples chose this occasion to present gifts to members of their wedding party and the pianist.

Food Will Be Plentiful In 1965; Bills Not Likely To Be Beefed Up

By GAYLORD P. GODWIN

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Agriculture Department predicts there will be abundant food supplies for the U. S. population in 1965, with plenty left over for export.

Retail food prices in 1965 probably will rise but not quite as much as the 1 per cent 1964 prices rose over those of 1963.

Department economists said the upward pressure on prices of foods from crops that has persisted for the past two years likely will not be repeated next year. Increased production of fruits and potatoes are expected to reduce prices for these items. No repeat of price runups for sugar and coffee are foreseen at this time.

Continued large consumption of animal products is expected to maintain average retail prices near late 1964 levels.

The food bill in 1965 is expected to be about 3 per cent above the $80 billion estimated for 1964, but the increase will not come solely from higher retail prices.

The department said per capita food consumption in 1965 is expected to equal 1964's high level, which was about 1 per cent above that of 1963. This, together with the usual 1.5 per cent gain in population, will account for part of the gain in the total food bill. The remainder will come from increased marketing prices.

Sales by eating and drinking places, up 7 per cent in 1964, suggest that more food is being marketed through restaurants and other away-from-home eating places. Prices of such food are up 2 per cent for 1964. There is nothing to suggest a change in this trend for 1965.

The whopping food bill for 1964 does not include expenditures for alcoholic beverages. The booze bill in 1963 was $11 billion, and probably more in 1964 because there were more people of drinking age. The same trend undoubtedly will hold true for 1965.

The department said the 1964 increase of nearly 1 per cent in per capita food consumption was due largely to sizable increases in consumption of beef, turkey, and fresh fruits—particularly apples and citrus. Offsetting to some extent were small declines for pork, lamb, and vegetables, including potatoes. The department said anticipated increases for beef and citrus fruits in 1965 likely will about balance decline for pork, lamb, and dairy products.

The department predicted rising consumer incomes and continued population growth in 1965 would expand further the domestic demand for food.

The food industry conducted a nation-wide food sales promotion campaign in 1964, using the phrase "only 19."

That meant that only 19 per cent of disposable income was used in the purchase of food, that food really was a bargain, considering the average income. That campaign was outdated when it started, because the 19 per cent angle was reached in 1963.

The percentage of disposable income spent for food in 1964 was only 18½ per cent. The department said the percentage would be down to 18 in 1965.

Agricultural exports in fiscal 1964 totaled about $6.1 billion. This high figure is not expected to be reached in fiscal 1965, but the end total will be close, according to educated guesses.

Nutritionists of the Agricultural Research Service (ARS) predict U. S. foods in 1965 will provide about the same quantity of nutrients per capita as in 1964.

The ARS nutritionists said that except for a drop in ascorbic acid (vitamin C) the nutritional level of the U. S. food consumption has been quite uniform during the first part of the 1960's. The drop in vitamin C since 1962 was due to smaller supplies of citrus fruits caused by the Florida freeze in December, 1962.

The nutritionists said that although the production of fresh and processed citrus fruits is expected to increase sharply in the 1964-65 crop season, the total supplies of these high vitamin C foods still may be short of the high 1962 supply.

Fringed Look Making Home Fashion News

The be-fringed and be-tasseled look is home fashion news in 1965 for throw pillows, bedspreads, canopies, and window shades, to name just a few examples of this new fashion foible. A large 4'x4' "pouff", bursting with fat cushioning of latex foam rubber and dressed up in a favorite fabric takes on added zing with tasseled corners.

As a change from the usual window treatment, why not try side panels? In length the same as the window, and 12" wide, they are a smart new fashion note covered in wallpaper or fabric in one of the new gaily colored patterns.

Spring Fabrics Show Trend To Soft Textures

Fabrics for spring, 1965, show a trend to softer textures, but bolder patterns. Wool acetate and rayon will be blended, then bonded to acetate tricot for a double-face fabric that needs no lining. Many of these will be in large checks.

Sheer and lacy weaves will have this bonded tricot backing, the top layer in a different color from the lining, as in white over a soft blue. See-through knits, self-lined, will appear in cool shades of apricot, mint green and pale turquoise, the lining in a contrast shade.

Jacques Maisch, crepe specialist, does a fine pebbled weave in sharp white, creamy beige, brilliant grass green or flaming coral, colors that take the dullness out of crepe. Nylon jersey appears in brilliant multi-hued prints for blouses and shifts.

MR. AND MRS. JEWEL ADRIAN YOUNGBLOOD

Couple Exchanges Vows In Candlelight Setting

The wedding of Miss Patricia Lea Hughes and Jewel Adrian Youngblood, both of this city was solemnized Saturday, February 6 in the Church of Christ. The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ramon Hughes, Monroe and parents of the bridegroom are Mr. and Mrs. E. J. Youngblood of Natchitoches.

Four candelabra entwined with large chrysanthemums and leatherleaf fern flanked by baskets of chrysanthemums and leatherleaf formed a background setting for the double ring ceremony performed by E. C. McKenzie, at 7:30 p.m.

Wedding music was provided by Ronnie Brothers, organist and candles were lighted by Paul Hughes and Johnny Paylor.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, wore a floor length gown of white silk ribbon cloth with matching jacket, featuring three-quarter sleeves and high neckline. Her veil of illusion fell shoulder length from an orchid-shape headdress of crystals and pearls with drop crystals over the forehead. Her bouquet comprised an orchid surrounded by stephanotis with a cascade of white satin streamers and backed by double gold wedding rings.

Mrs. Travis Sanders Jr., sister of the bride, served as matron of honor and Miss Paula Bauer, was bridesmaid. They wore identical street length sheaths of turquoise silk linen with matching bow headpieces and carried single large chrysanthemums, encircled by white satin bows.

Serving as best man for the bridegroom was his brother-in-law, Louis Townsend. Travis T. Sanders Jr. served as groomsman and ushers were Tommy Barker and Melvin Lee.

For her daughter's wedding Mrs. Hughes wore an apricot wool dress with brown accessories and a cream cymbidium orchid corsage. Mrs. Youngblood, mother of the groom, wore a beige knit ensemble with brown accessories and a cream cymbidium orchid.

A reception followed the ceremony at Scott Hall, where the bride's table was covered with pale green linen overlaid with an heirloom hand crocheted cloth. A bride doll formed the centerpiece and was flanked by white tapers in gold candle sticks. The tiered wedding cake at one end of the table was served by Miss Barbara Soumi and presiding at the bowl of green punch opposite was Miss Suzanne Mosely. Mrs. Barbara Townsend, sister of the groom, presided at the table which held the bride's book and memory candle.

Tea girls were Misses Marilyn Paylor, Carolyn Paylor and Nelda Purdy.

For travel when the couple left on a short wedding trip the bride was wearing a double breasted turquoise wool suit with black suede accessories and the orchid from her bouquet. They will be at home at 402 Dixie in Monroe, where Mr. Youngblood, who graduated from Coushatta high school, is now employed. The bride graduated from Ouachita Parish high school and is presently attending Northeast Louisiana State College.

YOUR PROBLEMS

Man's Erratic Temper Is Infantile Behavior

By ANN LANDERS

Dear Ann Landers: My fiance, Bob, and I are both 20. We have been going together for two years. Bob wants to be married next May. My problem is that I don't know if I should marry him. Here is an example of what worries me.

Friday night we planned to go to the movies. The last complete show started at 10:05. We arrived at the box-office at 10:15 and found it closed.

Bob was so furious he pulled out of the parking lot like a maniac and careened down the street at a dangerously high rate of speed. He kept saying "I have to get this out of my system."

Finally he swerved off to a side-street and drove into an alley. He brought the car to a screeching halt and put his head in his hands and cried. I sat silent for about 10 minutes while he sobbed. Suddenly he changed the subject and was extremely pleasant as we rode back to my house.

I'm afraid Bob may take his erratic temper out on me after we are married. What do you think? — DESPERATE

Dear Desperate: A 20-year-old man who deals with frustration at an infantile level is the worst possible husband material. This boy needs psychiatric help, not a wife. And you need to go with others for two years at least, to see if the young man is ever going to grow up.

The letter below is from a woman who married such a man. Please read on:

Dear Ann Landers: Can you help me? My husband has a TNT temper. I try awfully hard not to rile him — even to the point where I have memorized a list of things I must not do, or subjects I must not bring up.

It is useless. One wrong word and the table or chair gets a kick or I am in for a terrible tongue lashing.

On the highway he is forever cursing the other drivers, trying to pass them if he feels they have passed him "for spite." He takes everything as a personal affront — a chance shove in a crowded area is always "on purpose." If it rains on a day he had planned to do some gardening he just sits and sulks for hours — won't even read.

Worst of all is his violent temper. He explodes over nothing and now I am the target. What can I do so his outbursts do not hurt so much? Thank you for any help you might give. — FLORADORA GIRL

Dear Girl: Your husband's inability to deal with frustration demonstrates that, emotionally, he is still in knee pants. He needs professional help. If he refuses to get it, I hope you will handle his childish behavior as you would a child's tantrum. Let him blow himself out and ignore him.

Ann Landers will be glad to help you with your problems. Send them to her in care of this newspaper enclosing a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

Couple Wed In Rites At Jonesville

Vows uniting in marriage Miss Carolyn Sue McCauley and Tommy Lee Massey were solemnized in the Sandy Lake Pentecostal Church, Jonesville, Friday, February 5 at 7:30 p.m. The Rev. E. M. Hooter, grandfather of the bride and the Rev. J. T. Massey Sr., father of the groom, officiated.

The bride is the daughter of M. B. McCauley of Jasper, Texas and the late Mary Hooter McCauley. She is also the granddaughter of Rev. and Mrs. E. M. Hooter of Harrisonburg. Parents of the bridegroom are Rev. and Mrs. J. T. Massey Sr. of Ferriday.

The altar was decorated with baskets of white lilies of the valley with stock and greenery. Traditional wedding music was presented by Miss Juanita Curington of Ferriday.

Given in marriage by Rep. David I. Patten of Catahoula parish, the bride wore a gown of white satin peau de soie, styled with long tapered sleeves and bateau neckline. Her veil of illusion drifted from a crown of pearls and she carried a bouquet of lilies of the valley centered with two white orchids and white streamers.

Mrs. Charles C. Stringer, who served as matron of honor and only attendant for the bride, wore a beige brocade dress with beige pillbox, covered with a circular veil. Her accessories were of matching shade and her corsage was of bronze chrysanthemums.

Charles L. Massey attended his brother as best man and ushers were Charles Boothe of Monroe and C. M. Tolbert of Jonesville.

For the occasion the bride's grandmother wore a dress of mauve silk crepe with matching accessories and a corsage of white carnations. The bridegroom's mother chose a blue wool sheath with matching accessories and white carnation corsage.

Following the ceremony a reception was held in the home of the bride's grandparents. The table, covered with a lace cloth over pink, held a central arrangement of pink and white roses. Mrs. Faye McCauley, stepmother of the bride and Mrs Zack Meyers, served the tiered wedding cake and alternating at the punch service were Mrs. Charles L. Massey and Mrs. W. D. Hackney Jr. The coffee service was presided over by Miss Tam Zeagler and assisting with courtesies was Miss Hilda Massey.

For travel the bride wore a coral wool suit with black accessories and the orchid from her bouquet. Upon their return from a wedding trip the couple will be at home in Ridgecrest, a subdivision of Vidalia.

Out - of - town guests attended from Monroe, Jasper, Texas, Clarksville, Tenn., Eunice and Ferriday.

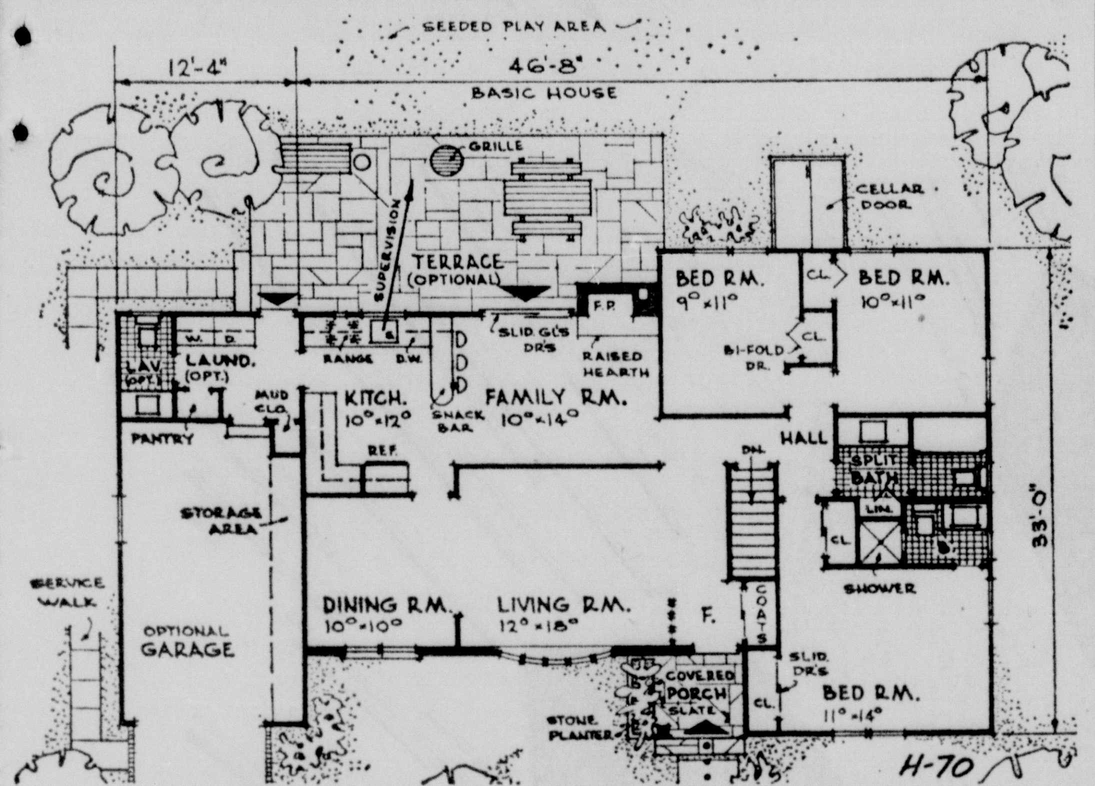
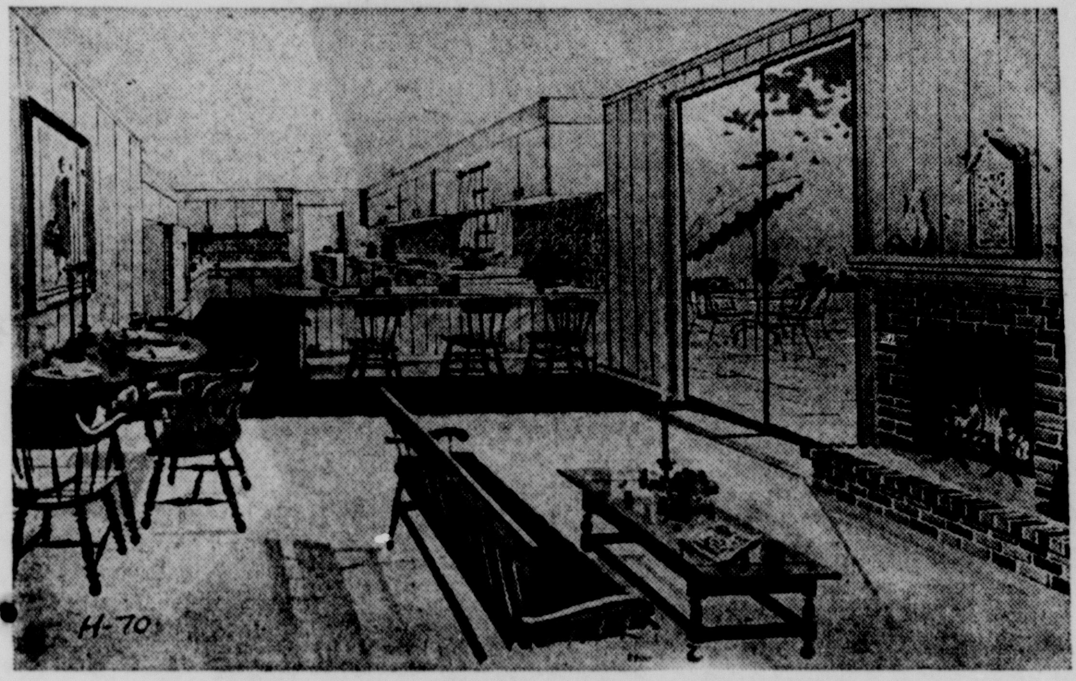
BOW WINDOW, wide roof overhangs, triangular louvers, covered front entrance and nice combination of stone and wood shingles add luxury touches to this well-designed modest home.



FLOOR PLANS: A lot of thought obviously went into Design H-70, evidenced by the excellent traffic pattern, separating the living, service and sleeping areas and giving free movement without using the living and dining rooms as passageways.



THE KITCHEN in the background is divided from this fireplaced family room by a snack bar. Sliding glass doors lead from the family room to a large terrace.

HOUSE OF THE WEEK

Comfort Gives Keynote To This Small House

By ANDY LANG

Talk to any writer and he will tell you that it often is more difficult to produce a short rather than a long story. It is much the same in the field of architecture. Creating a good small house usually calls for more ingenuity than does a large one.

In designing the latest House of the Week, architect Herman H. York exercised plenty of ingenuity in turning out a one-story plan containing a basic 1267 square feet of habitable area yet supplying every requirement for comfortable living. York has included many features ordinarily seen only in larger, more expensive houses. The over-all dimensions are modest — 46'8" in length, 38' in depth. If a little more space is available, plans are included for a one - car garage, laundry and extra lavatory, adding 12'4" to the length.

The center hall entrance is through a covered porch into a foyer which in turn leads to a living room with a bowed front window. Also in the front of the house, and directly in line with the living room, is the dining room, affording a sweep of 28'. While there is an entrance from the dining room to the kitchen, it is possible to go from the front entrance to the family room and kitchen without going through the living room. Adding to the good circulation pattern is the movement from the front door to the three-bedroom wing without crossing any other rooms.

A full study of this architect - designed House of the Week may be obtained by writing THE HOUSE OF THE WEEK, c-o the Monroe Morning World, Monroe, La., and enclosing 50 cents to cover cost of handling and mailing. Please specify House Plan H-70

The kitchen window directly over the sink, affords eye control over the rear terrace and play area, a desirable feature when there are children in the family. A snack bar divides the kitchen from the family room, which has a fireplace with a raised and sliding glass doors to the terrace. It isn't difficult to see how this attractively-designed combination — kitchen, family room and terrace — could become the focal point of the family's informal activities, leaving the living room and dining room free for formal entertaining.

When use is made of the area to the rear of the garage, the laundry and lavatory are accessible from a rear door as well as the kitchen. Under this arrangement, there is room for a pantry just off the kitchen and a storage area in the garage.

There are two bathrooms in the bedroom wing. The one in the main bedroom includes a stall shower. The other is a large bathroom with a split arrangement for dual use by children and guests. A private hall in this section of the house includes a stairway leading down to a full cellar. The plans also call for an outside entrance to the cellar from the rear garden.

Stone and wood shingles are pleasingly combined on the exterior. The wide roof overhangs add an appearance of luxury and contribute to lower maintenance costs because of the protection they give to the sidewalls. A bit of aesthetic value is added by the use of triangular rather than rectangular louvers at the gable ends. Besides their eye appeal, they afford an extra measure of ventilation for the roof.

Architect York has achieved his aim of making a good small house.

GERMS IN WASH

WASHINGTON (UPI) — It may surprise the fastidious housewife to know it may be her own wash that's helping to spread the cold germs. Even though her laundry seems fresher than springtime when she takes it out of the washing machine, it still can be playing host to an army of unpleasant germs.

This is the conclusion reached in tests of home laundry methods by the Department of Agriculture's Clothing and Textile Laboratory. As many as 30 kinds of bacteria can survive the usual washing process despite the vast selection of suds and detergents, the government researchers reported. As a result of the tests, the researchers recommended that housewives use disinfectants in their wash.

GARDEN CENTER NOTES

Flower Show By Highland

By MRS. JOHN TOLAR

The Fifth District Garden Center program was presented by the Highland Park Garden Club of Monroe, last Wednesday. Mrs. R. F. Bealle, club president, with four other members, brought the six designs for the show featuring camellias and flowering shrubs.

Mrs. W. B. Hollingsworth made her design, asymmetrical in structure, using the lovely curving pussy willow branches for her overall line in a low, white ceramic bowl. A needle point holder, placed to one side in the bowl, secured the plant material. White single camellias with yellow stamens were placed low in the focal area. For balance the design was placed to one side on a woven straw mat. Long lasting is the beauty of this design, which could be used indefinitely by replacing the camellias.

Mrs. Bealle made two designs. The first had the oriental influence featuring flowering quince for the vertical line of the asymmetrical triangle in a low rectangular bowl of soft green and tan colors. Four Debutante camellias, soft double pink, were placed low within the line. The foliage of the flowers served as color contrast and filler for the design.

CURVING LEAVES

For her second design Mrs. Bealle used two curving aspidestra leaves, tiered, to form background for the vertical placement of the graceful line of flowering quince. For the "eye-catcher" in the design one "Purple Dawn" camellia with several of its leaves was placed low in the small, round, green ceramic container. For added height and balance, a small black base was placed under this design. This is a wonderful way to enjoy the full beauty of one camellia. One camellia can form a whole show within itself, therefore, it is an excellent flower to use in the "one flower" arrangement.

Mrs. Harold Dickens used boxwood spikes to form the line of her asymmetrical triangle design in a green compote container. Within this line she placed a grouping of orange glads blending the bud tips into the full open florets down into the focal area. Leaves were placed at the basic part of the design tying the glads into the container. For background and depth she used iris foliage to the back.

This design would be a lovely compliment to a room with a color scheme blending orange, brown and green tones.

WHITE DELPHINIUMS

Mrs. Richard Salter made the overall symmetrical line of her design with white delphiniums in a low black ceramic bowl. Greenish white marigolds were grouped and placed in the central part of the established line, on each side of the design, making this a free-standing arrangement suitable for the dining table or low coffee table in the living room.

Mrs. Jerry Lee cut branches from her eucalyptus tree to use for her formal (symmetrical) line in a small light green urn. Light pink camellias (single type) with the buds graduated into the upper part of the primary line. For focal balance several double, deeper pink camellias were placed low in the design. The leaves of the camellia formed a pleasing background for the blossoms and gave stability to the graceful eucalyptus branches. Since the urn container was rather small for this tall design a black, footed glass base was used beneath the urn for better balance.

Thanks to Highland Park Garden Club for this wonderful program. Now is the time — camellias are coming into the spotlight. Have you selected your new ones for the garden? You can find a good selection now in the nurseries. Be sure to shop for those favorites that you have had back in mind since last year.

SELECT PLACE

Have a special place ready in your landscape before shopping. Then, you will have better luck with your new plants and enjoy them more.

Speaking of camellias — don't forget the show that is coming up soon staged by the Northeast Louisiana Camellia Club of Monroe, in the Central Savings Bank and Trust Co. building, 300 DeSiard St., February 20 and 21. All camellia growers are invited to enter their specimen blooms. Entries will be received from 7 a.m. to 12 noon, Feb. 20. General chairman for the show is Philip Bernhardt. Mrs. M. L. Johnson is chairman of the Design Division.

Here's an invitation — extended to members of the Twin City Garden clubs to attend the Heart Fund Tea to be held at the home of Mrs. Irene Reid, 1621 Emerson St., Feb. 28. Time is 3 p.m. to 5 p.m.

Wednesday's program will be presented by Dr. John Wright, Louisiana Tech, Ruston.

SOUTHERN GARDENER

There's Color In Conifers

By WILLIAM LANIER HUNT

The conifers are even more beautiful here in the South where we grow so many broad-leaf evergreens than they are in the north. We really need the blue conifers like Irish junipers, English junipers and Colorado blue spruces for accent points and contrast with all our green backgrounds.

The grey greens of the large true cedars of Lebanon, Atlas cedars and deodar cedars are the most outstanding splashes of "blue" among the big trees. Somewhat smaller are the various fancy "blue" false-cypresses chamaecyparis about which we wrote a column earlier in the winter. The most popular of all these is probably the one called "squarrosa" which seems to be in most nurseries. When properly fed, this frosty evergreen is a gorgeous thing with needles that seem to reflect some lavender tints in winter.

BRIGHT EFFECT

Yellow conifers, when properly placed as specimens, lend a bright effect to the winter landscape. Perhaps the commonest and most popular yellow conifer in the south has always been Berkmans' golden arborvitae which originated in the old Fruitland Nursery at Augusta, Georgia. Unfortunately, in some places this evergreen was overdone. Whole hedges of gold are not very beautiful all the way around cemeteries. Where these golden (not all year 'round) conifers were tastefully used, they were very effective and still are.

If you look around in nurseries, sometimes you can find several other beautiful winter-yellow conifers. The Goldspire arborvitae, Rollinson's Golden arborvitae, Cripps Golden Cypress (Chamaecyparis), Golden Sawara Cypress (also a Chamaecyparis) and the yellow form of the Plume Cypress are all eye-catching plants for focal points in the winter landscape.

POINTS OF INTEREST

In photographing the Gotelli Collection of dwarf conifers at the National Arboretum (See last week's column) the yellow and golden evergreens always drew my camera in their direction as points of interest. They are as attractive in winter as any flowers would be in summer, but, of course, they must not be overdone.

There are many other colored conifers in nurseries. Right now is the time to visit them and begin to plan a winter landscape which combines these elegant plants with your other plantings.

Flowers Aid Where Words Of Love Fail

By EARL ARONSON
AP Newsfeatures

WE ENVISION problems of communication by a generation more concerned about human Beetles than the insect variety but there's a way to express your sentiments through flowers.

Several lists of flower-meanings have come to our attention, designed to help a young swain through a bouquet of words with a bouquet of flowers.

The following list, compiled by the horticultural staff at Florida's Cypress Gardens (which believes that "all the world loves a lover") is designed to help you substitute the appropriate flowers when you can't find the words. These flowers supposedly have acquired a special meaning for romanticists:

DAINTINESS

Aster — symbol of daintiness or elegance — "I think you are charming."

Begonia—flirtations but frivolous — "Beware! I am not serious."

Calendula—sensible and sensitive — "Be careful, do not hurt me."

Carnation (red) — admiration — "You are a wonderful person."

Carnation (white) — white, pure and ardent love — "My love is true."

Carnation (yellow) — disdain and rejection — "I do not wish to see you again."

Dahlia — treachery — "You can't be true."

Daisy — purity in thought and loyal love — "I love you for just being yourself."

Dogwood — love in adversity — "I'll love you even in bad times."

Everlasting Flower (Helichrysum) — constancy — I'll always be yours."

Gardenia — restrained affection — "I love you secretly."

Hibiscus — delicate and beautiful — "You are the perfection of womanhood."

Honeysuckle — bond of love — "We belong to each other."

Impatiens — refusal and severed affections — "Touch me not, you have offended me."

Jasmine (white) — cheerfulness — "Our love will be sweet."

Jasmine (yellow) — folly and glee — "Our love will be intoxicating."

HUMILITY

Lily of the Valley—humility and renewed happiness — "I'm sorry, let's make up."

Magnolia—hopeful but doubtful — "I wonder if you really care for me."

Marigold — unhappy love — "I can't go on this way."

Orange blossom — marriage and eternal love — "Be mine forever."

Orchid — magnificance and beauty — "You are too beautiful for words."

Pansy — desirable and worthy "Please let me love you."

Periwinkle — sweet memories — "I'll always remember you."

Rose (red) desire — "I love you, I want you."

Rose (red) — joy — "Our love is perfect happiness."

Rose (white)— charm and innocence — "You are so pure and lovely."

Rose (yellow) — insincere — "I know you don't love me."

YOUR HUSBAND...
May Be This Man
Your husband, or some other man in your family or neighborhood may be just the fellow we are looking for.
Chances are he has a good position now and isn't even thinking of changing. But if he's the right man, we believe he could be interested in the opportunity we have to offer.
We need a man who would enjoy helping folks in small towns and rural communities own a home of their own, or a camp house on their favorite lake.
It's an honest, interesting, uplifting sales career for a conscientious man. No overnight trips, but it does take some night calls to make big money.

Shady Areas Need Plants

By AUDREY H. DAWSON

If you, Mrs. Gardener, have shady areas in the home grounds and need plants, consider some of these on your next trip to the nursery for small plants and bulbs: Acuba, Plumbago, Caladium, Aspadistra, Ferns, Weeping Lantana, Anemone, Vinca, Violets, and Columbine.

If shrubs are needed then consider: Azalea, Forysthia, Cleyera Japonica, Fatsia, Bottle brush, Yucca, Hydrangea, Camellia, Nandina and Japanese Yew. They will grow in sun or shade.

Ground covers are excellent to use in these areas especially if mowing is difficult, you may consider English Ivy, Ground Ivy, Ferns, Thrift, Vinca, Minor and Confederate Jasmine, Monkey grass, Ajuga, Liriope will grow in sun or shade.

This month is an excellent time to prune your evergreen ornamentals. Shrubs that flower or bloom on new wood such as crape myrtle, can also be pruned. However, the majority of spring flowering plants should not be pruned until after flowering. Do not destroy the natural form of plants when pruning. Remove excess wood from the plants by a thinning operation. This is especially important with shrubs like nandina, spirea, jasmine and flowering quince. Cutting back these shrubs will destroy the natural form. The same plants will become tall, leggy, and unattractive, if not pruned properly.

WASHABILITY

How washable are stretch fabrics, is a question asked by many homemakers. There are many versions and types of stretch fabrics, and in all instances some chemicals or chemical treatments are involved. In general, washability is good, but it does vary with the type or make. So, Mrs. Consumer, be sure to check labels and hang tags and follow the specific directions of each manufacturer for best results. If the stretch fabric is washable the following is almost the universal pattern: Use warm water up to 130 degrees F but not extra hot water; use mild, known quality soaps and detergents and avoid chlorine bleach of any kind. It does not improve the appearance and may, in most cases, cause a chemical reaction resulting in discoloration. The lighter weight fabrics, lingerie with trimming or decorations, foundation garments and bras should be hand laundered and dried away from heat. Heavier, more stable garments, may be machine washed and tumble dried, if reasonable care and moderate temperatures are used.

SPACE FOODS

Some of our foods sound like wonder foods, they are known as space age foods which are processed by a method called freeze-drying. This method has been used by the military for 25 years, but consumer products are just beginning to appear on the market. Many consumers have been buying and serving freeze dried foods without being aware of it, because these foods are ingredients in mixes such as those for soups, entries, gravies and sauces. Dried soups mixes have pieces of freeze-dried chicken and beef in them. When cooked with water these rehydrate to their original state. A handful of powdery, artificial looking strawberries, light as cotton balls become a bountiful of plump red berries when water is added. When liquid is added, a brown patty with the appearance of pressed sawdust becomes a juicy, ready-to-brown pork chop. Yes all of this to you, Mrs. Consumer, sounds like wonder foods. But projections into the future indicate that this method of food processing by 1970 will show 58 million pounds of poultry sold in the U. S. will be freeze-dried.

A THOUGHT

A shoulder loaded with responsibilities has no room for a chip.

Here's The Answer

By ANDY LANG
AP Newsfeatures

QUESTION: Our house is five years old. It has asbestos siding and is well insulated. Yet we are troubled by sweating windows, walls, etc. What is causing this and what can we do about it?

ANSWER: Your letter was selected because it is so typical of a large number of recent queries. Sweating is condensation caused by warm, moist air hitting a cool surface. It is a condition prevalent during these days of "tight" houses and was not common many years ago when most homes had enough small openings to permit this air to escape. Also, years ago there were not so many home appliances producing moisture.

To prevent condensation, therefore, you have to find ways to get the moisture out of the house or, at least, trap it and then get rid of it. This latter method involves the use of either a chemical or electric dehumidifier. As for letting the moisture move out of the house by itself, exhaust fans in strategic locations (the kitchen, bathroom and laundry) help it on its way. In less severe conditions, opening a window for a short period of time may do the trick. When this is impractical, vents in the windows or outside walls often are used.

Incidentally, when a wall sweats, it nearly always is an outside wall, which naturally develops a cooler surface than an inside wall on a cold day. Here's how you can prove to yourself that condensation can be eliminated quickly. If there is sweating in a particular room, open an outside door or a window to that room, shut the door and go out of the room for about half an hour. The condensation will be gone.

POPULAR RECORDS

The Firehouse Five Plus Two can offer much entertainment to those who do not take jazz too seriously.

For the last 15 years the rollicking septet, formed by artists and other amateur musicians at Walt Disney's studio, practically has been setting record players on fire with their wild Dixie beat.

Their latest recording, "Firehouse Five Plus Two Goes to a Fire," (Good Time Jazz M 12052) is no departure from their style and thus it stimulates sole-tapping.

The title of the album reflects the numbers, such as "Keep the Home Fires Burning," "Fireman, Save My Child," and "I Don't Want to Set the World On Fire."

Pete Fountain gets off some good blackstick licks on "Pete's Place" (Coral CRL 757453), which was recorded at his New Orleans gin mill. Fountain's combo does not have the seemingly essential trumpet or cornet and it does have an intruding set of vibes but nevertheless it plays in the true New Orleans spirit. Pete shines especially on such standards as "That's a Plenty" and "Tin Roof Blues."

And for the old times' sake, RCA Victor has reproduced electronically a stereo playback of some sides Satchmo made many years ago. "In the 30's, In the '40's" by Louis Armstrong (RCA Victor LSP-2971) shows off Satch's fine work on "I've Got the World on a String," "Sweet Sue" and others.

Selected Singles — "Lorna's Here" by Kay Starr (Capitol 5328), "Candy Apple Red" by Stan Hitchcock (Epic 5-9733), "Boom Boom" by The Animals (MGM K13298), "Do it Right" by Brook Benton (Mercury 72365).

LP's of the Week — "Michael Dees Sings Steve Allen" (Dot DLP 3608). Another Steve Allen discovery returns the compliment to his benefactor by singing a dozen of Steve's songs. It all goes to show that Dees is a promising singer and Allen is a top - notch composer. "Rhythms of the South" by Edmondo Ros and His Orchestra (London SP 44054) will delight sound buffs. Ros plays some of the most tuneful south of the Border numbers in London's provocative Phase 4 sound and the combination makes interesting listening. Great for dancing. "Modern Country" by Kai Winding with the Anita Kerr Singers (Verve V-V6-8602). One of modern jazz's most notable trombonists sashays hillbilly music in 1964-65 style.

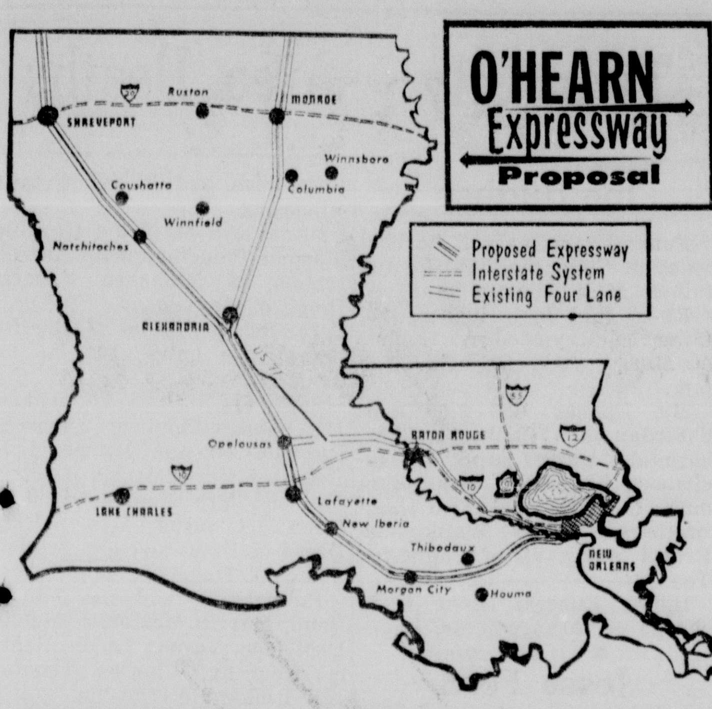
Monroe-Alexandria Super Highway Proposal Outlined



PROPOSED TOLL ROADS for Louisiana would begin at the Arkansas line north of Monroe and extend south to Alexandria with another arm to begin north of Shreveport and extend south to Alexandria. At Alexandria the two arms would merge and the expressway run south to New Orleans.

A multi-lane, super highway system from Monroe to Alexandria to link up with the proposed toll expressway from Shreveport to New Orleans was termed "highly probable" Saturday by State Representative Taylor O'Hearn of Caddo Parish.

"We feel that in all probability that when the Shreveport-New Orleans toll road is completed, enough traffic would justify the northeast Louisiana toll system," O'Hearn said in an address to local citizens at the Ouachita Parish Public Library.

The O'Hearn proposal calls for the expressway to begin at the Arkansas line north of Monroe, extend through Monroe and Columbia, to Alexandria. Another arm of the expressway would begin at the Arkansas line north of Shreveport and extend south through Shreveport and Natchitoches to Alexandria.

At Alexandria the two arms would merge and run south through Opelousas, Lafayette, New Iberia, Morgan City and south of Houma on to New Orleans.

"These proposed super highways are necessary for the development of Louisiana," O'Hearn said.

It is possible that both highways would be taken into an interstate system between the time construction begins and is completed.

"We — the governor and all concerned — are working for this through our representation in Washington," he said.

He said it was "in the realm of possibility" that the northeast arm through Monroe would link up with Interstate 29. He said Arkansas officials are working to get I-29 from Kansas City through that state.

It is hoped that the Shreveport-New Orleans expressway would eventually be linked up with I-35, which will run from Seattle, Wash. through Denver, Colo. and Oklahoma City to Shreveport.

Both proposed expressways would be toll until the indebtedness is retired, according to O'Hearn, unless linked with an interstate system and assumed by the Bureau of Public Roads. If and when taken into an interstate system, they can be either operated as toll roads or not.

The expressways would consist of all new highway and old roads would only be used for service or access. All other state highway systems would by maintained in good condition, he said, because the expressways would be built to be self-sustaining.

He said a great deal of industry would locate along the system, basing this assumption on studies which proved expressways attract industry.

There would also be a savings to people who use heavy equipment because distances between major cities would be cut.

The proposed speed limit would be 75 miles per hour.

O'Hearn also disclosed that at a meeting with Gov. McKeithen Friday it was decided to take the Shreveport-New Orleans super highway south, rather than north, of Houma to Larose and intersect with a proposed expressway at Westwego.

He said that in all possibility the feasibility study for the Shreveport-New Orleans system would be completed by June. If approval is given, and he said there is every reason to think it will be, bonds would be sold by the end of this year. "We should be riding on it in four years from time construction begins."

This arm of the expressway would be approximately 340 miles in length and cost about $325 million, without the proposed Mississippi River bridge at Chalmette.

Quake Shatters Iranian Villages Buried In Snow

TEHRAN, Iran (AP) — An earthquake has wrecked 20 villages — most of them snowbound — in the Bostanabad area 180 miles northwest of Tehran, according to official reports reaching here Saturday.

Five persons were reported killed and 820 made homeless Wednesday night when about half of the houses in the villages collapsed.

The government is rushing aid, but snow blanketing the area and freezing weather have made communications almost impossible.

Michigan Prison Stops Censoring Inmates' Letters

JACKSON, Mich. (AP) — Effective Monday, general mail going to and emanating from inmates at Southern Michigan Prison will be uncensored — but don't try to mail in a hacksaw blade.

Warden George A. Kropp said the decision to stop censorship was made by the State Corrections Department. Kropp said censorship produced too few leads on possible trouble and tied up too large a staff.

To safeguard against contraband in prisoners' mail, guards will open all packages and letters — but the contents of letters will remain unread.

Stocks Take Sharp Loss During Week

NEW YORK (AP)—Upset by news of widening hostilities in Vivet Nam, the stock market last week took its sharpest loss since last November.

Retaliatory measures taken by United States and South Viet Nam forces led many investors to fear that the fighting would escalate into a major struggle.

The result was a typical "war-scare" market with most of the list taking sharp losses while aerospace defense stocks rallied on prospects of the nation beefing up its weaponry.

It was by no means a down market all week, however, as prices showed a continual resilience. Two of the five trading days represented advances, the other three being losses.

On Wednesday stocks reacted to the Communist blast of a U.S. enlisted man's hotel in Viet Nam, with a heavy death toll. On that day volume swelled to 7.23 million shares, the heaviest since Nov. 26, 1963 when 9.23 million shares changed hands.

The Associated Press average of 60 stocks last week declined 4.5 to 332.7 in the sharpest slide since the week ended last Nov. 28 when it fell 4.7. That was the week when the British bank rate and the Federal Reserve discount rate were boosted, leading to fears of tighter interest rates all around.

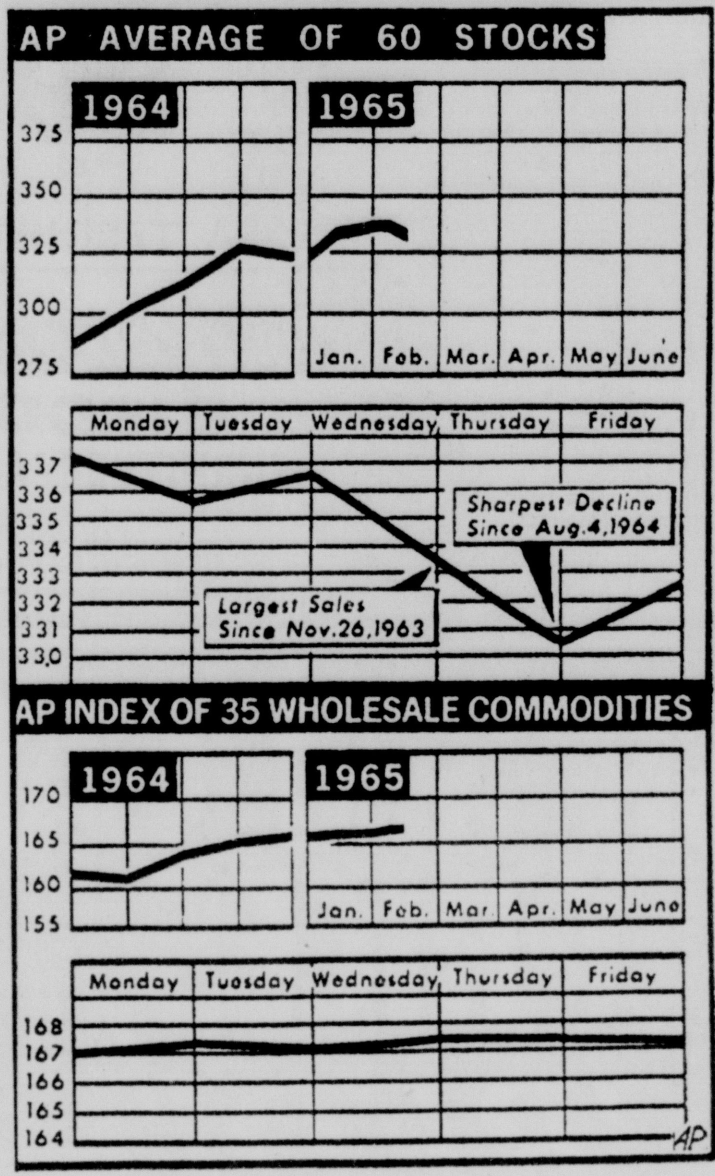
The Dow Jones industrial average last week fell 13.10 to 888.47. The Dow industrials had fallen well below the "magic" 900 level which they scaled recently. Some analysts opined that the list would probably find a "support level" anywhere between 860 and 880.

Gold mining stocks also joined in a rally Friday because of the decline in U.S. gold holdings to their lowest level since March 8, 1939.

Volume for the week was 29,694,710 shares compared with 29,231,820 the previous week. Of 1,538 issues traded last week, 871 declined and 490 advanced.

Losses by some of the outstanding blue chips were chiefly response for the sharp decline in the averages.

On the New York Stock Exchange, corporate bond volume for the week totaled $59.99 million par value, up sharply from the $45.37 million the week before.



THE ASSOCIATED Press average of 60 stocks declined sharply the past week to 332.7 from 337.2 a week earlier as shown in chart above. Led by food, the commodity index advanced for the third consecutive week, closing Friday at 167.2 from 167.0 in the preceding period. (AP Wirephoto Chart)

Smith County Wildcat Well Is Deepened

JACKSON, Miss. (AP) — Pan American Petroleum Corp. drilled Saturday below 16,225 feet in its Smith County wildcat, the Sorey No. 1, sec. 27-4n-8e, releasing no information by operators.

The wildcat is being deepened from original contract depth of 15,500 feet to 16,500 feet in testing the Smackover lime zone.

Oil shows of undetermined commercial worth were reported logged in the Cotton Valley zone at 14,500 feet. The venture is northwest of the Bay Springs oil field.

Also in Smith County, Pan American and Larue-Smith Production Co. were below 15,400 feet in their wildcat, the Williamson No. 1, sec. 23-3n-9e, southeast of Pineville, set to be drilled to 16,500 feet to test the Smackover.

Shell Oil Co. and Pan American began drilling operations on the second well in the Bay Springs field of Jasper County. The new start is the Fender No. 1, sec. 27-2n-10e, west of the discovery well with the test to be drilled to 16,700 feet.

Deep wildcat drilling activity continues to increase with Humble Oil and Refining Co. clearing location for a 16,000 foot test in Hancock County. The venture is the Waveland Gas Unit No. 1, sec. 22-8s-15w, west of Bay St. Louis.

In Perry County, the deepest well permitted in Mississippi is below 16,300 feet and is to be drilled to a depth of 20,500 feet. The wildcat is the Phillips Petroleum Co.'s No. 1, Josephine, sec. 35-1s-10w, northeast of Wiggins.

In Rankin County, Love Petroleum, Billups and Natol Petroleum Corp. are seeking their wildcat, the Purina No. 1, sec. 6-5n-5e, as a pumping well. The venture is reported to have sabbed an unestimated amount of oil from perforations at 11,000 feet with operators releasing no information. The well is near the Pelahatchie field.

Also in Rankin County in the Pisgah oil field, California Co. drilled below 10,300 feet and was nearing contract depth in its West No. 1, sec. 23-7n-4e, with the venture to be drilled to 10,600 feet.

In the Flora field of Madison County, Ladner, Wilson, Stewart and Lloyd have completed their Anderson No. 5, sec. 1-8n-1w, pumping 165 barrels of oil per day from a sand at 4,400 feet.

SERVICEABLE

NORTHFIELD, Mass. (UPI)—Eleven of the 14 children of Mr. and Mrs. Leon Randall—10 sons and a daughter—have served in the armed forces for a total of nearly 50 years.

NEW YORK (AP) — Events arising from international strains cast a shadow during the week over prospects for the humming U. S. economy.

Most immediately disquieting was escalation of hostilities in Viet Nam. Punishing blows were struck by each side, and ominous words were spoken on the diplomatic level.

The stock market, extremely sensitive to threats of enlarged conflict, shuddered. Its basic underpinnings held firm, however.

Also troubling was new evidence of the gravity of the nation's adverse balance of international payments, which worsened markedly in the last three months of 1964.

President Johnson, seeking an answer, called for broad new voluntary measures by business corporations and banks to cut down on investing and lending abroad.

The President also asked Congress to reduce sharply the duty-free exemption for purchases abroad by tourists, lowering the limit to $50 retail value from the former $100 at wholesale price.

Businessmen generally reacted favorably, applauding the mildness and voluntary aspect of the program, but some questioned if it would do the job. The United States sent abroad last year $3 billion more than it received from other countries.

Domestically, the brightest spots in the business picture were contributed by the booming auto industry, and new reports of record 1964 profits, dividend increases and capital spending plans.

Chrysler Corp., the only Big Three car builder to avoid a major strike last fall unveiled the highest earnings in company history, $213.8 million in 1964 as against $161.6 million in 1963.

Meantime, on the heels of record sales in January, automen stepped up production schedules slightly, assuring a third consecutive month of 800,000-plus assemblies. The 206,000 car output slated this week was 25 per cent ahead of the year-earlier pace.

On the minus side of the ledger, the government reported a 1 per cent decline in retail sales in January, steel production dipped a first time in six weeks and the dock strike paralyzing shipping on the Atlantic and Gulf coasts dragged on without sign of imminent end.

President Johnson named a three-man panel to attempt a solution of the problem. The jam-up at ports showed up as a factor in declining railroad freight shipments.

Returns from the widely watched election for president of the United Steelworkers Union left it unclear late in the week whether I. W. Abel, secretary-treasurer, had upset incumbent President David J. McDonald.

Prolonged indecision, with possible litigation over the outcome, was viewed as complicating the problem of achieving an early new wage contract settlement in the industry.

The Council of Economic Advisers to President Johnson, in a January report, called the steel situation the most serious visible menace to further uninterrupted expansion of the economy through 1965.

Along with new curbs on duty-free purchases by tourists abroad and voluntary steps by business, the President invoked his power to clamp a special tax on U. S. bank loans abroad and other long-term private credit.

And he urged Congress to extend for another two years the penalty tax of up to 15 per cent on purchases of foreign stocks and bonds and to enact tax law changes to promote foreign investment in the United States.

A high-ranking government official, at a press briefing, hinted that while the White House spoke softly a big stick lurked in the background.

"If voluntary programs don't work, some other means will have to be found and that will probably be less agreeable," the official said.

Billions Added To Economy By Wholesalers

WASHINGTON, D.C. (Special) — Wholesalers produced an estimated $26.2 billion in value added to merchandise they distributed in 1963, according to a recently completed survey by the U. S. Bureau of the Census. The results of the first annual survey were announced by John Albright, Chief, Wholesale Trade Division of the Bureau, during the recent Annual Meeting of the National Association of Wholesalers.

Albright explained that the term "value added" means the value that wholesalers and distributors add to merchandise between the time of purchase and the time and place of sale.

"Results of the study," Albright said, "show that for merchant wholesalers as a group, $17.20 of every $100 of sales represented approximate value added by them." Based upon the $163 billion Census estimate of wholesalers' sales in 1964, 'approximate value added' aggregated $28 billion last year.

Soybean Futures Prices Bob On Board Of Trade

CHICAGO (AP)—Soybean futures prices bobbed wildly on the Board of Trade last week, soaring to new seasonal highs and then plunging as much as 15¾ cents a bushel at the low mark.

The old crop contracts took their steepest nose-dive in 16 months Tuesday, falling, the daily permissible limit of 10 cents a bushel by midsession and closing at the bottom with no offers to buy.

All soybean futures contracts ended the week lower. The decline extended to wheat and oats, but corn and rye futures held up fairly well.

The sharp drop was attributed to a technical overbought condition in the market caused by wide price swings Monday and a series of news developments which traders regarded as bearish.

Old crop contracts in soybeans and corn hit their seasonal highs Monday in a reaction to the first American air strike against targets in North Viet Nam.

Brokers reasoned that if the military situation in Southeast Asia became more critical some consumers and dealers would begin stockpiling commodities causing a scarcity and price rise.

Soybean futures closed the week 1¼ to 10¼ cents a bushel lower than the previous Friday, March $3.00¾-½; wheat was ½ to 1½ lower, March $1.49½; corn was ½ higher to ⅝ lower, March $1.28; oats ⅝ to 1½ lower, March 69⅜-¼ cents, and rye was unchanged to ⅝ higher, March $1.21½.

ELECTION PREDICTED

LONDON (UPI) — Conservative member of Parliament John Boyd-Carpenter predicted Saturday that Prime Minister Harold Wilson would call a general election this spring to increase the majority of his beleaguered Labor government.

"By the autumn," Boyd-Carpenter said, "so many chickens will have come home to roost that Whitehall will look like a broiler house."

Production Of Crude Oil Sets Record

HOUSTON, Tex. (AP) — More crude oil has been produced in the United States since Jan. 1 than in any comparable period in history.

Production in each of the past five weeks toppled records that had stood since the Suez Canal crisis of 1957.

Much productive capacity still is idle but last week's output broke the 7,900,000 mark the first time, averaging 7,903,460 barrels a day.

This gave the domestic industry a four-week record daily average output of 7,848,810 barrels.

The previous record averages set during the Suez emergency stood nearly eight years as domestic producers battled a world-wide crude oil surplus that still exists.

Prior to the first week of 1965, domestic production had exceeded 7,800,000 only once—averaging 7,818,400 barrels a day the week ending March 22, 1957. This led to a four-week record of 7,800,000 for that month.

While the Suez Canal was closed, United States producers boosted output from 6,981,000 to the record 7,818,400 barrels a day while rushing oil to western Europe.

Once the canal reopened, however, domestic production declined rapidly until it hit a low point of 6,220,385 barrels a day in mid-1958.

The comeback has been gradual.

In addition to the world surplus, factors aggravating the comeback have included a lower annual growth race for domestic demand for petroleum products, increased oil imports, greater demand for natural gas, and a sharp increase in the production of natural gas liquids.

Domestic production averaged a record 7,170,000 barrels a day in 1957 but dropped to 6,710,000 in 1956. The average climbed back to 7,053,000 in 1959 but slipped to 7,035,000 in 1960.

The gradual comeback, however, has produced record daily averages the past four years — 7,183,000 in 1961, 7,332,000 in 1962, 7,542,000 in 1963, and 7,657,000 in 1964.

January - February averages indicate 1965 will be another record year, possibly with an average in excess of 7,825,000 barrels a day. Production normally drops in the summer months as refiners start placing greater emphasis on processing winter heating fuel oils.

Barring a slump in the general economy, a 1965 average of about 7,825,000 would place the industry in excellent position to break the 8,000,000 barrels a day mark in 1966.

The gradual comeback in domestic output has been paced by a steady growth in Louisiana production.

Louisiana was producing a record 970,200 barrels a day when the first bombs fell on the Suez. This was increased to 1,019,600 in March, 1957, before the industry's 1958 recession forced a cutback to 811,850 barrels a day.

Louisiana's steady growth since 1958, however, led to a record production of 1,621,000 barrels a day last week.

Texas paced the Suez buildup but still is far short of the record 3,333,000 barrels a day set in March, 1957.

Texas output dropped to a low of 2,198,000 barrels in 1958. Last week's average was only 2,806,000 but it was the highest since the end of the Suez emergency.

Interstate 29 Monroe Routing Hopes Are Held

James W. Moore, vice chairman of the Louisiana Board of Highways and Fifth District Commissioner, when questioned Saturday about the proposed expressways system, stated "there are high hopes in this area that Interstate 29 would be routed from Kansas City, Mo. through Monroe to New Orleans."

He said that this would not be a toll road.

The I-29 route would start in Kansas City and run through Springfield, Mo., Little Rock and Pine Bluff, Ark., the Monroe area and, by way of Baton Rouge, to New Orleans.

Moore said this program has the full support of Mayor Howard of Monroe, Congressman Otto Passman of the Fifth Congressional district, Sen. Stuart Symington of Missouri, Gov. Orval Faubus of Arkansas and Clint Elliott of Pine Bluff, member of I-29 highway committee.

He said citizens along this Missouri - Arkansas - Louisiana route of the proposed I-29 north-south route were most interested in seeing this link of the interstate highway system serving the great west bank of the Mississippi River from Kansas City to New Orleans.

Moore further stated that he has conferred with highway officials in Louisiana and Arkansas and there was "a lot of sympathy toward locating this this suggested route."

Moore stated that people in eastern Louisiana have no objection to the toll road from Shreveport to New Orleans and that they give their full support to this project, but he hastened to add that I-29 is a separate project from the toll road and is a part of the new proposed north-south interstate system.

BATON ROUGE (AP)—President T. N. Armistead of the state Board of Health said Saturday he will hold a closed meeting Monday with officials of 23 parishes in the New Orleans area to discuss compliance with the Civil Rights Act.

Armistead said he will sign the compliance agreement for the Board of Health for these reasons:

—To continue the public health services the agency renders to the state.

—The federal contribution to the board's programs and services is $3 million in the board's total annual budget of $10 million.

TALK ABOUT ABSENT — MINDED

TAMPA, Fla. (AP) — It was Saturday night, and the young man who called the Tampa Tribune society department was desperate.

He said he knew it sounded crazy, but he was due at that moment at a church to be married, only he couldn't remember which church. He said he knew the Tribune had been given the details of the wedding for a story in Sunday's edition.

The society staffer called makeup man John Petersen in the Tribune composing room. Petersen found the story. The staffer passed along to the young man the name of the church.

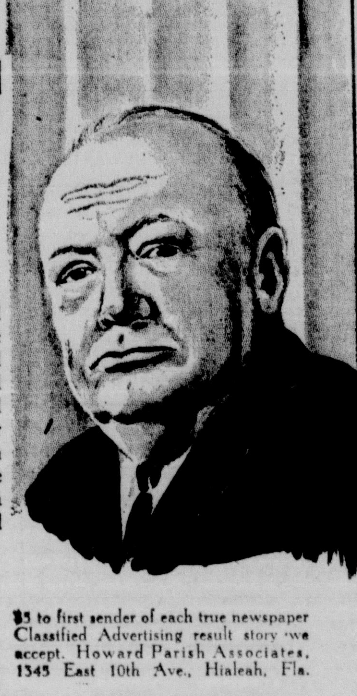
Winston Churchill Found Treasured Malacca Cane With Want Ad



"Lost" said the Want Ad placed by Clementine Churchill in the London Times "a gold-headed malacca cane . . . Mr. Churchill has taken an almost identical cane, but since this has neither the name nor the address upon it he is unable to return it". The day the ad appeared, the cane (a gift from Edward VII) was found . . . but in Germany.

HELP FOR HOMEMAKERS

DEAR HELOISE:

I wash my wooden salad bowls quickly in detergent suds, rinse them well and let them dry thoroughly.

After they are completely dry I cover the entire surface of the bowls with a heavy coat of olive oil and let them sit overnight.

The next day I take a soft cloth and wipe off any excess oil. This brings back the beautiful deep color of the bowls.

The heavy oil soaks into the wood, filling up the pores, so that the next time I use the bowls the vinegar does not penetrate into the wood.

Hally

* * *

It's true. I found it better to warm the olive oil slightly before rubbing it on the bowls. The thinner it is, the deeper it soaks into the grain of the wood.

Heloise

DOORKNOB COVERS

DEAR HELOISE:

I crochet little caps for our doorknobs and find that it is easy to turn the knob with damp hands. The caps can be washed easily and replaced. They also protect the wall in case a door slams against it too hard.

Anna Stone

BARBECUE FIRES

DEAR HELOISE:

If you buy your milk in cartons, try washing them out and setting them aside to dry.

The next time you go on a picnic, fill them up with your charcoal briquettes! Not only will the wax in the milk carton start the fire beautifully, but one carton may be set upright in the center and your lighter fuel poured down into this. Lay two or three cartons alongside one another and watch them start blazing.

Besides, your hands aren't dirty when it comes time to cook those hamburgers and wieners!

Albert the Third

RIBBON WRAP-AROUND

DEAR HELOISE:

After washing my little girl's hair ribbons, I wrap them around a glass jar while they are still wet and smooth them gently.

Any round, smooth jar will do, regardless of size.

I then pour hot water in the jar and put a lid on it. The reason for the lid on the jar is that the heat from the water dries them in a jiffy and the water stays hot longer for quicker drying. This will also work without the water, but the drying time will be longer.

Mrs. L. A. Virtue

PERFECT POTATOES

DEAR HELOISE:

When boiling potatoes, use your French-fry basket! When the potatoes are done, they can be lifted out of the water easily without the danger of being scalded or steam-burned.

And, Heloise, tell the ladies to use some of the potato water in their gravy. There are too many vitamins there to just pour down the drain.

Mrs. Ruben Jones

COOKBOOK CARE

DEAR HELOISE:

I use heavy plastic to make book covers to put over the paper jackets of my best cookbooks. They can then be handled and laid on the kitchen counters without fear of damage.

Also, if a piece of plastic the width of a double page is taped to the inside of the back cover, it can be used as a flap and folded back over the open page. Then one need not worry about splatters from beaters, etc., when cooking.

Lois Kline

[illegible]

DEAR HELOISE:

I had a problem keeping my three-year-old son's white shirttail in his trousers.

So . . . one day I sat down at my sewing machine and added an extra length (from an old sheet) shaped like the ends of a man's shirt.

Now, no more shirttails hanging out!

Mrs. Kyle W. Whiteley

OLD BOBBY SOCKS

DEAR HELOISE:

The heavy cable tops of children's old bobby socks make excellent wristlets and anklets for lengthening or repairing pajamas, sweaters, jackets, etc. They may be left either white, or dyed to match.

Mrs. W. H. Knox

PUT-UP JOB

DEAR HELOISE:

Instead of pasting labels on my jams and jellies or using a felt marker, I mark the contents and date on the tin sealing lid with a grease pencil.

One always throws away the top anyway. By marking the lid instead of putting a label on the side of the jar I save a clean-up job later.

We old ladies may as well save as much energy as we can, don't you think?

Aimee McDonough

* * *

You can say that again, Aimee. And again . . . and again. . . .

Heloise

MACHINE CLEANER

DEAR HELOISE:

Did you ever try to clean your sewing machine or typewriter with the blower end of your vacuum cleaner? This method works perfectly.

Doe Grant

We did clean our typewriter by this method. It works. The repairman uses this same method.

I also tried it on my sewing machine. It works beautifully. Sure saves digging the old lint out with a pair of tweezers, eh?

Heloise

OPEN AND SHUT CASE

DEAR HELOISE:

Here is an idea which I put into effect not long ago. It is so simple that I can't see why the manufacturers don't do it!

Over the years I had always pulled the wrong cord to open and close the drapes and the Venetian blinds.

The remedy: Paint the closing tassel black (associated with darkness) and leave the opening tassel as is . . . usually a cream color (associated with light).

G. W. P.

SCRUB-A-DUB-DUB

DEAR HELOISE:

When I scrub my toddler in the bathtub, I sit on the small stool he stands on when he is at the sink. It certainly saves my knees and back.
